Fighting ships of the Canadian and the Royal Navy escorted the squadron of liners across the Atlantic. Before they sailed, ships first sped out of this harbor to search the Atlantic approach to the port for enemy submarines or mines.

Convoy Well Guarded

Then, at a prearranged hour, the transports hauled away from the pier one by one and steamed away. Battleships, cruisers and destroyers precede them. Bombers and fighter planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force darted back and forth overhead, some going far out to sea to assist in the reconnaissance for German craft.

On the ships, soldiers packed the shore-side rails, cheering, waving and singing. Some had climbed the rigging halfway to the crow's nests to shout their farewells to Canada.

Watchers on the dock were restricted to a handful. Only three or four women and a couple of dozen men were on hand when this continent of the first division severed its last link with home.

GIRL MUST KEEP AWAY FROM SHIP CREW

Vancouver, Feb. 8 (CP)—Maureen Parry, pretty English girl whose accomplishments include a bicycle trip across Canada, is getting ready to return home as the only woman aboard a Greek freighter. Toting a 74-pound pack, Maureen tried to get a job as stoker aboard the vessel when she heard that some of the crew had refused to sail because of the hazards of war. She didn't get the job, but the Master of the freighter agreed to grant her free passage if she signed a pledge to keep aloof from every male on board.

Drunken German Officers Shoot 70 Polish Prisoners

New Reports of Nazi Atrocities Show No Signs of Easing Up of Fearful Treatment

BOYS KILLED

Manchester, England, Feb. 8—(CP)—The Manchester Guardian, declaring "there is not the slightest sign that the terror is coming to an end", today published new reports of Nazi atrocities in Poland.

"All indications are," it declared, "that the Germans mean to stamp out all Polish civil, cultural and religious life.

"At Burzo, near Gdynia, unknown persons broke a window in the police station. The Germans arrested fifty Polish schoolboys and ordered their parents to flog them publicly. Ten of the boys were then shot and the bodies exposed for twenty-four hours.

"At Inowroclaw a number of German officers who had been drinking heavily entered the prison and shot seventy Polish prisoners.

"There are thousands of Polish men and women in concentration camps, where they endure fearful treatment. It is estimated that there are 3,000 in the camp at Gdynia, 5,000 at Torun and 3,000 at Pozman. Many poles have been sent to concentration camps in Germany.

"Some observers put the total number of persons who have perished in Poland at several millions but it is impossible to arrive at any sure estimate.

Fifty Publicly Executed

"Close on fifty persons were publicly executed at Korsian. At Zablocki fourteen Polish workmen and the local priest were shot.

"Among the Poles shot at Bydgoszcz were one hundred and thirty-six students, some of whom were only twelve and thirteen years old.

"At Wolsztyn a number of Poles were shot at night-time in the glare of searchlights. The inhabitants were awakened to witness the execution.

"Sixteen persons were shot at Kornik. The mayor, a man of 70, who was unable to walk was pushed into a pit where the victims had been heaped up and was then killed with a revolver bullet.

"All Poles who were prominent in the Civil life of Gdynia have been shot. Three hundred and fifty were arrested and taken to Wejherewo, near Danzig, where about 300 were shot. Many shouted 'Poland forever!' as they faced the German firing squads."

Dr. Maresch, Austrian Refugee, Gives Talk on Hitler and German People

Tyrannies of Present Regime Keep German People Ground Down and Ignorant of Outside News States Lecturer in Address to Study Club

HAVE NO FREEDOM

Speaking under the auspices of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club last night, Dr. Richard A. R. Maresch of Pickering College, Newmarket, and late of Austria, told a crowded assembly in the auditorium of the Belleville Collegiate of almost unbelievable hardships and atrocities being suffered by the people of Central Europe now subjected to the tyrannies of the Hitler regime.

P. C. MacLaurin, acting as chairman and in introducing Dr. Maresch, stated that "we are indeed fortunate in having such a distinguished lecturer address the local Club. When I realized the wide experience of Dr. Maresch, it was with a feeling of awe that I approached him in regards to coming to Belleville to speak to our gathering, but fortunately," laughed Mr. MacLaurin, "there was one common interest between us that gave me fortitude—he, too, was at the head of a school." After the illuminating lecture by Dr. Maresch, Mr. MacLaurin expressed appreciation of the Club members, inviting all to attend a social hour and reception being held in the school library.

Vast Spy System of Nazis

The topic of the address given by Dr. Maresch was "Nazi Germany from the Inside" and he told how, through a vast system of spying, by dire threats to the populace and by strict censorship of all communication, the German Propaganda Minister was able to prevent the real "truth" from getting out of Germany. A native born Austrian, Dr. Maresch said that when he left his homeland about one year ago, he was entreated by his fellow-countrymen to let the world know what was going on in Austria since Germany annexed the country to the Reichland. Tell facts, not stories they asked him and that is what he has been trying to do.

Austrians Opposed to Germans

Austrians have always been opposed to the German, told Dr. Maresch. The Austrian people are Christians, they like fine arts and are Monarchists. Germans love discipline and above all, are Nationalists. Hitler is vastly over-rated, he is ignorant, although a magnificent psychologist. It is interesting to know that at the age of seventeen Hitler declared he knew nothing and then after only four years of study he declared that he was finished and had no use for more education.

Hitler Most Ferocious of Dictators

"The first characteristic of the German people is to believe blindly in their leaders, what they say is right and this characteristic is evident even in their literature. Centuries ago there was no Germany and the country was inhabited by Slavs who were the fore-runners of the present Prussians. It is the Prussian belief that they are superior to any nation and they naturally lead the Germanic people. In 1870-71 they started their conquest for world domination and were stunned by their defeat in the last Great War. It was impossible, it couldn't be so, they thought, and when Hitler came into the limelight he told them that they had been betrayed, cheated. Hitler became the idealist of the Prussian army, but from idealist he has become the most ferocious of dictators.

Austrians Saw Dangers

"Years ago the Austrians saw the designs of the Germans, and the Allies played right into their hands at the close of the last Great War when they broke Europe up into small nations, later to fall prey to the ruthless onslaught of the present German regime. The Austrians pleaded with the Allies not to allow Hitler to get strong but their pleas went unheeded and Austrian and Sudetenland were soon in his arms. Austrians and Sudetenlanders spoke the same language declared Hitler, then why should they not belong to Germany? In the light of Hitler's idea it would be just as reasonable for the United States to say to England the same thing and demand that she come under the Stars and Stripes.

200,00 in German Concentration Camps

Dr. Maresch explained why letters sent from Germany to the outside were full of praise for Hitler. It is because Hitler does away with men who hate him, it is the fear of Hitler and the concentration camps that keep people from telling the truth about Germany. There are 200,000 people in concentration camps in Germany and Hitler would retaliate on these people if the outside world was told the truth. Whatever we have heard of German atrocities is an understatement declared Dr. Maresch. Hitler claims to have made the German people united and that they trust and follow him like one man, but he is wrong. Fully seventy-five percent of the Austrians were opposed to the union with Germany.

Gestapo Control

"It is through a vast spy system that Hitler forces allegiance from the German people. So great is this system that you do not know who, even in your own family, might be a spy. Often the question is asked, why do the Germans not rise in rebellion, but this is not possible because of their mode of living. In Germany people live in great apartment houses and the janitor keeps track of all visitors. If more than the normal number of visitors are received, suddenly the police will swoop down and everyone will be arrested. Sometimes they return, sometimes not, and if questions are asked, people just shrug their shoulders. They are afraid to speak. Mails are censured and telephones are tapped.

Attempt on Hitler's Life Not Faked

"The report that the recent attempt on Hitler's life was faked was wrong, said Dr. Maresch. It was not faked but was carried through with deadly intent and the reason it failed was because the one who fired it was not in building and had no means of knowing when Hitler was leaving. In the first war there was no attempt made on the life of the Kaiser, but already there has been one attempt on Hitler's life and there will be more.

"The only way to learn the actual conditions in Germany is to live there. Rationing started in 1933, but visitors who travel through the country got everything they wanted in the line of food, and thus were given a good impression of the country. You must take up your own residence to learn the facts," he stated. "Sixty percent of the German children are undernourished and will be unfit for military service."

When Hitler assumed power he promised liberation from paying war reparations and also promised to free them from the International financiers. When Germans started hording money it was declared sabotage by Mr. Goering, "the fat fellow," and Devalution was threatened. As a result tourists saw Germans spending money freely and thought "what a wonderful country". But the truth is that a German cannot bank his money with safety, he cannot send it out of the country, he cannot buy foreign securities or foreign currency. Prior to the last war Germany was the richest nation and still is a rich nation, but sixty percent of the wealth is going for armaments, thirty percent for propaganda and no populace can live on the remaining ten percent.

Foresees Revolution in Germany

"Hitler claims to have made the Germans a model people but he has nothing but rogues and thieves for his officials. It is only people who follow blindly that get high positions in Germany and they are given immunity, power and no pay, only twelve cents per day. Revolution will come in Germany and the present war will bring it about. Germany has no oil, very little mineral wealth and is lacking in food, while the Allies have everything and also they have the greatest cause—Christianity. Love your freedom as we Austrians have done and then you will learn that there is nothing more noble than to lay down your life in a crusade of Christianity."

"Do not hate the Germans, said Dr. Maresch in conclusion, the last war ended in hatred and accomplished nothing. Go over to love these people and teach them freedom, they never have known what freedom is.

Eagle Nearly Wrecks Passenger Plane

Melbourne, Australia, Feb. 8—(CP)—A collision between an eagle and a plane carrying 13 persons today caused the plane to take fire and make a forced landing. No one except the eagle was injured. The bird struck one of the motors, knocking it loose and causing a fire to break out.

FINGERS LACERATED BY FALLING WOOD

While handling a load of wood near his home, Clarence Clarke, Station Post Office, sustained badly lacerated fingers yesterday. Clarke was removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. G. H. Stobie attended. No amputations were necessary, although two of the fingers were badly lacerated. A large stick of wood fell and pinned Clarke's hand as he was unloading cord wood.

Ki-Y League

The "Supermen" still continue to hold the upper hand in the Ki-Y Midget series hockey wars and yesterday proved what it was all about when they whitewashed the "Scrappers" of the same league over at the Hume Arena to the tune of 4-0. Campbell, Belnap, McIntyre and Hannah were the scorers for the winners who have yet to be defeated in the schedule.

The teams:

"Scrappers": goal, C. Shortt; defence, Quince and Parsons; centre, Cort; wings, Semark and Ashley; subs, Brods, Doyle and Snell.

"Supermen": goal, Wardhaugh; defence, Campbell and McIntyre; centre, Hanna; wings, Turner and Coleman; subs, Belnap and Ostrom.

CY WENTWORTH AND MARTY BARRY GIVEN RELEASES

CENTRES FIRST LINE

Wentworth Will Retire, While Barry May Play Out Season With Syracuse

(By The Canadian Press)

Interest along the National Hockey League front centred today on the efforts of Montreal Canadiens to revamp their line-up in a drive to obtain a playoff spot in the month and a half left on the regular schedule.

The first move was made yesterday when the management announced the release of the veterans Cy Wentworth and Marty Barry, and the signing of Smiley Meronek, an amateur centre star with Verdun Maple Leafs of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

Barry Receives Offer

Barry, one of the all-time greats of hockey, declared that he had received an offer to play with Syracuse Stars of the International-American League shortly after the announcement of his release was made public. Barry added, however that he "may be back in the N.H.L. with another team pretty soon." He refused to divulge just what club he meant.

Wentworth, on the other hand, intends to retire completely from hockey and devote his energies to a job in Toronto with a beer company. The hefty defenceman had intended to retire from the game at the end of last season but came back for another season because of the team's scarcity of defence players.

Only possible change in the standing from tonight's games involves the Wings and the Hawks. Should the Wings win and the Hawks lose the two clubs would be tied for fourth place.

LOUIS FAVORED TO WHIP GODOY

Boys "Laying it on the Line" Think it Will be in Five Rounds or Less

New York, Feb. 8 —(AP)— Boys who place their money on the line are "getting down" for plenty on tomorrow night's Joe Louis-Arturo Godoy championship fight, despite the fact the Brown Bomber is rated so highly that his next title defence already has been lined up.

Promoter Mike Jacobs broke just about all rules for fistic publicity last night in announcing that Louis' next trip to the post would be in April against Johnny Paychek, thin-haired heavyweight out of Des Moines who recently has run up quite a victory string.

"Uncle Mike" did qualify the announcement by pointing out that Louis would have to whip Godoy first, in 15 rounds or less tomorrow in Madison Square Garden.

Even the bettors, having examined the somewhat peculiar "schedule" of odds for the fight, let the 1 to 7 price on the Bomber to finish on top in his ninth title defence strictly alone, instead, they climbed aboard another item as a cinch.

This was a quotation of even money that Godoy would last five rounds. The odds-makers have rigged up a scale on just how long Arturo would be around, making him 1 to 2 to hang on for 10 and 1 to 4 to be on deck at the finish.

The fact that Arturo is a rough customer and fights low—two peculiarities Louis definitely does not enjoy in a rival punch pitcher—was what the boys and girls liked about his chances to stay.

However, it was pointed out that there was little or no betting on Godoy being victorious.

PHIL HERGE'MER

Chicago Black Hawks.

A varied and highly successful minor league puck career preceded the National League appearance of Phil Hergesheimer in the uniform of Chicago Black Hawks, as one of the cogs in Paul Thompson's rebuilding program on the Hawk machine. A right wing, he was purchased from Cleveland Barons of the International - American League last summer after leading the minor goal-scoring with the very neat total of 34. His teammate and centre on the International-American League's most dangerous line, Les Cunningham, was brought up at the same time. Both are blondes and somewhat the same in appearance if you're watching them in action from far back. Phil has been dubbed "Hergie" to get around his typewriter-torturing handle. He was born at Winnipeg and will celebrate birthday No. 26 this July 9. Played with the Falcons of his native city for a couple of seasons before signing a contract with Boston Cubs, then the Bruins' farm team. In his second season with the Cubs, he shifted to London of the International loop, the next to Minneapolis in the American Association, where he finished second in the race for individual scoring honors. His last two seasons before this one were put in at Cleveland, and in both he was top man at banging in goals.

QUINTES DEFEAT PICTON JUNIORS BY 11-1 COUNT

Seventh Straight Win for Local Juniors Without a Defeat is Record Set

Play Combination

Ethier and Storms Return to Form and Click for Four —Clare Goes Well on Defence

After being held to a tie for the initial period, the Belleville Quintes proved too powerful for the Picton Stars and raced to an 11-1 victory over the Prince Edward County kids in a junior O.H.A. fixture staged at the Hume Arena last night. The Holway-led locals fattened their scoring averages at the expense of the Picton kids as they mounted the score in combination play, only one goal being counted by the locals on an individual effort.

Sparked by some good goal-keeping on the part of both Fraser and Cook, the teams battled at an even one-all count in the initial frame. The Belleville kids proved too strong and fast for the visitors in the middle session as they rammed home five goals and added a "Callander number" again in the last canto, while Picton was held scoreless during the last 48 minutes of play. Practically every Belleville player increased his scoring average on the night's play. Kiniski, Clare, Goyer, Storms and Ethier each scored two goals, Bundy getting the off counter as the Quintes displayed an improved style or combination play.

Busiest Man In Rink.

Walt Fraser, the Picton goalie, was the busiest player in the rink and no blame for the loss can be laid to his door. Cook in the Belleville nets turned in his best effort of the year to keep the score down. Carman Wellbanks, Wannamaker, O'Neill and Hicks looked the best for the losers.

The combination of Storms and Ethier returned to form last night, as this pair combined for four of Belleville's counters. Kiniski was seen to skate in his old speedy manner, while Clare seemed more at home when moved back on the defence. Gerow and Goyer also turned in creditable efforts, as the locals carried considerably more punch than they have displayed recently.

The win marked the seventh consecutive victory chalked up by the Belleville kids in as many minor O.H.A. games played this season. They conclude their schedule in Trenton next week.

Slammin' Sam Snead Back in Golf Wars

San Antonio, Tex. Feb. 8—(AP)—Slammin' Sam Snead rejoined his wandering brethren of the winter golf trail today and despite a prolonged layoff spent in a dentist's chair became one of the favorites to win the Texas open $5,000 tournament.

The 1938 Canadian Open champion, absent on the California and Arizona jaunt, stepped on Brackenridge Park's deceptive 36-35-71 par course yesterday, rapped out a 69 and became a gallery choice to win his first Texas tourney.

But the homefolk didn't give Snead the best of the odds, many sticking to Jim Demaret, the Houston lad who won the Oakland and San Francisco tournaments.

RACE BEGINNING TO GET HOTTER IN INT.-AM. LOOP

INDIANS DRAW

Barons Cut Off Two Points of Capitals' Margin by Beating Hornets

By The Canadian Press

The race is beginning to get hot in the International - American hockey league's two sections.

A few weeks ago New Haven Eagles and Indianapolis Capitals were so far ahead in their divisions it was expected they could almost finish out the schedule in a walk and still end up in first place.

Lately, however, these clubs have fallen off the pace and now the Eagles, forced from the eastern lead by Providence Reds, are being pressed for second place while the Capitals' big margin has been sliced to eight points.

Springfield Indians, about the hottest team in the circuit at present, picked up a point in a 3-3 draw with Philadelphia last night and moved to within three points of New Haven. In western half, the champion Cleveland Barons cut two points of Indianapolis' margin by beating Pittsburgh 5-2.

Chuck Corrigan and Alf Thurrier were the big guns for the Indians, while Lude Wareing was the Ramblers' hero. Corrigan fired two goals and an assist while Thurrier had a goal and helped on both Corrigan's counters, Wareing scored twice for the Ramblers, including the tieing goal in the third period.

After two periods of close play, Cleveland broke loose with a four-goal splurge in the final session to trounce the Hornets.

Mason scored a pair of goals in quick succession in the third period to win the game for the Barons. Sherf got one back for Pittsburgh but Peg O'Neil and Earl Bartholome got two more to make the victory sure.

This bureau picks Louis in five or six.

Jack Ryder, Boston track coach: "I still think Cunningham is the most likely four minute miler of the present crop....His difficulty lies with lack of work, not his age."

Taisto Maki, the Finnish runner, is nuts about our orange juice and swing music....John Morley, the Youngstown (O.) veteran, will be named greenkeeper of the year by the Greenkeeping Superintendents' Association tonight. These unsung heroes of golf are here for their convention 1,000 strong....Walter St. Denis, ace press agent for Mike Jacobs, wasn't in Miami 48 hours until he had talked the log tracks into closing up shop for the Conn-Lesnevich fisticuffs, Feb. 28.

Godoy wound up his training for Louis by doing light setting up exercises....Some folks around here think the getting up kind would have been more like it.

The name of Percy "Punch" Bott, of Montreal, does not convey much to the average sport fan around Belleville, but to older residents of the district the name of Henthorn will be well known and Perc Bott is a grandson of the late William H. and Mrs. Henthorn, of this city. Young Bott won five consecutive ski titles for his Montreal ski club in 1939 and annexed the Canadian title for himself. This year young Bott is again in rare form as he recently won full honors at Cote des Neiges, Quebec, his home club headquarters near Montreal. Young Bott is one of Canada's more brilliant skiers, who possesses a sensational flash form. He is a relative of Percy Henthorn, former Belleville musician now residing in Windsor. Older residents in Belleville will recall the old Marsh and Henthorn foundry, which carried on a thriving business at the intersection of Station and Foundry Sts. at the turn of the century. Young Bott is a grandson of one of the founders of that old firm and is carrying on in true Henthorn and Canadian manner.

Secretary "Red" Townsend, of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association, announced today that our "little big league" has affiliated with the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association. The local group did not affiliate as a league, but only as one team, as was the case in 1938 when the present Belleville Juniors was first organized as a juvenile team. This week Secretary Townsend asked each of the four team coaches in Belleville Juvenile league to select a first and second all-star team from the players in our city loop. Each coach will select a first and a second team in a similar manner to the annual Canadian Press selection for the N.H.L. all-star team. These selections will give Secretary Townsend eight teams from which to finally select the Belleville juvenile team for provincial competition in the O.J.H.A. All season the players in the local juvenile loop have been striving to their utmost to gain berths on the coveted Belleville juveniles, which are to be the juniors and seniors of another year.

The idea behind organized juvenile hockey is beyond contradiction the only basis whereby the future of hockey can be protected in a smaller city. The absence of team play before the public and among our teen-aged boys in both baseball and hockey has long-since taken its toll in this city and it's high time the business men of the community began to see the light, (that is not fading, but out). The Belleville Juvenile Hockey League, which by the way has the play-off yet left, provided competitive sport for some 75 boys, all of whom will be given the hockey sweaters they have worn all season. In the meantime all are eagerly awaiting the announcement of the 12 players selected for the Belleville juvenile team to compete in the O.J.H.A.

Lowdown on the Yankees, as reported by Jimmy Powers, sports editor of the New York Daily News: "Reason there's so much talk of selling is because the Amalgamated Bank is supposed to hold $3,000,000, or better, in mortgages on the club. Ruppert borrowed the amount after repeal of prohibition to buy equipment for his beer business and never got to pay it all back."

The local softball heads made a ten strike when they elected Ken Edgecombe as president of the Belleville Softball Association for the year 1940. Prexy Ken is an ardent softball fan and has worked in executive capacities to no end in the interest of the game in Belleville. The league showed its confidence in Harry Knott when he was re-elected for the fourth time as secretary-treasurer. Harry is the right man in the right position, as is Harry Rollins, the backbone of softball in these parts. However, the local softball heads have stormy seas ahead of them. Only three of last year's clubs signified their intentions of returning to the fold in 1940, one being "Red" Townsend's juniors. What the incoming executive is faced with is the problem of inducing others to sponsor softball in Belleville during 1940, as a three-teamed loop would hardly satisfy the demands of the fans. Another thing the various clubs should guard against is packed teams, they'll ultimately ruin the league, as the fans will not support an unbalanced loop.

Toots Holway's local juniors rang down the junior O.H.A. group curtain with an 11 to 1 win over Coach Larry Goyer's Picton kids last night. Skipper Goyer pressed into service several overage players in an effort to give the locals good competition and his efforts were appreciated by the Belleville management. It was a pleasure to see the old Storms-Ethier combination clicking once again, while Clare looked much more effective back in his old position on the defence. Incidentally the locals were playing a much better system of combination last night, with the result their plays became productive as the score indicates.

Do you remember when hockey's mighty atom, Aurel Joliet, played his 500th National League game with Canadiens at Montreal six years ago tonight? The 136-pound Ottawan, a master stickhandler, and one of the outstanding players in hockey, made that season one of his best, finishing eighth in scoring lists. He played four more years with the Frenchmen before retiring to run his Montreal grocery.

Sport Spice — Dauber, 1938 Preakness winner, is definitely out of the valuable Santa Anita handicap and will be retired to the stud ....Marty Barry and Cy Wentworth, in their day two N.H.L. stalwarts were released outright by Les Canadiens yesterday ....And when a player is released by the Frenchmen it's just about the last word in the N.H.L.....Oshawa Billy Taylor was sent down the river for more experience the Maple Leafs announced yesterday ....Attention local cagers—"six-foot Ulyss Brock, Henderson, Tenn., centre hoopster, scored 83 points in a regulation cage game"....Toots Holway's juniors looked much better last night as they hit their stride, but there's still room for improvement, especially in the matter of back-checking ....The Air Force "Flyers" are hoping that "Toots" Day will be back from Camp Borden before their group play-offs commence.

Carry On War to 'Purge World of Such Wickedness'

Prime Minister Says "It Would Appear That Instructions Have Been Given to Enemy Pilots to Do Their Utmost to Avoid Contact With Our Defences."

FACE FUTURE CALMLY

British Have No Reason To Be Dissatisfied With the Progress of the War in Early Stage.

London, Feb. 8 (CP.-Cable) — Prime Minister Chamberlain today in the British House of Commons speaking of the Allied conflict with Germany, said winter weather had halted war operations in recent weeks and even interfered with normal activities so that there were few events of importance to record.

However, in mentioning the last Supreme War Council meeting — held Monday in Paris—he noted that the Council had become "not merely a convenient means of harmonizing the views of the two governments but a vital instrument in the successful prosecution of the war."

He asserted he could not give the details of the last meeting but said it seemed "even more valuable and businesslike than on previous occasions."

Of the air warfare between Britain and Germany the Prime Minister said: "It would appear that instructions have been given to enemy pilots to do their utmost to avoid contact with our defences."

Mr. Chamberlain condemned the "killing of fishermen, merchant seamen and of lightship crews," declaring such acts were "not war but murder" and that "such acts of gangsterism can have little if any effect on the outcome of the war."

He declared "we have no reason to be dissatisfied with the opening phases of the war and we face the future with calm determination and unshaken confidence."

The "horror and disgust" which German methods "excite in the minds of all decent peoples can only make us more resolved to carry on the struggle until civilization is purged of such wickedness," he said.

Mr. Chamberlain's report was the first war review he has delivered to parliament in three weeks.

Authority Given U.S. Gov't to Negotiate Reciprocal Agreements

Washington, Feb. 8 —(AP)— The Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives today approved a bill renewing authority for the United States Government to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements. The vote to report the bill favorably was 14 to 10.

The committee's action makes the measure—one of the most controversial proposals of the present session of Congress—ready for House consideration but when it will be taken up will depend on the wishes of the leadership.

Authority under which the President, through the State Department, now negotiates trade treaties expires June 12. The pending measure would extend it for three years from that date. Canada is among the score of nations having agreements under the act.

First British Volunteers May Leave Shortly

London, Feb. 8 (CP).—The first contingent of British volunteers may be off to Finland next week.

Unofficial reports said "hundreds" of applicants were being enrolled by the Finnish legation to leave as soon as possible.

Only men more than 27 years old —outside the classes likely to be called this year for the British army —are free to go. The government has taken no formal part in the work, being supervised by Finns here.

British volunteers will be in addition to warplanes and other material already on the way from here to Finland. Foreign Under-Secretary R. A. Butler yesterday told the House of Commons that Great Britain, realizing "the urgency of this matter," was taking every measure short of actual intervention to get material aid to the Finns quickly.

George Gordon Vereker, former counsellor of the British Embassy in Moscow, was appointed British Minister to Finland yesterday, succeeding T. M. Snow.

7,000 TANKER SINKS

London, Feb. 8 (CP)—The tanker British Councillor, 7,048 tons, sank in the North Sea Sunday after striking a mine, it was disclosed today after the vessel's entire crew of 43 men had landed at a southeast port.

NAZIS ADMIT 236,957 TONS LOST DURING WAR

Claim 354 Ships Seized and Taken to German Ports to be Disposed of

LIKELY NEUTRAL SHIPS

Berlin, Feb. 8—(AP)— Germany acknowledged today the loss of 236,957 tons of shipping since the beginning of the war and claimed the Allies and neutral countries had lost 1,493,431 tons.

Germany's losses were given as 42 ships and allied and neutral losses at 409 ships sunk up to the end of January.

(In London an Admiralty tabulation was issued announcing that 274 allied and neutral merchantmen were lost up to midnight Feb. 4. A British spokesman commented: "These are the correct figures. The others (the German figures) are not."

The German communique further claimed that the German navy had seized 354 ships which were taken to German ports to be disposed of in prize court proceedings.

(A naval source in London commented on this claim as follows: "No British or French ships have been taken by the German navy as prizes. Thus it must be assumed that this figure is made up entirely of neutral vessels which it is known to be the German custom to attack and seize illegally, plus the fictitious additions of Mr. Goebbels' department.)

Wife Decides Husband's Career As Crewman Has Been Finished

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Feb. 8—(CP)— Bert Coxen's sailing days are over He may not know it yet, but the decision was made today by his pretty wife, Rita, who had a premonition all would not be well when Coxen's ship—The Torpedoed Beaverburn—sailed from Saint John early last month.

Nearly three days of anxiety ended when Mrs. Coxen received a terse cable from him from a port in the south of England where he landed with other survivors from the ship, sent to the bottom Monday. The wire said: "Safe well."

"Was I ever worried," the 28-year-old Mrs. Coxen told newspapermen. "He's not going back to sea, so far as I'm concerned, and when he comes home I'll hide him."

Mrs. Coxen hasn't seen her husband, who is 38 and a greaser, since he sailed from Montreal in the Beaverburn early last November. She had letters and telegrams from him while he was at Saint John last month and heard nothing until she received news of the sinking.

Shrimp Embryos Live Despite Temperature Of 310 Deg. Below Zero

Prof. Douglas M. Whitaker, Stanford University biologist, put embryos of the artemia shrimp through a 24-hour bath in liquid air, 310 degrees below zero fahrenheit. They came out alive.

He also put some of the embryos into a high vacuum for six months —so that they had no food, water or air. Again they continued to live.

Prof. Whitaker didn't give up. He put some more shrimp embryos in vacuum chambers and set them on shelves to stay a while—one to be opened in a year, another in five years, still another in 10 years, and so on.

This embryo in the natural state is enclosed in a cyst or capsule formed by the mother. Ordinarily they have to dry out for a time because they hatch, the incubation process being completed in salt water.

ACCUSED TAKES WITNESS STAND IN OWN DEFENCE

DENIES TESTIMONY

States He Was Not Given a Legal Warning Before Making Statement.

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 8 (CP). — Reginald White, charged with the murder last August of John and Annie Milroy, aged Branchton brother and sister, took the stand in his own defence today after an alienist had testified White was able to differentiate right and wrong and was capable of standing trial.

Dr. G. H. Stevenson of the Ontario Hospital at London, said White was "a borderline case as regards intelligence". In the doctor's opinion White could recognize the difference between right and wrong.

"He is a little bit subnormal," Dr. Stevenson testified. "There are probably lots of people walking the streets in the same intelligence category as he is."

The 35-year-old White was called to the stand while the jury was absent from the courtroom pending a decision of Mr. Justice J. C. Makins as to whether or not certain statements allegedly given to police by White were admissable as evidence.

Probably Repeat Evidence.

In case the statements are deemed admissible by Mr. Justice Makins, much of the testimony taken today so far will probably be repeated for the benefit of the jury.

White was called to the stand by the defence when Crown Attorney Walter Martin indicated his case was closed with the exception of one witness, a Justice of the Peace from Galt, who had not yet arrived at the court. Mr. Justice Makins then suggested the defence begin its case in the meantime while waiting for Mr. Martin's last.

White denied previous police testimony that he had been given the legally required statutory warning prior to the making of a statement.

"Sergeant Whiteside(Sergeant Albert Whiteside of the Kitchener detachment, Provincial Police) testified here yesterday that he produced a card on which was printed the wording of the statutory warning, but if he did I neither saw nor heard it," White said.

Collegiate Cagers Win Two Games

After evenly dividing games in their first two meetings, the Belleville Collegiate cagers forged to the front of both sections of the Bay of Quinte group of the C.O. S.S.A. basketball schedules with a dual victory over Albert College.

In the opening game played at the Collegiate gymnasium, the B. C.I. juniors triumphed 17 to 7 over Pete Beach's Albert College kids, but in the second game the issue was always in doubt until the final whistle saw George Laughlin's B.C.I. seniors triumph over the Albert seniors by three scant points, the "collegians" winning 29 to 26.

In winning both halves of the dual interscholastic cage bill the B.C.I. hoopsters assumed the group leadership in both the junior and senior sections of the Bay of Quinte section.

Bancroft Schoolmaster Attacked by Pupils After New Regulations Effected

Howard Shelton Peppered With Inkwells, Text Books and Hit Over Back With Pointer

BOARD TO CONVENE

Bancroft, Feb. 8 — (Special to The Ontario-Intelligencer — Pupils of this village school rebelled and after threatenings, attacked the village schoolmaster here Tuesday in protest against new school hour regulations, which were put into effect by the teacher. The teacher, 26-year-old Howard Shelton, was struck by a pointer in the hands of one pupil while others hurled inkwells and books in rebellious protest. There has been no school held in this village since the incident occurred Tuesday. The township board of education will convene on Saturday to consider the matter of the uprising. In the meantime the pupils are enjoying a hilarious and unexpected holiday period.

The personal attack on Mr. Shelton commenced, when pupils protested, when the teacher tried to enforce new school hour regulations. Mr. Shelton announced on Monday that school would convene 15 minutes earlier each day but in turn the school would recess for the day a quarter of an hour before 4.00 p.m., but the students outwardly objected to earlier rising.

It is alleged by Mr. Shelton, that the uprising was headed by Stanley Woodcock, aged 14 years and his 12 year-old sister, Verna Woodcock, both of whom openly defied the new school opening regulations and arrived at the conventional hour of previous openings. The Woodcock children are said to be the instigators and the ones to foment the outbreak, that saw inkwells and text books hurled in the general direction of the teacher, as he tried to admonish those in protest. Others later are said to have joined the Woodcock children in protest and Mr. Shelton was attacked by the pupils who were armed with the teacher's pointer and rulers to put him to rout.

Neither the teacher nor the pupils appeared for school the day following the mutiny. No personal injuries were sustained, however.

Ottawa, Feb. 8. — (CP)— The chief electoral officer, Jules Castonguay, announced today that the necessity of holding the general election on March 26, a Tuesday, instead of the statutory Monday, because of the Easter holiday, will not alter statutory dates for revising lists and holding the advance pole.

Instructions were given election officers to open the advance polls on the 21st., 22nd., and 23rd., days of March, notwithstanding the fact that the 22nd falls on Good Friday. Advance polls are only open from 2.00 to 10.00 p.m.

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 8—(CP)— Seven-year-old James Thompson, Township of Elizabethtown, was admitted to hospital here today suffering from undetermined injuries to the head and shoulders. M.P.A. TO SUPPORT KING

Toronto, Feb. 8 (CP)—Dr. A. C. Trottier, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for North Essex, today said he would actively support the Mackenzie King government in the Federal election.

The French-Canadian member is one of those who did not vote on the Hepburn-sponsored resolution in the legislature censuring Canada's "so little effort" in prosecuting the war.

Flying Officer J. White, R. A. F., Missing, Believed to Have Lost Life in War Operations on Feb. 6

ALWAYS AIR-MINDED

Belleville Boy Known As "Johnny" White to Many Citizens, Possessed Brilliant Mind.

Belleville's first casualty in the present war occurred on Feb. 6th when Flying Officer John White, R.A.F., son of Mrs. S. J. Price, 210 MacDonald Avenue, is reported missing and believed to have lost his life while conducting air operations in the war zone according to an official communication received today.

"Immediate deeply regret to inform you that your son, Flying Officer John Arthur Charles White, is reported missing and believed to have lost his life as the result of air operations on Feb. 6th. The Air Council express their profound sympathy.

"Under Secretary of State,
"Air Ministry."

"Johnny" was well-known in Belleville and his honorable service in the defence of King and Empire evokes a keen sense of pride a swell as sincere regret in the hearts of his many friends. He served as he had lived, a smile on his face and his face toward the foe. Belleville salutes the first of her sons to give his life in the cause of civilization.

Always air-minded, even when he was a carrier on the newsboy staff of the Ontario-Intelligencer, Johnny soon realized his life's ambition. Three years ago last November, he was not to be denied and took passage on a cattle boat for England where he immediately became associated with the Royal Air Force.

His brilliant mind and aptitude to learn things mechanical, plus an ardent love for the air, soon sent him to the forefront in his studies. His promotion was rapid and it was not long before the bands of a commissioned officer in the Royal Air Force, were on his sleeve.

Shortly after war was declared, Johnny's squadron went into action, and it is readily believed conducted themselves in the best of traditions of the Royal Air Force.

The heroic lad, who only recently visited his folks in Belleville on leave from his squadron, was, it was readily imagined by those who knew him well, in the van of action. He has served in a manner true to the best traditions of his British ancestry and joins those splendid fellows in the ranks of air heroes who have gone on before him.

Lord Tweedsmuir's Condition Giving Rise to 'Grave Anxiety'

HAD FAINTING SPELL

Ottawa, Feb. 8—(CP)— Condition of Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, is giving rise to "grave anxiety" said a bulletin issued at 12:30 p.m. EST today from Government House.

His Excellency suffered a concussion Tuesday in a fall at Government House while dressing.

Today's bulletin said:

"His Excellency spent a restless night and his condition this morning gives rise to grave anxiety on account of increasing weakness."

The bulletin was signed by Dr. Jonathan Meakins of Montreal, Dr. Gordon Gunn of Ottawa, the Governor-General's personal physician, and Lieut.-Col. Colin Russel, R.C.A.M.C.

Last night's bulletin on the condition of the 64-year-old representative of the King in Canada had been none too encouraging. It said: "There is no change in His Excellency's condition but he has had rather a restless day and seems somewhat fatigued."

Until noon today there was no information given out from Government House on Lord Tweedsmuir's progress during the night.

Today's bulletin was the third such statement since His Excellency suffered a fainting spell and fell Tuesday.

ADMIRAL TRIBUTZ BITTER AGAINST FINNISH FORCES

BRITISH BLAMED

Moscow, Feb. 8—(AP)—The Soviet Union is determined to continue its offensive against Finland until the Finnish forces holding the Mannerheim Line are annihilated, according to Admiral Tributz, Commander of the Soviet navy in the Baltic Sea.

The admiral's pledge of continued war was made yesterday in connection with the bestowal of decorations on 255 naval officers and men "for exemplary fulfillment of tasks on the front against the white Finns."

"But plans for utilizing Finland as a base for military intervention against the Soviet Union shall be crushed by Red army blows," the newspaper said.

"Soviet armed forces are capable of meeting any element on land, air, water or under water.

"In fierce battles at Changkufeng, Mongolia in the western Ukraine and in Finland the Red army has covered with glory the military might of the U.S.S.R."

The Pravda article was in advance of the army and navy's 22nd anniversary celebration Feb. 23.

New German Planes Are Discussed In Detail

London, Feb. 8.—(CP)—The News Chronicle's aviation correspondent today discussed details of two new German fighting planes capable of 400 and 380 miles an hour respectively.

One is the Focke Wulf FW-198, a single-seated attack ship in which the pilot sits forward of the engine. The airscrew pushes instead of pulling the machine through the air. The tailplane and rudders are carried on two tapering booms extending from the wings.

"The pilot, with everything behind him, is given an unobstructed view forward," the correspondent said. "The disadvantage is that he has no engine to shield him from enemy fire. With several cannon and machine guns, the FW-198 has a reputed top speed of about 400 m.p.h."

The second plane is the Dornier DO-29, with twin engines. It follows the general lines of the DO-17, with bomber-reconnaissance type which has proved such easy prey to the British eight-gun fighters, the correspondent said. Top speed is said to be about 380 m.p.h.

CHIEF CROWN WITNESS IN WINDSOR TRIAL ARRESTED FOR FRAUD

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 8—(CP)— David Armaly, chief Crown witness in two conspiracy trials in Supreme Court of Ontario here during the present assizes, today was locked up in Windsor police station on a charge of defrauding the city welfare department of $112.15 from July 1 to Sept. 21, 1939.

The 32-year-old discharged customs officer was arrested by Chief Inspector John Harrison and Inspector A. L. Sullivan of the welfare department in the office of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

It was Armaly's association with the R.C.M.P. during the investigation into the conspiracy cases against Sam Miller, Rocco Perri, Mrs. Anne Newman and four customs officers that resulted in his being charged today.

His admission under cross examination in Supreme Court three weeks ago that he and his family were maintained by the R.C.M.P. during the investigation of alleged alcohol smuggling operations between Detroit and Windsor caused officials of the relief department to search their records. This disclosed that they contributed to his support at the same time.

SAYS U.S. CITIZENS HAVE BEEN EXECUTED

Paris, Feb. 8—(AP)—Polish authorities in Paris in continuing charges of mass executions by Germans in Poland have asserted that two United States citizens, a man named Szczygiel and his 19-year-old son, were among the victims in a "massacre" at Wawer, near Warsaw.

Connellsville, Pa., Feb. 8—(AP) —George Szczygiel of Everson, Pa., said today he believed two United States citizens reported in Paris to have been executed by the Nazis in Poland were his first cousin, Anthony Szczygiel, former Everson miner, and Anthony's 19-year-old son.

Szczygiel said his cousin returned to Poland in 1917 to live on a farm there.

4 Soviet Planes Downed by Finns In Aerial Fighting

ATTACKS WEAKENING

Red Army Divisions Supported By "Abundant Artillery" Lack Zip to Their Attack and Raids Easily Repulsed Says Observer.

Helsingfors, Feb. 8—(AP)— The capture of "several" patrols of Russian soldiers who parachuted to earth behind the Finnish lines was reported today in a Finnish communique which said four Soviet warplanes had been downed in aerial fighting.

A weakening of Russian attacks was noted in the Summa sector on the Karelian Isthmus, scene of a week-long Soviet offensive. Two assaults were thrown back with the destruction of four enemy tanks.

The communique declared several Red army divisions supported by "abundant artillery" took part in the assaults of Tuesday and Wednesday, and estimated enemy losses on Tuesday at "some thousands."

Driven Back From Frontier

A Russian attempt to cross the frontier south of Raate was repulsed in the Suomussalmi sector in which "the enemy's losses were 250 killed" and large quantities of military equipment captured.

Soviet planes appeared chiefly in small fighter patrols, the Finns said, and machine-gunned Finnish land forces.

Raids on the town of Kajaani and rural communities were reported.

In Russian air raids on cities of the Finnish interior, war's fortunes led to the bombardment of a prison full of captive Russian troops.

The prisoners all were herded safely to shelters yesterday during the four-hour raid by 10 Russian planes on the north central town of Kajaani. Two Finns were killed and many others injured.

20 Houses Fired

The Russian bombs were reported to have damaged two hospitals and a teachers' college, destroyed three houses, and fired 20 others.

Details of another raid on Abo (Turku) southwestern Finnish port, were not disclosed.

On the Salla front, reliable sources said the main body of Russians was falling back from Markajaervi toward the town of Sala, under cover of light Russian attacks at Markajaervi.

On the Karelian Isthmus the Finns reported they still were rolling back wave after wave of Russian infantry and tank-drawn, sledge-riding shock troops in the Summa area.

'I HAVE NOTHING TO SAY'

had turned over all articles received to Dr. Frankish, Ontario medico legal expert.

This concluded the Crown's evidence.

Would Not Accept Statement, Claim

White said a second statement had been given to Sergeant Whiteside, when the officer had told him evidence against him had been uncovered.

"I insisted that I was telling him the truth all the time, but he would not accept it," White said. "When he gave me a paper to sign I didn't know whether it was a western magazine or what. If I signed any paper, I didn't know what it was."

He had made a statement the Tuesday after his arrest but it wasn't voluntary, witness said. He was continually questioned throughout the statement and "I wasn't warned." Sergeant Whiteside had threatened he wouldn't get his dinner if "I (Whiteside) don't get a confession."

Sergeant Whiteside was an earlier witness today. In Cross-examination he said that after White had been taken to Kitchener from Galt by car he had told White, that he was to be charged with murder.

White then had said he wanted to tell the truth. Inspector W. H. Lougheed of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Provincial Police, had been called in to hear the statement which was given partly in narrative form and partly in answer to some questions.

WAR BRIEFS

Stockholm, Feb. 8 (CP-Havas) —The Swedish parliament today voted a special credit to provide 800,000 gas masks for the country's civilian population. It also provided 10,000,000 kroner (about $2,382,000) for military hospitals.

London, Feb. 8 (CP)—Lifeboat crews scanned the sea in vain at dawn today along a section of the east coast, looking for a clue to the cause of explosions which flashed against the sky during the night. Windows and doors of homes in several towns were rattled by the blasts. The likeliest conjecture was that floating wreckage had exploded mines.

London, Feb. 8 (CP)—Beginning Friday, members of the Colonial and Dominions armed forces may send cables from the United Kingdom to relatives in Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, Burma, Newfoundland, the British protectorates and the mandates at the rate of fivepence a word, with no charge for the address, it was announced yesterday.

Extension of the same provision to Canada is still under discussion

Cairo, Feb. 8 (CP-Havas)—General Maxine Weygand, Commander-in-Chief of the French forces in the Near East, today inspected British, Egyptian and Indian motorized units in the desert near Cairo. He was accompanied on his inspection visit by Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Wavell, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in the middle east.

PATERNALISM 'GONE TOO FAR'

Col. George A. Drew Makes Declaration Before Agricultural Council

Toronto, Feb. 8—(CP)—Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, told the Ontario Agricultural Council at its annual convention today that "we have gone much too far in government paternalism."

"We will accomplish very much more when we do away with an attempt to control the life of everyone in the province, by those in authority who have not a clear idea of all their problems," he said.

Col. Drew said that the Agricultural Council is the "type of thing we must try to institute in all branches of endeavor throughout the country."

Resolution Opposed

Vote on resolutions submitted during the two-day session followed the address and the council opposed a resolution calling for establishment of "some system of sickness, old age and unemployment insurance in Ontario."

Council members placed themselves on record as feeling that the earning power qualifications for "indigent patients" seeking hospital admittance be reduced from $2.50 a day.

It was resolved that the Hon. Harold Kirby, Ontario Minister of Health be petitioned "to have this condition adjusted."

Control of Prices

Council, without discussion, passed the following motion: "That in this strenuous period when price control is being enforced, the Ontario Agricultural Council requests the Dominion Government make a determined and continued effort to control the price of supplies and necessities required by farmers so that a reasonable parity may be obtained between the value of farmers' products and the prices of farmers requirements."

Another resolution which complained that the "present premium of $1.00 for grade A hogs over grade B is too small a differential," and urged a $2.00 differential because of the greater cost of producing grade A bacon, was discussed.

LETTERS GIVEN BOTH LEADERS

Ottawa, Feb. 8 (CP).—Identical letters signed by 47 Toronto citizens urging that steps be taken to submit the defence of Canada and censorship regulations for systematic revision to a committee of parliament have been received here by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Conservative leader Manion.

A copy of the letter as handed out at Toronto by William C. Grant said that while emergency powers and regulations are necessary in wartime, "regulations should not, by vagueness of expression and unwise application, become a means to the unnecessary curtailment of democratic rights."

The letter said this has been most clearly recognized in Great Britain where emergency regulations came before parliament and were submitted by the government to a committee of all parties. Canada should follow the British example.

The goodwill of the United States towards the British Empire may be prejudiced, the letter said, "if it appears that the totalitarianism we are combatting in Europe is making inroads in Canada."

"We therefore respectfully urge that you, as the leader of one of Canada's political parties, should publicly undertake that, upon election, you will take steps to have a defence of Canada and censorship regulations submitted for systematic revision to a committee of parliament as soon as possible".

GIRL AT THE FRONT

CHAPTER 20

A Key in the Door

Frau Weber's intuition proved only partly accurate, and although the buzzer sounded shortly after Claire and Cameron had retired to the hideout, the visitor proved to be one of the counter-espionage agents who was helping in her work.

Claire and Bill crouched in the secret room, fearful that it might be George Roland or some member of the Gestapo who might have trailed Cameron to the flat, and their feelings were not relieved by the fact that they could not hear what was said. The conversation was carried on in such low tones that they could hear only the voices.

Both were greatly relieved when after nearly half an hour Frau Weber called out that they might leave their hiding place.

"It was one of our men," she explained. "He says the Gestapo is in a terrible uproar over Herr Cameron's escape and is making a thorough search of the city."

"Did they blame my guard—did they blame Albert?" Cameron inquired.

"He didn't know, but you may be sure some heads will fall for this. That is the way they always act when some of their plans go wrong—snatch at the first persons they find and line them up against a wall before a firing squad".

"I don't think there is any danger tonight", Frau Weber went on. "It will take them a long time to suspect me, as I've been very careful. I think, though, that Herr Cameron should sleep in the little room tonight. Fraulein, you may have my room again as you did last night, leaving the panel open for a quick disappearance".

"It sounds like the safest thing", Cameron agreed. "Did your men have any information about when a plane would arrive?"

"Not yet. It is too soon. Word has to be got to Paris, first. It may take a day, maybe several days. We must be patient".

Their sleep undisturbed that night by any further alarms, both Claire and Cameron were greatly refreshed the next morning. Frau Weber left before they were awake to make early report to the factory that Lili was ill and could not go to work that day. She and her daughter had talked it over the previous night and decided that one of them should spend the day in the flat with the two Americans. If Frau Weber were absent from her shop, she might miss an important message, so it was Lili who volunteered to brave the wrath of her foreman by feighing illness.

"I don't know exactly myself", she answered, "except that an American radio man here is the go-between. He is permitted to broadcast on the short wave daily—his material being closely censored, of course".

"Then how is it managed?" Cameron inquired, curiously.

"By a code. The broadcaster himself, I understand, doesn't entirely know the system. His material is arranged for him by one of our friends. There are certain key words which indicate when a message is coming through, and then the message itself is sent a certain sequence of the following sentences. The second or third or maybe fifth word of each sentence or certain sentences conveys information. In Paris, the entire broadcast is taken down of course and then decoded. It's quite complicated, but it seems to work".

"The man who arranges the material here must be a wizard", Cameron commented, "because he has to work very fast".

Lili smiled.

"You'd be surprised if you knew who he really is—and so would the Nazis. He is one of the most trusted men in the censor's office— but he's entirely out of sympathy with Herr Hitler and his aims."

The American diplomatic agent glanced about the flat.

"You have no radio, have you?"

"Few Germans have these days. They might be tempted to listen to other than official broadcasts and to be caught at that means at best a concentration camp."

"That is the strength and at the same time the weakness of all dictators," Cameron commented. "They fear free discussion and forbid it, but there is nothing truer than the old saying that the truth will out. And when that happens, it means trouble for a dictator."

"Mother has a radio in the shop", Lili went on. "When official broadcasts are announced in the papers, she turns it on for the benefit of the neighbors and customers. Otherwise, it is discreetly silent."

"Your mother is a very clever woman, Lili," Cameron said. "She must be to receive such an efficient organization as the Gestapo."

"If you'll pardon me, Herr Cameron, it is not always efficient. It is vicious and almost incredibly stupid about many things. They consider mother one of their most valuable agents."

"What do you mean?" Claire asked.

"As she told you, she serves them as well as people the Nazis regard as deadly enemies. It is the only way we can exist. She is in a position to hear many things in her shop. Some she reports, some she does not."

"But doesn't her conscience bother her?"

"Not at all. Why should it? Those she betrays are Nazis of the worst sort—deadly enemies of the real Germany. She is serving our cause by denouncing them."

Cameron shook his head.

"Your mother is playing a very dangerous game, Lili," he said. Inevitably she must be found out. And you know what that will mean.'

"Of course. We both know, but we are resigned to it. Even if discovery should come today, and we had to pay the supreme penalty, we have avenged father. We have made the Nazis pay a hundred times over for his murder, and then we go, we know that others like us will carry on the fight from within."

Claire was thrilled by the German girl's words, and impulsively put her arm about her and kissed her pale cheek just as the buzzer sounded twice. Cameron and Claire hurried to their place of refuge, but Lili stopped them before the panel slid shut. She had recognized her mother's signal and the older woman's cough outside the door.

Frau Weber had heard nothing further, except that her message had been sent to France by short wave asking that a plane be sent to permit her refugees to make their escape as soon as possible.

Lili went down and stayed in the shop during the luncheon hour, and then returned when her mother had eaten.

There were no further alarms that afternoon, and Lili and Claire had dinner prepared when the older woman came upstairs about six o'clock after locking the store for the night.

"Anything new?" Cameron inquired eagerly as she came in.

"Nothing. Herr Roland dropped in for a minute on his way to headquarters. He seemed greatly upset at news of your escape and blamed the stupidity of the officers who had you in charge. He hinted very strongly that several leaders might suffer, and then hurried away."

"Perhaps Mr. Roland will not be so free with his threats if he dares to return to Paris," Cameron commented. "One good thing about all this affair is that we now have definite proof of what counter-espionage agents merely suspected before—that Roland is a leader in the Nazi spy ring in France."

"Don't forget," Frau Weber cautioned, "that you're not out of this yet. Many things may happen."

After dinner, she and her daughter prepared to go out to a Nazi meeting in the neighborhood.

"I dont want to go and neither does Lili," she told them.

"I'm afraid to leave you here alone, but we dare not fail to appear at the meeting. A careful check is made, and those who do not attend are immediately placed under strict surveillance. That's something we don't dare to invite, if we are to continue to serve you as we have."

'Go right ahead,' Cameron urged. "Nothing will happen. We'll be all right.

Claire and Cameron were sitting quietly reading half an hour later when the girl's keen ears heard a sound outside the flat. Motioning Bill to silence, she crept silently across the room, through Frau Weber's bedroom and into the hideout, with Cameron following closely and closing the wardrobe and the wall panel securely behind them.

Straining their ears, a few minutes later both heard a key being carefully inserted in the outside lock, a stealthy sound as though some one had entered. They heard a movement in the bedroom, and then suddenly a voice called out sharply, in English:

"Come out of there, Cameron! We know where you're hiding! The place is surrounded, and you can't escape this time!"

Claire stuffed her handkerchief in her mouth to keep from crying aloud and the fingers of her right hand convulsively clutched Bill's tensed forearm.

Home on the Tide

By GUY W. SKINNER

The riveting hammers crackled noisily on the huge towers of Golden Gate bridge. From the Marin hills the sound reverberated for all the world like a battery of machine guns in full cry. A thick puree of gray fog blanketed the harbor, and the scuttling ferries filled the air with whistled warnings, as an army transport crept slowly through the fog between the towers; made her way to Quarantine and dropped anchor against the pressure of the inrushing tide. From the Fort Mason docks a tug bustled out bearing customs and medical officers; came alongside and made fast, as the roar of a rushing anchor chain died away.

To the officers' families, lining the upper rail, and to the two hundred enlisted men shivering on the forward well deck, the rattle of the hammers spelled what eyes searched vainly to see — Frisco — Home.

To one of the five prisoners confined far below in the brig, the sound of the hammers came strangely muffled and spelling quite another word. To him, Sammy Curtin, Manhattan gunman—alias John Jones, doughboy, they spelled Alcatraz. "THE ROCK," tight little island home of public enemies; squatting; not unlike a great, gray battleship dead ahead in the harbor.

In Harlem, nearly two years before, a stubborn mail truck driver had met an untimely death during an attempted postal robbery. As a direct result, and without delay, Sammy had changed his residence from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific as rapidly and unobtrusively as possible. Here an idea had been born in Sammy's brain, engendered by the allurements of Hawaii as depicted in an army recruiting advertisement. What easier way to double the distance between himself and New York? What surer way to become inconspicuous than through the medium of an army uniform? And the swimming—it would be warmer than Coney, and Sammy was a good swimmer and loved the water.

Answering the questions of the recruiting officer proved no trick at all for Sammy. He simply gave the answers which were wanted becoming John Jones for army purposes. There was only one bad moment; when the examiner printed his fingers. "That wasn't so good," Sammy thought, but considered the fact that his gloves could have left no telltale fingerprints in Harlem.

Things which Sammy did not consider were that there is no honor in those who would avoid the hot seat for themselves—that he had not worn gloves in his lodgings and that the mills of the Department of Justice grind exceedingly small. All of these, combined, accounted for the unpleasant knowledge that "THE ROCK" was drawing very, very near.

The clumping feet of the sentry came to a halt as the sergeant of the guard appeared. "All right, you guys; get set for physical." Then to the sentry, "The medico'll look 'em over in the galley. Too crowded in here." "Okay, from the sentry. "Fall in."

The physical examination was soon completed. A guard, back of Sammy, was speaking. "Can't see your nose in this fog. Bet we'll be plenty late getting in." Sammy glanced thoughtfully toward the passageway leading from the galley to the after well deck and, leaning forward fumbled a moment with his shoe strings. When he straightened, both shoes were partly unlaced.

As the inspection group neared the open end of the passageway, there came a sharp order from a guard, and Sammy dashed suddenly into the passage, placing the inspectors between himself and the guards. He raced the length of the passage, up the short stair to the well deck, and vaulting the rail, struck the cold waters of the bay with a splash.

Automatics barked — bullets bounced and whined, but Sammy was safely under water, swimming strongly, and thanking his stars for the aid of the tide. The tug cast off and quietly away from the centre of disturbance, while the wireless crackled with the news of his escape.

"THE ROCK" offers few comfortable landing spots, but it lies near the centre of the tideway entering the gate, and here is one spot where nothing is left to chance. Thus it occurred that, following notice of Curtin's escape, Sergeant Blake was patrolling certain portions of the shore line. He cursed the fog as he faced the Golden Gate and peered toward the sound of the hammers on the bridge. The flowing tide caused a ripple along the shore. A fish made a splash—splashed again—this time nearer—then the fish became the dim figure of a man who pulled himself wearily ashore and flopped on the bank.

Very quietly Blake drew his pistol, then spoke: "Hello, Curtin, How's the water?" Sammy turned his head, starting at sight of the uniform, then inquired, "Where am I?"

"Boy, you sure came right home on the tide," was the reply. "This is Alcatraz."

AT THE BELLE

"Invisible Stripes"

Bringing the powerful story of a man seeking to make an honest way in the world after a term spent in prison, "Invisible Stripes", starring George Raft, Jane Bryan and William Holden is now having its local debut on the Belle theatre screen.

George Raft plays the title role. In this, following on the heels of his tremendous success in "Each Dawn I Die," Raft is the man who comes back to girl he loves, determined to lead a straight life, only to find the way barred to him because of his stigma.

Jane Bryan, the screen's newest dramatic star, who has achieved a star ranking through her brilliant work with Bette Davis in "The Old Maid" essays the top feminine role of a girl seeking only happiness with the man she loves. In this case he is William Holden, the youth who scored such a hit in movie circles in the title role of "Golden Boy."

Holden plays the younger brother of George Raft who wants to turn to crime as a means of securing enough money to marry. How Raft keeps him from making the same mistake he did forms the basis of this gripping picture described by caast critics os one of the most tremendously moving films to come out of Hollywood this year.

Joan Davis' Funniest Role

Long-legged Joan Davis is bowing to the wishes of the fans and returning to the rough and tumble type of comedy that first won her screen fame three years ago in "Wake Up And Live."

The red-haired comiqueen goes back to knockabout fun with The Jones Family in "Too Busy to Work," the latest of the 20th Century-Fox comedies, which is the comedy feature attraction on the same program.

It was a back injury sustained while clowning with Buddy Ebson between scenes of "Thin Ice" which switched Joan from slapstick to a more restrained brand of fun.

However, when the fans kept clamoring for the rough stuff, Joan proved to the studio that her injury was completely healed by making a screen test of a jungle scene which demanded that she swing from tree to tree and finish with a whirling 20-foot dive into a pool. She plans to play at least two such roles a year.

Just returned from a highly successful nationwide personal appearance tour, Joan play Lolly, the "screwball" country cousin of the Jones Family, in "Too Busy to Work," Joan turns up and moves in just in time to add to the general confusion produced when Ma turns actress to pay back Mayor Dad for spending all his time at cornerstone laying and committee meetings.

Ken Soble's new True-False game will be presented on the stage. This fascinating game is easy to play, affords lots of fun, and splendid cash prizes are rewarded for the erforts. Come and see the grand cash prize presented to last yeek's winner.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Little Accident" and "Man From Montreal."

Everybody's sweetheart, Baby Sandy, that dynamite kid in diapers, is now at the McCarthy Theatre in her newest comedy-howl, "Little Accident." Presented previously at the McCarthy Theatre New Year's Eve only, "Little Accident" made an instant hit as a swell comedy feature and this reviewer who saw it New Year's Eve is pleased at this time to recommend it to all, as a gay comedy treat certain to be enjoyed by every moviegoer. Edgar Kennedy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson and Ernest Truex are also featured in addition to Baby Sandy.

Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Man from Montreal," a new feature presentation of the adventures of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, is also now at the McCarthy Theatre as a second big treat in addition to Baby Sandy in "Little Accident."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Law of the Pampas"

The romantic Argentine background of the new "Hopalong Cassidy" outdoor drama, "Law of the Pampas," now showing at the Capitol, is enhanced by four new songs with a strong Latin flavor, which will be heard for the first time when the Paramount film is seen.

The numbers, which were written especially for the Clarence E. Mulford range story, are "Habanero" and "Rosita," by Carlos Gianotti and "Los Gauchos" and "La Jornada," by Leo Rojo. In addition, "Fantasia Argentina," probably the most popular of all native tangos, will be used in a special dance sequence featuring Steffi Duna, William Boyd's new leading lady.

Besides Boyd and Miss Duna, the cast of "Law of the Pampas," includes Russell Hayden, Sidney Toler, Sydney Blackmer and The King's Men, popular radio quartette. The story concerns the adventures of the "Bar 20" foreman when he goes to Argentina to deliver a herd of prize cattle and runs into a series of mysterious robberies and killings.

The added screen attraction features the hilarious Higginses, a laugh from start to finish, in "Should Husbands Work?" starring James, Russell and Lucille Gleason.

To complete the bill the Capitol presents 'First Days,' showing how England was prepared for war, twenty minutes of intimate glimpses into the Motherland's precautionary system.

Allies 'War Chest' in U.S. Totals 10 Billion Dollars; War Trade 'Boom' Expected

By LLOYD LEHRBAS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Feb. 8 (AP) — The Allies and Germany are spending so many millions of dollars every day that they are forced to buy supplies from other sources despite their tremendously increased production of war materials.

Germany, blockaded by sea and lacking cash to make purchases, is forced to depend on the Scandinavian and Balkan nations and the territories it has seized—Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and part of Poland.

The Allies can buy some of the products they need from the Dominions and Colonies and from neutral countries, but the United States is a logical market in which to buy planes and other war accessories.

Great Britain and France already have placed orders and made plans to purchase United States goods to an extent that officials here predict a "boom" war trade which may hit the $1,000,000,000 mark.

A survey of informed Federal departments reveals that—as a conservative estimate—the Allies have assets in the United States totalling $10,000,000,000 which may be used as a "war chest."

Those assets are:

List of Assets

1. An estimated $6,500,000,000 to $7,000,000,000 in gold, with shipments continuing weekly from Britain, France, Canada, South Africa, India and Hong Kong. Besides its stored gold reserves, the British Empire produces $800,000,000 in newly-mined gold annually.
2. An estimated $1,000,000,000 in stocks, bonds and other securities in United States corporations and companies.
3. An estimated $1,000,000,000 in direct investments in the United States industrial plants, factories, mines and other enterprises.
4. An estimated $1,000,000,000 in dollar balances in United States banks.
5. The favorable balance of trade which Britain wants to obtain by increasing its exports from $1,756,000,000 in 1939 to approximately $2,400,000,000 in 1940.

In the first Great War the United States loaned $8,800,000,000 to Great Britain and France to pay for $11,800,000,000 worth of goods purchased here.

Cannot Obtain Loans

In this war the Johnson bill has made it impossible for war debtor nations to obtain loans or credits in the United States and the neutrality law provides for "cash-and-carry" sales of war materials to belligerents.

To insure payment in cash for vital supplies the Allies—especially during the crisis in 1938 and 1939—began shipping gold to the United States until on last Jan. 1 this country held $17,700,000,000 of the world's total of $28,500,000,000 in that precious metal.

With such a percentage of the world's golden wealth here many economists doubt the advisability of the United States accepting more gold(to be buried and serve no useful service.) They advocate the use of persuasive efforts to obtain payment for American goods in some other manner.

At the moment, however, the Allies and other nations have $1,100,000,000 in earmarked gold in the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The incoming shipments and fluctuation in the earmarked account from week to week show that they are selling it, when necessary, to the United States treasury at $35 an ounce to pay for purchases.

Other Alternatives

If the United States should use pressure to obtain payment other than gold, it would force the Allies to utilize their other resources by:

1. Sale of some or all of their estimated $1,000,000,000 in securities, with possible effects on Wall Street prices.
2. Sale by Anglo-French interests of some or all of the $1,000,000,000 share they have in direct investments, returning the properties to American ownership. British investments in Canada and Latin America also might be sold to Americans for dollars.
3. Sale by Anglo-French interests of some or all of the soil, rubber, tin and other raw material producing properties which they own in the Near East, Far East and Latin America.

Mechanical Power Eases Labor Of Cutting and Storing Ice

Proving conclusively that the electric refrigerator has yet a long, long way to go before supplanting entirely the old-fashioned ice-box, and also that nature's own cooling agent is still considered a very useful commodity among Bellevillians, local ice dealers at the present time are busily engaged in storing their quota of ice against next summer's needs.

After taking a little jaunt down around the bay shore and also visiting the near-by ice-storage houses, it is surprising to learn the immensity of the local ice-harvesting program and also of the many labor-saving devices which inventive minds have devised to reduce handling to a minimum. Whirring power-driven saws were cutting deep rifts into the ice and after cross-cutting by hand, the sections were broken loose by a long handled iron "spud," while men armed with long pike poles would steer the individual cakes into a "lift" to be raised clear of the water. A faithful horse was, in one case, supplying the motive power to run the "cage," while in the other, inventive minds had turned an out-moded auto into a mechanical wizard and the good old "bus" minded not one whit the job which must have proved monotonous to the horse.

After being raised from the water, the cakes then slide down a ramp onto the truck or sleigh which transported them to the ice-house and here also was noted the utmost in handling efficiency. Certainly the tractor sled-trains used in big-time lumbering operations have nothing on one of the local ice-dealers when it comes to conservation of man power. With a set of heavy bob-sleds trailing behind his trusty "coupe," a driver was seen making a round trip to and from the bay every four minutes. No time at all was lost in unloading for, as the sleigh passed a certain point at the ice-house, one runner would drop into a deep rut and off would go the 16 cakes, weighing approximately 350 pounds each, and the sleigh, never stopping, would be off to the bay for another load.

"A little more than half in," answered one employee as he steered the cakes into another "lift" for elevation into the ice-house. "We have about 12,000 in now and around 10,000 more to go." Here it was another auto that supplied power to run the "lift" and between shifts the driver lolled back in the seat and smoked a cigarette.

Filling orders for export is another phase of the ice business in which at least one local dealer is at present engaged. A long line of freight cars was being loaded with the heavy cakes.

CONSCRIPT ARMIES ON WAR FOOTING

900-Mile Defence Front.

A 900-mile defence line is being built along Rumania's frontiers most open to invasion and King Carol's army chiefs today began requisitioning scrap iron and cotton for munitions factories. Private stocks of more than 400 pounds must be turned over to the government under penalty of a heavy fine.

The defence efforts of Rumania, at the moment the most exposed of the southeastern states, will decrease her productive capacity for an indefinite period, British and French observers believe, and adversely affect deliveries of oil and other supplies to Germany.

The absence from farms of hundreds of thousands of peasants called for military service already has cut down winter wheat planting.

Making Effort To Stay Out.

Rumania, like her co-members of the Balkan entente — Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey—is making her effort to stay out of war independently as a result of the entente conferees' decision last week against collective measures.

Yugoslavia is expected to have an army of about 500,000 by spring—more than double her normal strength.

Turkey, officially "not neutral but non-belligerent", has kept 200,000 soldiers on her frontier with Soviet Russia despite an urgent need for manpower for reconstruction of the large areas recently devastated by flood and earthquake.

Will Coordinate Armies.

Great Britain and France have prepared to coordinate the Turkish army with the strategy of General Maxime Weygand if the war spreads to the near east.

In Hungary, latest conscript classes will report to eight corps areas into which the army recently divided the country. Little has been made known about the Greek army's spring manoeuvres but the recall of reserve officers of certain classes has been announced.

JOINT EFFORT TO CLEAR BORDER

Countries Hope to Prevent Spies and Saboteurs Entering Dominion

Washington, Feb. 8 — (AP)— Canada and the United States have started a joint effort to clear the eastern Canadian-American border for patrolling to prevent entrance of spies and saboteurs into the Dominion.

Officials here said today that storms and hurricanes in the last two years have partly destroyed the boundary vista. Reports have come from Canadian and United States customs and immigration officials that the border cannot be patrolled. In some places trees are piled 10 or 12 feet high.

The American State Department has been informed that Canada is expressing concern over the state of the frontier, on the ground that the boundary should be guarded carefully against violations by spies and saboteurs. At this time, Canada pointed out, the Dominion is manufacturing large quantities of war supplies, particularly airplanes.

It was feared saboteurs might be able to collect explosives in the United States, transport them across the frontier at the "blind spots," and plant them in Canadian factories, ports and railroads.

Canada, it is learned, already has increased her frontier guard, partly because of the unsatisfactory condition of the border.

On this side American officials want a clearer frontier to assist them in preventing violations of United States neutrality.

The International Boundary Commission is in charge of the work of clearing the border and a sub-committee of the United States House of Representatives has approved requests for funds for this purpose.

The clearing will be completed first along the Maine-Quebec border.

Support Develops In U. S. Senate to Make Loan to Finns

Washington, Feb. 8—(AP)—Bipartisan support developed in the United States Senate today for a proposal that the country lend Finland $5,891,000—the amount of her war debt payments—to purchase any supplies needed to fight the Russians.

Additional non-military aid to the Baltic republic appeared likely when senate leaders scheduled consideration of a bill to double the $100,000,000 capital of the export-import bank. It generally is understood that the bank would authorize an additional $20,000,000 loan to Finland if the legislation were approved. China also may receive another $20,000,000.

Finland previously has obtained $10,000,000 and China $25,000,000 for purchase of non-military goods. Additional loans are limited to $20,000,000 for any one country.

Senator Prentis Brown, Michigan Democrat and author of the loan legislation, proposed an amendment permitting the treasury to make the unrestricted advance of $5,891,000 to Finland.

Swiss Order Soviet Expert Out of Country

Berne, Feb. 8 (AP)—Switzerland today ordered Soviet Russia's League of Nations expert, Vladimir Sokoline, to leave the country within two weeks.

The order was issued by both the Swiss Federal and Geneva Cantonal governments, rejecting Moscow's explanation for wanting to keep Sokoline in Switzerland.

Sokoline was dismissed as an undersecretary of the League of Nations after Soviet Russia's expulsion and Moscow had tried to obtain authorization for him to remain in Geneva as "liaison officer" to the International Red Cross Committee.

League experts, co-ordinating League members' aid to Finland, have made no secret of their displeasure at having a trained Soviet observer remaining in Geneva.

The International Red Cross Committee, which appealed to Russia during the Polish campaign and since the Soviet invasion of Finland without reply, found Sokoline had no authorization to confer with it despite his new title.

Accordingly, Geneva Cantonal authorities and the Federal government, which has no relations with Russia, asked Sokoline to leave. He said he had no comment to make and was awaiting instructions from Moscow.

TWEED WINS GAME 9 TO 8

Tweed, Feb. 8 (Special)—Tweed outlasted Campbellford in a Trent Valley league hockey game at the arena last night securing the odd goal in seventeen in the highest scoring spree staged on local ice in several seasons. The score is a fair indication of the evenness of the play with penalties and a bit of luck for the winners playing a good share in their ultimate victory. A fair crowd was in attendance and a good sheet of ice made combination play very effective. Despite the high scoring both goalies played well. In this respect Reeves in Tweed goal stood out as Campbellford tested him with many a hard shot that he turned aside, the first period ended with the score Tweed 5, Campbellford 4. J. Courneyea and Wagar drew the only penalties of the period.

McIlraith tied the count shortly after the second period opened for the only goal of the frame which was featured by close checking.

Wilkes gave the visitors a one-goal lead early in the final period. The Long boys put on a brothers act for the tying goal in a see-saw struggle which saw first one team and then the other in the lead. The locals again went out in front as Joe Courneyea sank Tummon's beautiful pass for the prettiest goal of the game. They were unable to hold the lead and Couch and McIlraith scored in quick succession to once again put the visitors in a position to win as the final minutes were ticked off. Once again Tummon and J. Courneyea combined for the tying goal to knot the count at 8 all. In the overtime Courneyea and Prevost scored for the winning counter.

The game did not get under way until 9.30 as the visitors were late in arriving.

Tweed: goal, Reeves; defence, Tummon, Orr; centre, J. Courneyea; wings, Prevost, Leal; subs, A. Courneyea H. Long, Harold Long, Woodcock.

Secretary of State Says Informal Diplomatic Relations Have Commenced With Neutral Governments—No Plans Involved and Conversations Do Not Involve Present War Conditions

Washington, Feb. 9—(AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced today that diplomatic conversations "of an informal character" have been commenced with neutral governments "in view of the evident desire of all neutral nations for the eventual restoration of world peace."

Hull emphasized that the conversations "involve no plan or plans but are in the nature of preliminary inquiries relating to a sound international economic system and, at the same time, worldwide reduction of armaments."

He added that the conversations can be "extended to belligerent nations insofar as they involve these two common problems of future peace."

Hull made his announcement shortly after President Roosevelt disclosed that the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, would be sent to Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain in the near future to survey the war situation.

Hull said that the conversations with the neutrals did not embrace "matters involving present war conditions."

At his Press conference, Hull also announced that Welles would sail from New York on the Italian liner Rex, Feb. 17, and go directly

NAZI WARPLANE ATTACKED AND DOWNED BY R.A.F.

Patrols of Royal Air Force Fighter Command Win Victory

FIRST RAID OF WEEK

Fallen Foe Plane, Believed Heinkel Bomber, Shot Down Near North Berwick

London, Feb. 9 (CP).—Royal Air Force fighter planes intercepted and shot down one of several German warplanes which raided Britain's east coast today and bombed and machine-gunned vessels off shore.

The Air Ministry said a German bomber crashed near North Berwick, on the south shore of the Firth of Forth near the mouth and only 20 miles east of Edinburgh, after being attacked by R.A.F. fighters.

Another German plane was engaged over the northeast coast and still others attacked ships.

Three British pursuit planes were unable to catch one raider which machine-gunned vessels along the coast, and later two German warplanes bombed a ship off the Scottish coast and were believed to have escaped.

Lifeboat Swamped.

Two men were feared lost when a lifeboat from one attacked vessel, identified as the 800-ton dredger Foremost, was swamped. Lifeboats and fishing smacks put out to the rescue.

A small fishing boat was reported machine-gunned and bombed in another plane attack off Scarborough but was said to have returned to port safely.

The Firth of Forth contains the naval base of Rosyth and frequently has been the target of raiding German planes.

Today's raids were the first of the week, following three waves on Monday, Tuesday and Saturday of last week.

Three raiders were shot down on Saturday.

Another German plane was engaged today over the northeast coast the air ministry said.

The downed German plane, believed to be a Heinkel bomber, was shot down near North Berwick on the south shore of the Firth of Forth.

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 9 (CP).—Eight year old Ian Finlay of Tory Hill, Haliburton County, is recovering from a fractured pelvic bone in the Red Cross Outpost Hospital in Haliburton today. He suffered the injury yesterday when a snow-plough rolled over on him near his home.

With several children, he climbed on the plough, which was being towed by a tractor. When the plough struck a rock on the road it turned over and pinned the lad beneath it. He will be in a cast for six weeks, doctors say.

Effective atmosphere! If we designate as "effective atmosphere" that portion which has or produces effects noticeable at the earth's surface, then the top of the atmosphere is about 600 miles high. At that height auroras have been observed. If we think of radio effects, that is, of layers of air which reflect radio waves making round-the-world reception possible, then the height is about 300 miles. But if we think of that layer concerned with weather phenomena, then the effective atmosphere is only about 10 or 12 miles thick. This thickness is about one-seventieth of an inch on a twelve-inch globe.

U. S. Credit to China Interpreted As American Pressure on Japan

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (AP).—Possibility of a new United States credit for China was widely interpreted today as evidence of American pressure on Japan.

Although official sources declined comment, some Japanese considered the proposal a sign that efforts to better relations with Washington thus far were unsuccessful and fear of an American embargo increased.

(Jesse H. Jones, United States Federal Loan Administrator, has disclosed that China, which already has been given commercial credits of $25,000,000, probably would get additional credits of $20,000,000 for purchases in America.)

If the United States Congress should adopt an embargo against Japan "it would be a very serious matter," Yachichiro Suma, the foreign office spokesman, said at a press conference.

Suma said Premier Mitsumasa Yonai had assured the Japanese diet that Japan was preparing to meet any decline in American-Japanese relations. The spokesman would not say whether this included military preparations.

Helsingfors, Feb. 9 (AP)—Continuation of Russian assaults on the Mannerheim line on the Karelian Isthmus despite heavy Red army losses was reported today by the Finnish high command.

In the Summa sector, where Russia claimed her forces had taken eight of 13 Mannerheim line forts captured in the last few days, the Fins said the invaders yesterday were repulsed with "heavy losses" while a number of attacks in the region of Punnunoki and Panuri were "beaten off, the enemy losing about 700 men and 12 tanks."

Further east on the Isthmus, in the Taipale River sector, the army said a battle precipitated by a "powerful attack" by the Russians "still continues."

Northeast of Lake Ladoga—where the Russians claimed the other five of the 13 captured forts fell to their forces—the army announcement said "heavy fighting continued; the enemy has been repulsed at all points."

Emergency Operation Is Performed On Lord Tweedsmuir

Ottawa, Feb. 9 (CP).—A bulletin from Government House at 1:15 p.m. EST today reported the condition of Lord Tweedsmuir as "more critical" and the performing of an emergency operation.

"His Excellency's condition became more critical throughout the night, and this morning at Government House an emergency trephining operation was performed which has temporarily relieved the increased intracranial pressure."

Concern Felt In Canada.

Throughout the morning a waiting Dominion had gone without official news of his Excellency's condition since the bulletin at 7:40 p.m. EST last night which reported the Governor-General as having "spent a restful afternoon and there is no essential change in his condition.

Shortly after the 64-year-old Governor-General suffered the concussion in a fall which came after a fainting spell early Tuesday, Drs. Penfield and Russel were summoned from Montreal.

Later Dr. Penfield returned to Montreal but as his Excellency's strength ebbed while he fought for recovery Dr. Penfield and Dr. Cone were recalled.

Statement Issued.

While it was in progress anxious questioners had kept telephone lines to Government House busy with inquiries as to Lord Tweedsmuir's condition. But until the official statement from the five doctors was made known there was no information of any kind.

During this time the most reassuring word from Government House, and none too reassuring at that, was that the usual daily progress report might be expected between 12 o'clock noon and 1 p.m.

It was some minutes after that that Sir Shuldham relayed the news of his Excellency's condition being "more critical".

SECRET SESSION AFTER RAIDS ON GESTAPO OFFICES

FIRST IN 20 YEARS

Paris, Feb. 9—(CP)—The Chamber of Deputies went into a secret session today to discuss the government's conduct of the war after Premier Edouard Daladier had disclosed recent raids on Gestapo (German secret police) offices in France.

Daladier said the raids had disclosed an elaborate questionnaire had been sent to the agents from Germany asking about the Premier's prestige, his friends and his adversaries.

"It is today's session of parliament which will answer those questions for them," the Premier said.

Daladier told newspapermen that the questionnaire directed the German agents to report on the attitude of the French people toward England.

The Premier requested that the debate take place in public but the house voted 262 to 227 to meet in secret committee, the first such sitting in more than 20 years. The secret sitting was requested mainly by the Socialists.

Read Questionnaire

Daladier read the questionnaire, in which the agent was to tell whether Daladier himself is liked by the masses, how he would come out in a vote of confidence in parliament, who his enemies and

BLAST SHATTERS FIREWORKS PLANT IN CALIFORNIA

Three Cut by Shattering Glass and Watchman Severely Burned

CITY IS ROCKED

Redondo Beach, Calif., Feb. 9—(AP)—Explosions so violent that people 20 miles away thought they felt an earthquake shattered a fireworks plant.

The blast damaged a dozen houses in which people lay sleeping, debris from one shaken roof partially buried two people. Police said it was almost incredible that there had been no loss of life.

Rev. Nettie Denman, 50, occupant of a house 200 feet from the factory, was the most seriously injured.

She and her son, Eugene, 20, were thrown from their beds and battered by falling plaster. She suffered deep lacerations of the legs.

P. H. Bragg, also cut by flying debris, was sleeping in his bungalow less than 100 feet from the plant.

The 29 small structures in the factory lot, all levelled by the blast, were unoccupied.

PET LION DIES OF OLD AGE

North Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Honored burial in a pet cemetery was an African lion's reward today for nearly 22 years of being a faithful pet. Mrs. Mary McMillan obtained the sickly 'tawny" shortly after its birth in a circus in 1918, nursed it back to health and kept it in her home ever since. The animal died Wednesday of old age.

2 Persons Lose Lives by Fire In Residence at Timmins

3 Others Are Suffering From Third Degree Burns Received in Early Morning Blaze

BODIES RECOVERED

Timmins, Ont., Feb. 9 (CP).—Two persons lost their lives and three others are in hospital suffering from first degree burns as the result of a fire in a Maple street residence here early today.

Paul Plasika, Joseph Yonik and Bronc Panek, boarders at the house are being treated at hospital for burns and minor lacerations about the arms, face and neck.

Whirling up through a hot air pipe, fire of unknown origin swept through the living room of the house and raged fiercely.

Breaking through the back door to get at the fire firemen found the unconscious body of John Sikura lying in the doorway. They administered oxygen and artificial respiration and when Sikura regained consciousness, he was removed to the hospital. He died later of third degree burns according to the medical attendant.

Housekeeper Found In Closet.

Albenia Fermanic, housekeeper at the house, could not be located and when one of the boarders asked Fire Chief Borland as to her whereabouts he sent a suad of firemen in to search the house. A search had been made when firemen first arrived but no one was to be found.

As the flames died, firemen opened a closet door which stood ajar in the bedroom near the living room. There against the wall, slumped with a fur coat around her thinly clad shoulders, the woman was found by firemen. The medical attendant indicated she had died from suffocatio since only minor burns on the shoulder were to be found on her person,

Firemen suggested that she had raced to the closet to put on her fur coat before going out into the frigid night air and she had been suffocated before she could follow Sikura out to the back door.

JUDICATURE BILL NOWBEINGARGUED IN LEGISLATURE

Attorney General Meeting Stiff Opposition in Bill to Abolish Grand Juries

DREW CRITICAL

Conant Says Bill Will Not Impair Rights but Will Make Cost Lower

Toronto, Feb. 9. — (CP)—Third straight party debate of the present session of the Ontario Legislature was scheduled to be resumed today with the government measures to streamline the administration of justice in the province as the bone of contention.

Second reading debate on Attorney-General Conant's Bill to abolish grand juries and to reduce the number of jurors in county court civil actions from twelve to six was started yesterday by Mr. Conant. When the House adjourned Conservative Leader George A. Drew still had the floor and called the Bill an "encroachment of Fascism".

"We talk a great deal about the necessity of relieving the burden on our taxpayers—they who must bear the cost of the administration of justice," said Mr. Conant. "This Bill constitutes at least a substantial beginning in that direction and, I am convinced, without in any way jeopardizing the liberty or impairing the rights of any citizen."

HOWE DEALS WITH ECONOMIC SIDE OF WAR EFFORT

Canada Entered War as Well Equipped Economically as Any Country in World Says Transport Minister

FIRST ADDRESS

Ottawa, Feb. 9 (CP). — Canada entered the war as well equipped economically as any country in the world, in the opinion of Transport Minister Howe, and any scarcity of uniforms or personal equipment which existed in the first months has been overcome.

Mr. Howe made his first speech in the general election campaign when he appeared last night at a convention which selected George McIlraith, local barrister, as Liberal candidate in Ottawa West.

Purpose of the Liberal government, if elected, was to continue the methods it followed from the start in prosecuting the war and he was convinced it had done "a good job" so far.

Conservative leader Manion had promised a National government but Mr. Howe warned the electors they should inquire what policy such a government would have on railways, labor and other domestic questions.

No better men than those now in the government or drafted to head its various war organizations would be available to Dr. Manion for his national government, he said. The present government had engaged for

Garrisons of Maginot Line Know No Distinction Between Day, Night

(By Taylor Henry, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Feb. 9—(AP) — Wartime life for the garrisons of France's Maginot line is a strange mixture of the monkish and the military with monotony as an accompaniment and daylight a rarity worthy of exclamation.

Secluded in the subterranean depths of the great fortresses all they know of the war is what they read in the papers, usually two days old.

In their artificially - lighted chambers, the soldiers know no distinction between day and night, fair weather and foul. When they go into the line they got to stay, cut off from the world above except for 10-day leaves every four months.

Because the line's big guns must be manned 24 hours a day, the self-styled "shellfish" troops may eat breakfast at midnight and dine heartily on soup, meat, potatoes and wine in the early morning.

Each man sleeps eight hours a day, but in the chill of winter he kicks off the covers, and in warm weather he needs blankets—for underground it is so cold in summer that a central heating system is used; and in winter the warmth of the earth is sufficient.

There are movies, radios, books and games to amuse the men. They may attend a movie after breakfast or tune in on setting-up exercises at dinnertime, depending on their shift.

Thanks to an elaborate air-conditioning system, designed to keep out gas, they can smoke cigarettes bought in the fortress canteens. These little underground stores also sell chocolate, stationery and similar items.

National Gov't to Have Outstanding Men of Dominion

Hon. R. J. Manion Opens Election Campaign at Brockville With Promise of Truly National Gov't. if Elected

POLICY OUTLINED

Maintenance of Separate Identity of Canada's Two Railway Systems Advocated by Leader — Scores Inefficiency and Extravagance of King Gov't.

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 9.—(CP)—Voluntary military service and the maintenance of the separate identity of Canada's two railway systems will remain the policies of the National Conservative party under a National Government headed by Hon. R. J. Manion.

The Conservative leader opened his general election campaign here last night with a plea for a united Canadian effort in the prosecution of the war and the promise that under a National government as proposed by him the outstanding men of the nation, regardless of politics would be brought into the government. Thus, he said, efficiency and economy would replace the incompetence, inefficiency and extravagance of the Mackenzie King government.

Already, said Dr. Manion, malicious, despicable rumors were being whispered about regarding his National government proposal. He was as much opposed to conscription and railway unification now as ever. Yet in parts of the country where conscription was unpopular opponents were seeking to lick conscription with National government and among railway men it was being whispered National government railway amalgamation.

Dr. Manion denied both suggestions. . On the railway question, his own opposition and that of his party was the same as it had been, opposition to unification.

CO-EDS PAYING BILLS ON DATES

Leap-Year Wooing Hitting Feverish Pace on Campus of Indiana College

Indianapolis, Feb. 9 — (AP)—This is "leap week" at Indiana Central College, and the co-eds are paying the bills on dates. The men, naturally, like it. And so, believe it or not, do the girls.

Leap-year wooing is hitting a feverish pace on the campus in the seven days ending with St. Valentine's Day.

No holds are barred, but the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. have agreed on these rules:

1. Any Co-ed may ask any man for a date—and unless he's already dated up, she gets one.

2. She pays for everything—whether sodas at the corner drugstore or dinner and a show downtown.

Last night—opening night—experienced campus observers figured there were 75 dates.

Mounties' Red Coats Originated Through Indians' Love of Red

Montreal, Feb. 9 (CP) — Royal Canadian Mounted Police came by their red tunics because Indians with whom the original mounties, the Northwest Mounted Police, had to deal in the '70s, thought any but scarlet coats were beneath the dignity of the Queen's representatives.

Superintendent Henri Royal Gagnon, Officer Commanding the R.C.M.P here, told the story of the force's famed red coats to a service club today.

The officer who has made a study of the history of the Mounties said Indians of Canada's Northwest in the '70s had come to respect red coats through their dealings with the Sixth Imperial Regiment.

The police donned their red serge tunics in 1873 after Indians had suggested red was the color that should have been worn by all representatives of the forces of the "Great White Mother."

French Patrols Hold Initiative In Patrol Activity

Paris, Feb. 9 —(CP—Havas)—French troops have taken and kept the initiative in the resumption of patrol activity on the front, due to thawing weather, bringing back important information, French military sources reported today.

Numerous patrols on reconnaissance missions yesterday crossed No Man's Land and made contact with enemy outposts. Two of these expeditions succeeded in penetrating the German line to a considerable depth and, as was the case west of the Saar and in the Vosges during the two proceeding days managed to bring back valuable information.

The morning high command communique said: "Nothing to report."

ONE HOUR GIVEN TO SAY "GOOD NIGHT"

Minneapolis, Feb. 9. —(AP)—City Council members have not forgotten their youth. The Council police committee recommended changing the ordinance prohibiting all-night parking to permit-on-hour parking on all city streets between 2 a.m. and 6 p.m. "to give a young man time to say good night to his girl".

PARTIES AMICABLY SETTLE DAMAGES

Skidding on the icy pavement after the brakes had been suddenly applied to avoid striking pedestrians, who were crossing the street, an automobile driven by Mrs. H. O. Trusdale, 159 Ann St., collided with other parked automobiles at the bottom of the East Bridge St. hill early last evening. Mrs. Trusdale informed P. C. Evans, who investigated, that two men had crossed the street as she was driving down the hill, which forced her to apply the brakes of the vehicle. The skidding motor car swerved on the icy pavement and struck Frank Correll's parked car. Another parked automobile, owned by Edward Little, Ottawa, also suffered damage. Fender and running board damage only resulted and the matter of restitution was amicably settled.

Flag to be Flown At Half-Staff For Three Days

In reverence to the memory of the Belleville soldiers who fall in the line of duty overseas, the flag atop the pole on the Army and Navy Veteran Building on Front Street will be flown at half-staff for a period of three days following the receipt of the official communication from the War Office, members of that organization decided at their regular meeting last night.

Today the flag will be lowered to half-staff to the memory of Flying Officer John White, R.A.F., of this city, reported missing and believed to have lost his life, while taking part in air operations a few days ago, and Private Lee Keech, Hillier, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, who died a few days ago in an English military hospital.

Other business concluded at the meeting included the bestowal of an honorary life-membership of the club upon "Jamie" Clark, famous Scottish piper, and well-known war veteran and bandsman.

Army and Navy Veterans Warn General Public

Warning was issued today by officials of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada branch here, to the general public to the effect that itinerant canvassers who are offering veterans' calendars for sale, are in no way connected with their organization.

Complaints have been received by officials from widely divergent parts of the district, that these men are canvassing householders with their calendars for sale, and informing them that the proceeds are being used to purchase wood and coal for the Army and Navy Veterans clubhouse in Belleville.

"These men have absolutely no connection whatever with our organization," President Fred Wiggins said today, "and I would like to warn the public that these men are in all probability operating a racket and using our name in its furtherance."

"At no time have we ever had men out securing funds for us. There is no need for it. However, if these men are caught using the name of this organization they will be prosecuted," he added.

MUNICIPAL BAND TO HOLD CONCERT

New Overture "Riggsonia" Composed by R. Hinchey to be Played

Tribute to two of Belleville's outstanding musicians will be paid at the band concert sponsored by the Belleville Municipal Band at the McCarthy Theatre on Sunday night, when the new overture "Riggsonia" composed by Mr. Reg Hinchey, and dedicated to Mr. Leo Riggs, will be played for the first time.

The new composition, went into rehearsal in Toronto by a famous symphony band last week, and critics unanimously decided that the work is by far one of the best to issue from the Hinchey pen.

Another feature of the concert will be vocal solos by Mr. Harold Barrett, one of Belleville's outstanding baritones, who will be heard in several selections. Mayor Thompson will preside.

The program—March, Canton Halifax, Hall; Suite, Atlantis, Sanfranck; Solo, Harold Barrett; March, Hoosier Club, Baxter; Popular "Oh Johnny" arr. Cooper; Tone Poem, Finlandia, Sibelius; Solo, Harold Barrett; Overture "Riggsonia", Hinchey; March El Capitan, Sousa; "Till we meet again."

Many of the scenes are historical and include scenes in London before declaration of war and immediately after the evacuation of children, sand-bagging of important buildings, scenes of air raid alarms, balloon barrage and preparation for blackouts.

There are many more 'shots' equally interesting having to do with the calling up of recruits and how the manhood of Britain responded to the call of King and Country.

The picture was made in England with the co-operation of the British government which fact lends authority to the correctness of the picture as a whole.

VETERANS ASSIST LEGION CAMPAIGN

Quota for This District Set at $2,000 and Opens on Monday

Officials and members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch 201, at their regular meeting last night, shook the cobwebs of organization differences from their shoulders and by a large majority vote decided to sponsor the local campaign to raise funds for the Canadian Legion War Auxiliary's drive that starts from coast to coast on Feb. 12th.

The Legion Auxiliary has set a Dominion quota of one-half million dollars. Belleville will raise two thousand dollars as its share.

The newly formed auxiliary will endeavor to give Canada's new army the benefit of the experience of veterans of the last war and will assist in keeping the morale of Canada's fighters in the air, on the land and sea at the highest possible level and of so educating the young fighters that they will return to their native land trained to take their positions in civil life.

There was strenuous discussion regarding the local organization's efforts in the coming campaign. However, it was pointed out that due to the fact that there is no functioning branch of the Canadian Legion in this city, it was the duty of the brother organization to take the burden of the campaign on their shoulders.

"Forget these differences," one member stressed, "and let us do what we can for the boys that are going overseas."

A special meeting of the Army and Navy Veterans has been called for Monday, Feb. 12, when final arrangements for the successful carrying out of the campaign will be made. Prominent men of the city have already signified their intention of supporting the campaign and these no doubt will be asked to co-operate as soon as possible.

Annual School Dance

On Friday evening, the second of February, the annual "At Home" of the B.C.I.V.S. took place in the school's gymnasia. Always popular this year the dance had a record attendance, both gyms being filled throughout the evening with dancing couples. Mr. and Mrs. MacLaurin, Miss Brown, and Mr. Ferguson were the patrons. 'For their dancing pleasure' the music was provided by Ozzie Williams and his orchestra from Toronto, an innovation which everyone enoyed tremendously although all missed the familiar 'five' of the Commodores, who had been previously engaged. During the course of the dance several novelty numbers were introduced by the orchestra.

The decorations, this year, were carried out in the familiar black, scarlet and mauve of the school. Behind the orchestra was a large reproduction of the school crest; at each end of the gymnasia were the school letters.

At midnight, during intermission, light refreshments were served in the lower hall and here in the brighter lights, the charming dresses of the girls showed to advantage. One noticeably lovely dress was of black velvet and pale green net, with a full skirt. Another was of red chiffon with a wide girdle of gold sequins.

Another—but space is limited.

The dance was a great success both socially and financially, owing to the efforts of the dance committees. These are to be commended for their work and the fine results it produced.

Duke of Devonshire Addresses Welcome To Newfoundland Troops

Somewhere in Britain, Feb. 8 — (CP Cable)—From a mobile recording unit on the dockside of this west coast port, the Duke of Devonshire, Dominions Under-Secretary, today addressed a message of welcome to a group of Newfoundland specialists who have just arrived in England to do work of "vital national importance."

The son of Canada's former Governor-General had hoped to extend a personal greeting to the men of the oldest colony who crossed the Atlantic as convoy companions of Canada's third contingent.

The Duke was prevented from meeting them when their boat was diverted to another port at the last minute. Disappointed he decided to send his message in recorded form not only to the men but also to their countrymen at home.

"I am sorry indeed it is impossible for me to meet you as I had hoped but on behalf of His Majesty's government of the United Kingdom and the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs (Anthony Eden) I send you a message of welcome and hearty greeting... the Duke said.

"You will be working under new and strange conditions but you will be among friends who will appreciate greatly the way you have come to our help in our hour of need.

"I am not greeting you as an individual but as the representative of a government which thanks you for the way you have come to its aid.

"Once more Newfoundland has come to the help of the Old Country. We honor you; we thank you; we bid you hearty welcome."

Provision Made For Promotion From Ranks

Kingston, Feb. 9 (CP)—Defence Minister Rogers said here Wednesday night that so far as might be done the government is going "to make provision for promotion from the ranks to commissions" in the army.

Speaking at the nomination convention which chose him Liberal candidate for Kingston city in the March 26 election, Mr. Rogers said:—

"As one who served for a time as a private in the last war, I know something of the bitterness that developed among the soldiers with regard to political influence in high places.

"I resolved that if it lay in my power, I would prevent political influence from gaining control again under similar circumstances. I have no doubt that is the wish of the Canadian people. I am sure that decision (to bar patronage in army promotions) must be maintained if those men who now wear the uniform are to serve us worthily."

FULL MEASURE OF DEVOTION

Two homes in this district have felt the stern realities of war with the receipt of names of two young men in the casualty lists.

Flying Officer John Arthur Charles White is officially reported missing and believed to have lost his life in air operations on Tuesday of this week according to a cablegram received from the British Air Ministry at London, by Mrs. S. J. Price, his mother. He is the first Belleville casuality to be reported. Private Lee Keech of Hillier died in hospital in England as a result of illness. News of his death was received from Ottawa by his wife, Mrs. Florence Keech. Relatives of the Keech family live in this city. Private Keech went overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Through the poignancy of their emotions, these families experience the deep sense of pride in the service these men have been privileged to render on the altar of service for their King and Country.

The news concerning Flying Officer White leaves a keen sense of loss and also of pride in the achievements of this bright young officer who has made a fine record in the Royal Air Force. Just a few years ago he was a news carrier for this newspaper office. Airminded, he saw his opportunity and was soon to realize his ambition. A little over three years ago he made his way to England and there began that service in the R.A.F. which had been the object of his life. His rise was rapid as was foreseen by those who had known him and he soon received his commission.

With the optimism of youth and loyalty and experience of a well trained flying offcier he was able to serve with distinction and according to the best traditions of his British ancestry and the news from the Air Ministry bears out the wholehearted nature of his service. His life was devoted to the cause of freedom. He has been a noble example to those who knew him as a boy and youth and as a member of the R.A.F.

Private Lee Keech, who enlisted at Picton, was not privileged to reach the front but his devotion had led him to place his life at the service of the Empire. He had been training for months for the day when he would be in the battleline but his fate did not allow him that final privilege of so serving. He has given his life for his country as others who have fallen in action.

He was engaged in agriculture and had spent his life from childhood in Prince Edward County. He thought not of sacrifice and immediately offered his services to his country. To his widow and family and relatives in Prince Edward and Belleville, is left the memory of a devoted husband and father and friend and a gallant soldier who recked not the cost when the call for duty came.

CARELESS WORDS OF GOSSIP DANGER IN WAR TIME

To know the importance of keeping one's information to oneself is good at any time, but to scatter discretion to the winds and idly gossip about matters concerning the plans and the details of the war is a grave offence.

Prime Minister Chamberlain mentioned that the other day in the House of Commons. British posters of which a vast number are to be put up in public places all through the United Kingdom, particularly where there is concourse of people in a social way, add point to the statement of the Premier. These illustrated posters show the sinking of ships and such disasters as may be the result of idle words spoken in the hearing of someone who is an enemy of the state and who may see that the news reaches the enemy.

Particularly stressed are warnings against discussing news of shipping. Here is a sample caption under a large illustration of a sinking vessel—"A few careless words may end in this. Many lives were lost in the last war through careless talk. Be on your guard! Don't discuss movements of ships or troops!"

A poster says, "Keep it under your hat.

Another poster shows a scene in a cafe. A girl and young man are talking over a table. One of them says, "Of course there is no harm in your knowing." Under the table is seen Adolf Hitler lying on the floor with pencil noting down the conversation.

Advice in rhyme is given Britishers. In one verse Hitler is shown intently listening and the rhyme proceeds:

> "Whether alone or in a crowd,
> Never write or say out loud
> What you are loading, whence you hail,
> Where you're bound for when you sail."

Another jingle runs:

> "If you've news of our munitions, keep it dark;
> Ships or planes or troop positions, keep it dark;
> Lives are lost through conversation;
> Here's a tip for the duration;
> When you've private information,
> Keep it dark."

These warnings should be heeded. The best-laid plans which take months to work out and which involve the lives of soldiers, sailors, fliers and civilians as well as equipment, may be upset by wanton words thoughtlessly spoken or scraps of information dropped in conversation. If valuable information falls into the hands of the enemy, the plans are worse than if they had not been laid for discovery might give the foe a great advantage and lives might be lost.

NAZI PEACE PLANS RUMORED

Rumors of Reich peace moves in the two wars in Europe are denied by the Nazis but they persist in Scandinavia. One story is that Hitler is hoping to have mediation begun in the Russo-Finn conflict successfully launched by his envoys at Moscow and Helsinki and to have a neutral, at present unnamed, bring the other war peace move to the League of Nations.

Whether there are moves or not, the terms, which are mentioned, seem to agree well with those which the people of the world believe to be in the mind of Hitler, if he could gain a breathing space by some measure of peace. If the Nazi mind is behind these reported terms, it shows the old Prussian idea, the Prussian wooden-headedness, which cannot get a new idea into its brain.

Here are the terms mentioned:

—Neither side to claim reparation.

—Plebiscite in Austria on Austrian unity with the Reich.

—A commission of belligerents to discuss the possibility of establishing Czechs, Poles and Slovaks as small independent states with guarantees never to take up arms against Germany.

In France there is an opinion that the Nazis may make an effort to prevent expending of Russian energies in Finland for it is foreseen that next month will witness the beginnings of the thaw which will make the lake areas of Finland impossible for army manoeuvres. Germany apparently would want to see Russia saving resources for some other adventure which would suit the Nazis better.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Panic — Nature, Causes and Treatment

Some months ago an earthquake which was felt for nearly half an hour throughout a large part of the world caused panic or near panic in many individuals. The nearness of war, the shadow of financial ruin, fires in theatres, epidemics, all affect people and cause damage to their nervous system just as a blow or a fall may cause damage to the body itself. And the treatment of this mind or psychic injury is as important if not more important than the treatment of disease or physical injury.

Panics which occur in the course of earthquakes, fires, explosions, shipwrecks, develop within many of those affected a fear neurosis. This fear neurosis acts upon the mind or consciousness of the individual in such a way that he is not his own or normal self. His fear looms so large in his life that he becomes unduly or senselessly excited and unable to perform the ordinary duties of his life or business.

In speaking of the effects of these sudden happenings, Dr. E. Bircher, Basel, in the Swiss Medical Journal says:

"The thin upper layer of consciousness is destroyed by the unexpected catastrophe and the strong instincts of the subconscious come suddenly to the surface and rule the mind and behaviour. The most important of these subconscious instincts is self-preservation—trying to save one's own life. If this instinct becomes manifest in a mass, mass fear results, which may degenerate into wild, uncontrolled flight. At the onset, not all members of the group are in the grip of this fear; it is enough that some who are naturally nervously unstable are overcome by this fear, and in a mysterious epidemic suggestion everybody, even the strongest, is carried along."

"In the treatment of panics, personalities with self possession, resolute determination, and clear vision are most important for they will know how to overcome the panic by the power of suggestion."

Discipline from those in authority is of some help but "discipline which comes from within and which is based on conviction or a great idea, is stronger than that which comes from the outside."

Life in Polish Capital Under the German Conquerors

In spite of drastic Nazi attempts to establish order in Poland life in Warsaw is still far from normal. This can be clearly learnt from the press and the statements of Poles who managed to leave the country after the war. Almost a third of the capital is still in ruins and the prices of food are excessively high. Clothing is scarce. A pound of potatoes now costs over fourpence and bread is six times the pre-war price. Theoretically the Nazi rulers are supposed to issue twice weekly half a pound of bread a head, but in practice this is done only once a week. Meat is scarce and dear. Lard costs five times as much as before.

A great shortage of petrol, coal, and glass is felt. Petrol costs seven zlotys a litre, which is seven times more than before, and coal comes to 100 zlotys (over £4) a ton. The price paid for window panes comes often to £1, and even at that price glass is not obtainable.

Owing to the shortage of petrol the buses have not been allowed to run. Only a few tram lines are working, chiefly those linking the centre of the city with Zolibor, one of the finest suburbs of Warsaw.

As the Nazis do not allow any Poles to walk the city after certain hours at night the former night life so characteristic of Warsaw has completely disappeared. Cafes and restaurants are, however, open and even crowded. But it is enough for a German officer to enter any cafe to cause many Poles to walk out immediately in protest. The Germans are shunned. Most of them prefer to keep to their own company, knowing that they will find no one wishing to associate with them.

There is little talk, as everyone is afraid of the Gestapo, which is everywhere. The familiar reading of newspapers in the cafes has ceased.

Trade and commerce still exist, but on a limited scale. Most of the larger shops have been destroyed: those which remained were emptied by the Nazis soon after their arrival and the goods taken away or sent to Germany.

The water reservoirs have already been partially mended, and there is now sufficient water in the centre of Warsaw, but the suburbs are still not properly supplied. Gas and electricity are still limited. Only three districts in Warsaw have gas, and less than half Warsaw has electricity.

Although many houses are in ruins there is no special shortage of flats and rooms. This is because many inhabitants have been evacuated or have fled, while thousands of Polish families are still leaving Warsaw for the country, where life is less unbearable and where the Germans are not seen in such large numbers as in Warsaw.

Culturally Warsaw is almost a dead city. Very few schools have been allowed to reopen, and most of the school buildings are still occupied by the invaders. In addition, the Nazis have now started a revision of all Polish school books and are not allowing the use of the old ones. The tendency is now for several families to join together and arrange makeshift schools for their children where Polish history is taught by heart and national songs sung quietly and sadly.

Cheerfulness, merriment, and music have completely disappeared from a city which was the gayest and most lively in Eastern Europe. Not even the wireless can be heard, as all wireless sets have been taken away by the Nazis.—From the Manchester Guardian.

Navy Blimps Pressed Into Service To Feed Thousands of Starving Ducks

Jersey City, N. J. February 8—United States Navy blimps and a rowboat "fleet" manned by deputy game wardens have been pressed into service in a campaign by the State Fish and Game Commission to save tens of thousands of broadbill ducks threatened with starvation by the freezing of their winter feeding grounds along the New Jersey coast, Harry M. Armstrong, a member of the commission, revealed here.

The blimps, he said, are operated from their Lakehurst base, dropping tons of grain every other day on the ice-locked coves of a sixty-five-mile strip of coast. Although broadbills predominate in the area, large flocks of mallards and black ducks are also being forced to depend upon the State for food.

Before blimps were sent to their aid a horde of broadbills, which are known to science as "greater scaups," deserted the coast, Mr. Armstrong said, and descended upon the Jersey City waterfronts two weeks ago to seek snails, mussels and clams in New York Bay. But, although they found open water, the food was insufficient.

"There is a total of between 35,000 and 50,000 broadbills at the marshland of Jersey City," Mr. Armstrong said. "Before we began feeding them they were dying of starvation by the score. And as quickly as they died the seagulls pounced on them. Two deputy game wardens brought me a dead broadbill last Saturday. It was emaciated, about half its normal weight.

"A similar condition has just been reported on the Passaic River. Now the deputy game wardens are going out in rowboats and feeding them tons of grain provided by the commission."

Mr. Armstrong said the plight of the ducks has not been so serious since the winter of 1936.

The Italian Question Mark

Italy made war so willingly on Ethiopia and Albania that at first sight it may seem strange to see her in the role of peacemaker in the Balkans. Her past adventures are, however, the most convincing explanation of her present prudence. Her people are tired. Apparently they have had enough of military "glory." Already they are being taxed on a scale comparable to England's, and their country is suffering from a serious lack of raw materials. Such reasons are enough to account for Italy's strict "nonbelligerency" and for the skillful and persistent efforts of Italian diplomacy to strengthen peace in the neighboring Balkan Peninsula.

Italy did not want this war in Europe to begin when it did. Her agreement with Germany provided that Italy would not enter a European war for three years. When the German onslaught against Poland was imminent, Signor Mussolini made unavailing efforts to divert it; for Italy was not ready for a new adventure, and knew that a European war would strike at neutrals and belligerents alike. Italian spokesmen still talk incessantly of being ready for war at any minute, presumably in case Russia attempts a Balkan invasion; but a far better clue to Italy's immediate intentions is to be seen in the furious work of internal reconstruction now going on in Rome. Italian coal supplies are reported to have dwindled so seriously in this abnormally cold Winter that 130 trains have been removed from the railroad time-tables, and factories in the north are on the verge of shutting down because their coal reserves have all but disappeared. This is not a picture of a country ready for instant war.

Nevertheless, Italy remains a question-mark. She cannot be classed in the ranks of the "satisfied" nations, and seems determined to continue economic and diplomatic policies that must disappear if sanity is to be restored to Europe. Only last month Signor Muti, the new Fascist Secretary-General, announced that Italy would accentuate the "master directives of the Empire—race and autarchy"—the senseless policy of economic autarchy which Italy, of all Great Powers, is the least able to bear.—N.Y. Says Cancer is Infectious

In a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Joseph W. Mountin and Dr. Harold F. Dorn, both of Washington, D.C., two physicians with the United States Public Health Service who studied the death certificates and reports of cases of cancer under treatment, found a wide greographic variation in the occurrence of cancer.

Rates Contrasted

They concluded:

"The existence of significant differences not only in the total amount of cancer but also in types of lesions indicates that contributory factors perhaps multiple and varied, may be found in the environment.

"For example, in Rhode Island 156 persons per 100,000 population (using 1930 census figures), died of cancer during 1937, as contrasted with 52 for South Carolina."

"In other words, three times as many people, in relation to the total population, succumbed to cancer annually in the state of highest, as compared with the one of lowest, experience."

Differences only slightly less were reported for other states, New York and New England having "between two and three times" as much cancer as the south. The states around the Great Lakes and bordering on the Pacific Ocean had "rates well above the average for the entire country."

This report is exceedingly interesting and baffling to the medical profession, writes Dr. J. E. Hett in the Windsor Star, for they have no explanation to offer. They take various considerations, such as habits of all sorts as well as diet into consideration, and the reports become shrouded in a fog of adverse opinion and there it lies. Having been interested in the cancer problem for forty-seven years and having come to various conclusions as regards the cause of cancer; the cure of cancer and the prevention of cancer, I have no hesitation whatever in saying that it is high time that the fog which has dimmed the ideas of the profession for thousands of years be lifted and it can certainly be lifted and dispelled. The profession has universally accepted the fallacy of believing that cancer is not contagious or infectious.

Now Convinced

My investigation and researches have convinced me beyond the shadow of any doubt that cancer is infectious. When the report of the United States officials is viewed from that standpoint, it is perfectly evident that environment is a factor in the cause of cancer.

On July 25, 1939, I gave my opinion to the press as regards the cause of cancer, and in it are three factors which are absolutely essential, namely: Irritation, ultra-microscopic germs or a virus and an imbalance of the endocrine glands. Two factors alone cannot cause cancer. It must have a combination of the three factors.

In the article it was pointed out that a person can have the virus or ultra-microscopic germs of cancer present in a person all their lifetime and still not have cancer. However, when the endocrine glands are out of balance and there is an irritation, cancer will develop.

In the statistics compiled by the United States Public Health Service, it is quite clear that in some parts of the country there exists far more cancer than in another part. Now there must be a cause for this—you can never have an effect in anything without a cause—and it is up to the medical profession to find out the reason for such a state of affairs when cancer is so much on the increase.

Stumbling Block

Since I began the study of cancer over 47 years ago, I have for many years been under the same opinion as the profession of medical colleges and research workers who claimed that cancer is not contagious or infectious. This is the dominant opinion of the profession today.

However, about twenty years ago I became very dubious and fifteen years ago I came to the conclusion that the profession is wrong, and I became convinced that there was a virus or ultra-microscopic germs which were the dominating cause of cancer and that it was infectious.

To me it is so clear and evident that it is surprising that this is not known today and that the profession is groping in the dark as regards this question. The stumbling block has been and is today that the profession expects cancer to develop in these persons quickly if there is infection.

According to my theory of cancer this is not to be expected at all, for there are three different factors which must all be present before cancer can develop namely: Irritation, ultra-microscopic germs or virus and an imbalance of the endocrine glands.

There are a few localities in the world where there is no cancer. It has been stated that there is no cancer in Tibet, where outsiders are but rarely admitted, and also in the northern part of Iceland. It has been discovered also that in certain sections of South America there was no cancer, but after a white traveler with his wife who had cancer came in contact with the Indians, cancer developed amongst them.

In England

Over 65 years ago Dr. Haviland published a map in which he pointed out that more cases of cancer occurred in the southern and eastern counties of England than elsewhere. Forty years ago a committee of the British Medical Association found that cancer was very prevalent in some districts and very rare in others.

Dr. Ghetti, of Faenza, pointed out that Romagna in Italy was a very nest of cancer. Cancer occurred in nearly every physician's family. In the village of Mezzano cancer occurred in almost every family. Castiglione de Cervia, another village, long enjoyed immunity from cancer. Then a case developed and cancer began to spread amongst the families.

The diet of all the people in the districts in Italy where there is a great deal of cancer and in the districts where there is very little is practically the same, so that the question of diet can readily be dismissed.

Diet and constipation do not cause cancer outside of being one or two of the factors, namely, in causing irritation and an imbalance of the endocrine glands. There must be another factor and that is the virus or ultra-mocriscopic germ, and these germs are transmitted by infection.

When these localities are studied in that light it is easy to understand why cancer is on the increase.

Before the days of the auto, electric cars and railways, people would not travel far from their villages. Consequently it is easily seen that the neighbors would mingle quite a bit with the families in the district in which they resided, and so it is quite evident that wherever a case of cancer occurred infection could be easily propogated.

On Sunday, December 3, 1939, whilst traveling on the train to Windsor, I became acquainted with a senator, and in our conversation he asked me the question why there was so much more cancer in a certain town than in other places. He stated that his sister belonged to a club of ladies, ten in the group, who often met to play bridge. She died with cancer, as did six others of this group, and while only three now living he was naturally keeping tab on them. He stated he had asked over a dozen physicians for an explanation, and all the answers he could get were that it just happened and that they did not know. When my theory is applied, it is as simple as 2 plus 2 are 4.

Sometimes Cancer develops within one or two years after exposure, but that is the exception. Many people carry the virus for 20 to 30 years or more before cancer develops, and some in whom there is no imblance of the endocrine glands never have cancer.

You need not look around very long, if you desire to find out that in numerous families both the husband and wife died of cancer. There is no blood heredity there. In my histories, I invariably find out if anyone who has cancer and no history of cancer in their family, that this person afflicted with the disease has been in contact with some person afflicted with cancer.

Points to Cases

I have seen a few cases recently where the disease was contracted within a year. In both cases these patients, one aged 36, who frequently visited a friend who had cancer of the lung, and another lady aged 32 years who nursed her mother-in-law with a uterine cancer, that now both have the same trouble. I know of a nurse who cared for an elderly lady in New York, who contracted cancer following the death of her cancer patient, and then her patient's daughter, who also died of cancer.

I have at present a patient with cancer of the aesophagus. There was not a single case of cancer in his family record. I said: "Have you been in contact with any cancer patients." He replied that his father-in-law died of cancer of the aesophagus five years ago and "we lived in the same house."

Another case is in a lady who motored with a lady to Florida two years ago who had cancer of the lungs. Now she is afflicted.

Another case is in a lady whose mother-in-law died of cancer two years ago. She nursed her.

Another case is in a lady who boarded with a family thirty years ago when the husband had cancer.

Another case is in a lady who often visited another lady 25 years ago and did her washing.

Another case is in a lady who frequently visited a lady with cancer three years ago.

Now, in none of these cases, was there cancer in the family history.

Three in Family

Another case of a young lady who is afflicted with cancer. Where did she contract it? The history showed that her father died 20 years ago with cancer. Her mother at present is also afflicted with cancer. There is no family history of cancer on the father's or the mother's family side. Yet, here is the situation. The father died of cancer, the only daughter and the widow now are afflicted.

I could give many more incidences. I am sure that once it is recognized that the ultra-microscopic germs are essential as one of the factors of cancer then we can look to the whole of the cancer problem in a sensible manner and the profession will also come to the conclusion that cancer is infectious.

We read and hear a great deal about heredity in cancer. The profession and the public believe that heredity is responsible for a large number of cases of cancer. Some families are literally wiped out. You hear a great deal at times about some people saying that such and such a person belongs to a cancer family, and I have frequently come across persons who feel somewhat depressed as they speak about the different members of their families who succumbed to the disease. The profession often refers to an hereditary tendency in cancer.

I maintain that the question of heredity in cancer at present is in about the same position as the question of heredity in tuberculosis was before the day of the discovery of the tubercular germ.

Science does not recognize now that tuberculosis is hereditary, for it is known to be contagious and infectious.

The time is close at hand when medical science also will recognize the fact that cancer is not hereditary. This information should be a great comfort to those who have been under the impression that they belonged to a cancer family.

Let not the public be alarmed—so I will state again that a person may have the ultra-microscoic germs of virus in his system for many years or all his lifetime and never take cancer providing the endocrine glands are functioning properly.

It is essential that people should endeavor to live in harmony with nature's laws as much as possible.

HAD RHEUMATIC PAIN FOR YEARS

Mrs. Frenkish Says: "My Knees and Feet Were Simply Full of Pain — Couldn't Sleep — But Now, My Suffering is Relieved by Mosby's Tonic. This Medicine is the Finest Thing I Ever Took!"

Day after day, more people continue to flock to Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn dealer, 228 Front Street, where this new Scientific Formula, known as MOSBY'S

MRS. E. E. FRANKISH

TONIC, is being sold in large quantities. And some of the best known residents of this section are coming forward daily with Sincere Statements, describing what Mosby's Tonic did for them. For instance, just a few days ago, Mrs. E. E. Frankish, of 118 Sorauren Ave., Toronto, Ont., made the following statement.

Years of Distress Due to Rheumatic Pains

For years I had suffered with rheumatic pains in my knees and feet," said Mrs. Frankish. "They were simply FULL of these pains. Almost unbearable at times. My feet were swollen way beyond normal, and at times I couldn't put on my shoes. I also had a badly upset stomach. I didn't know what it was to get a decent night of sleep.

"Now, as I said, this suffering had been going on with me for YEARS, and getting worse all the time, and although I tried many medicines I never got any real relief. Then one day I read about Mosby's Tonic in the newspapers I went to the Drug Store at once and got this medicine, and oh! what a splendid thing it turned out to be. It has given me RELIEF! How different I feel now! Before the first bottle was gone I could feel those rheumatic pains leaving my feet and knees. It has reduced the swelling in my feet, and another thing, this medicine had a fine action on my stomach. It has cleared out the gas and bloating. I gladly give this statement endorsing Mosby's Tonic to the public and hope what I have to say will help many others."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach; Helps You in General

MOSBY'S TONIC acts in several ways at one and the same time. That is, it contains 20 ingredients, including 15 Roots and Herbs. So it helps you IN GENERAL. It cleanses the bowels and clears gas and bloat from stomach. It enlivens the liver, cleans sickening bile from the system and relieves biliousness, sick headaches and yellowish "muddy" complexion. It invigorates the kidney action and relieves night rising and backache. Weak, rundown people soon feel like different men and women.

Another thing—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. It is within the reach OF ALL! In fact, you can actually take this Splendid Formula for just a few cents per day. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic —NOW—and start taking it!

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, your Tamblyn dealer, 228 Front Street.

PERSONALS

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Reid, Johnson Street, on Wednesday in the form of surprise sleigh-riding party in honour of the birthday of their son, Edwin. He received many lovely gifts. Games were enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served.

Under the auspices of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, a very enjoyable Valentine dance attracted a large crowd to the Oddfellows' Hall on Tuesday evening. Clare's six-piece orchestra provided a splendid dance program. The spot dances were interesting features of the evening and were won by Clara Ironsides and Rosalyn Hart, Chrissie Palmer and B. Leavitt.

Valentine decorations in gay profusion made a charming setting for the afternoon tea held yesterday in Bridge Street United church parlours under the auspices of the W.A. group of which Mrs. S. Fox is convener and Mrs. F. Correll is co-convener. The tea proved one of the most successful held by the Women's Association and the proceeds were very gratifying. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. C. L. Hyde, president of the W. A., and Mrs. S. Fox, while Mrs. J. Moore and Mrs. G. A. Ferguson acted as hostesses in the living room. Cleverly designed Valentine decorations made an effective centrepiece for the tea table at which Mrs. B. D. Harns, Mrs. B. W. Moore, Mrs. H. S. McElrath and Mrs. Bert Howard poured tea. Mrs. E. Zeran, Mrs. Percy McGuire, Mrs. A. C. Reynolds, Mrs. R. Ward, Mrs. H. Fox, Mrs. S. E. Turney, Mrs. F. Correll, Mrs. S. Kerr, Mrs. J. Shanks, Mrs. A. Lazier, Mrs. J. Correll, Mrs. J. Grills, Mrs. W. J. Price, Mrs. W. Fox, Mrs. J. Barclay, Mrs. J. Hill, Mrs. Gerow, Mrs. Murker, Mrs. H. Broad, Mrs. F. Bolte, Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. J. Moore. The home cooking table found ready sale for the variety of delicious viands it contained. It was in charge of Mrs. H. L. Pearsall and Mrs. E. T. Truman while Mrs. D. Martin looked after the novelty table. Miss Ivy Dickens, Mrs. J. Pickering and Mrs. E. Thomas were treasurers for the afternoon.

WEDDINGS

RUSHLOW—HANNAH

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the chapel of St. Thomas' church by Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne on Wednesday, January 31, at six o'clock when Ethel Irene, youngest daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hannah, became the bride of Mr. Franklin Rushlow, youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. Rushlow. The bride looked charming in empire blue sheer with wine accessories. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hannah.

After the ceremony a dinner was served to twenty-five guests at the home of the bride's parents. The bridal couple received many beautiful and valuable gifts. They will reside in Belleville.

DAY—SALISBURY

A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening, February 7th., at the residence of Reverend Campbell, pastor of the United Church, Trenton, when Rhoda Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Salisbury, Massassaga, became the bride of Clarence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Day, Belleville. The bride looked charming in navy dress and hat with black accessories. The couple were attended by Miss Marion Sculthorpe and Mr. Clarence W. Welch of Belleville.

PRESBYTERIAN W.M.S.

The Presbyterian W.M.S. met Wednesday February 7th., in charge of Mrs. O. J. Reid's group with Mrs. Mantel as pianist. The opening hymn was "Lead us, Heavenly Father lead us", followed by Psalm 91, read by Mrs. Ranson. Prayer by the President, Mrs. Pargey. Hymn "All the way my Saviour Leads Me", was sung. Mrs. A. Cameron and Mrs. Ranson gave their reports.

Mrs. O. J. Reid discussed the current events. Mrs. Ranson gave a report on the Presbyterial held in Kingston, January 27th. Mrs. Worrell gave a fine paper on the Fifth Chapter of the Study Book.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Reid assisted by Mrs. Pepper, Mrs. Beavis, Mrs. Ranson and Mrs. Worrell.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Tabernacle United Church, was held in the Ladies' Parlour, Thursday 8th., the President, Mrs. D. T. McClintock presiding. After the opening exercises and regular business of the meeting, the program was then proceeded with which consisted of a portion of the Study Book on India. There are now seventy-three Canadians working in that vast field of 12,000 villages. However, India seems most responsive to the missionary and the work most encouraging.

In the Worship Service was shown that a work begun by one man, Jesus Christ, in His own city of Nazareth has spread around the world.

Keeping Teeth in Public Favor

By HELEN FOLLETT

LOOKING at the pictures of lovely ladies that appear in newspapers and magazines, one comes to the conclusion that smiles are as fashionable as poppy red lips. Teeth are out in the public eye. If they aren't polished, perfect in every detail, it is just too bad.

Dentists report that only a small percentage of patients respond to the call to come in every six months for an examination and necessary repair work. The majority hate the dentist chair, and couldn't be dragged to it by all the king's horses unless pain forced them to seek relief. These last are cowardly custards they are penny wise and pound foolish. The twice-yearly inspection and attention cost less in pain and money in the long run.

Be faithful to the brushing after each meal and at bedtime. You will not only polish the enamel and remove foreign particles, but you will diminish bacteria that is ever present, sitting around waiting to dig holes in your pearly gnawers.

Calcium is necessary for the well-being of teeth; few of us get enough of it. It is found in milk, carrots. dandelion greens, cheese, eggs, spinach, celery and orange juice.

JOAN BLAINE . . .radio personality's smile reveals pretty teeth.

Is your hair acting up? Does it come out of curl overnight, stick to your scalp and behave in such an unmannerly way that you nearly go nutty?

Change your shampoo agent. Your hair may be tired of the one you are using. Use a liquid never a cake of soap that leaves bits of itself on the satin strands. Put a small bar of soap in a quart mason jar, fill the jar with boiling water, let stand three days before using. If the hair is oily, add one fourth teaspoonful of borax.

When you use it, pour off the clear liquid at the top and add more hot water. A quart of melted soap will be enough for eight or ten shampoos.

Choice of the Season

SNOW AND spring meet in this practical jacket dress, which has small white flakes or snow flowers printed on a black background, with the white repeated at the throat and pockets. Buttons down the bodice, a stitched self-belt and skirt fulness are all good designing points, details not always found in inexpensive prints. Now is the time to pick them up—and wear them. The jacket provides the extra warmth needed in fur coat weather, especially since it has long sleeves; it may be dropped later for a furpiece. Yield to color in prints if you are purchasing a number, but remember, otherwise, that black and white are most easily accessorized. The white straw hat has a cox-comb of pleated black velvet.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall it be College or His Job?

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm a girl of 18 and am very fond of a boy of 19. He has a good position with a good future and chance for rapid advancement. However, being an only child, his parents want him to go through college. At present he is attending evening school so he can keep his position as well.

We have discussed marriage, and he feels he doesn't want to give up a good position for college. Do you think if I stepped out of his life it would be for his good? His folks like me, and my parents would approve of our marriage.

I'm afraid if he stopped going to college he might regret it and if we kept on going together while he's at school, he might not get out of school which he should. He really wants the college education. I love him very much and don't want to stop seeing him.

Hoping

You know, of course, as well as I, that a young man with a college degree finds it easier to get a good job than one without. And if you are really as much in love as you feel you are, at 18 and 19, you can afford to wait until he completes his college course. That's the way things look to me. A serious boy, such as you describe this one to be, should be allowed to have a voice in the matter.

Dear Miss Fairfax

I have a problem which I trust you can help me solve. I have no one to consult here, and hope you can give me some advice.

My husband left me four years ago, and I divorced him. That left me the burden of bringing up my two children, who are now 6 and 8. I have often gone hungry to save what little food there was, for them. I get a little work now and then, but feel as if my whole life has been shattered.

A Mother.

I wish you had sent me your name and address, so that I could have written you some direct advice. Apply to your local relief agency, your church, or any organization which relieves distress.

Nothing Seems to Satisfy Her

Dear Miss Fairfax

Before I was married it seemed to me that I just couldn't stand going to work every day. I wanted a husband, a home and a baby. But now that I've got these things, I'm no happier than I was before.

When I see a well-dressed woman I feel sick with envy. When I pass the bright lights, I want to be in there having a good time. And I want a lovely big house instead of the four-room apartment in which we live. I know my husband does the best he can, but I'm so restless.

Everyone tells me I'm pretty and ought to try for the movies. But my mother upbraids me and says she won't take care of my baby if I leave.

Dissatisfied

You are bored with yourself, my dear, because you allow your emotions to sway you. No one can be happy who is like a leaf in a storm blown by every chance wind. You wanted a home and husband and baby, and these best of gifts do not content you. You weren't happy in a job; you wouldn't be happy even if you succeeded in getting into the movies.

Happiness comes from an inner serenity—from seeking happiness and finding it. Happiness does not come from coveting everything that looks bright.

Casual Meetings Can be Inspiring

There is something very endearing and stimulating about the thoughtful things some of our friends and acquaintances say to us when we meet them, no matter how casual the meeting is. They have the happy gift of remembering to say those gracious little things that make such a big difference. Meeting them is always a pleasant experience. Thoughtfulness seems to spring from their spirits, giving our spirits a lift.

These are the kind of people who don't spend all the time talking about themselves and their affairs. They remember to inquire about the well-being of our family, especially if some member of the family has been ill. Or they warm our hearts by saying, "Bob and I were so delighted to hear of your husband's promotion".

Of course I don't mean that these amiable people I'm talking about say a great many flattering things—that's gush, and I'm talking about little sincere things.

And I don't mean to say either that we should be only on the "receiving" line. If we're gracious people, too, these passers-by inspire us to make thoughtful inquiries, thoughtful comments.

Study these kind people who have the social knack of spontaneously establishing a warm-hearted atmosphere to a meeting, no matter how brief. They are as welcome as the flowers in May!

When we go on our way after meeting these refreshingly thoughtful people, we are stimulated. They have given us a spiritual memento.

Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Two of us are to be attendants at the wedding of a girl friend of ours. All of us are wearing street-length dresses, hats and corsages. Should we wear gloves? We will walk down the aisle in the church. Do we just place our coats some place in the back of the church, or do we give them to someone to hold for us?

N.

With your informal costumes you would not wear gloves. When you enter the church, leave your wraps and purses and gloves in a pew in the back of the church . . .this will be the most convenient way.

Courtesy Tip

When you leave a counter in a store, whether or not you have made a purchase, make it your gracious habit to thank the saleswoman or the salesman.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

The Crippled Child

It is trite, of course, for a doctor to say that too many children are crippled by accidents in the home. If only one child was crippled by an accident in a home in a year it would be too many. But at the risk of being trite. I must repeat the statement, for many parents still neglect the most elementary precautions.

I am thinking now of the case of a child of five or six that I was called to attend. The child had cut its foot almost off with an axe. The axe was as sharp as a razor, for the father earns his living as a woodsman. Yet it was left lying around where any curious child could get at it.

I am thinking, too, of letters I have received since the recent discussion in this column of burns suffered by children in the home. Children are often crippled or disfigured for life by burns that could have been prevented, and these letters cite more such cases. One particularly pitiful letter was written by a grandmother who had just lost a granddaughter because of burns the child received when she pulled a percolator of scalding coffee off a table upon herself.

Sixty-five per cent of crippled children owe their deformity to disease. The most common of these are rickets, infantile paralysis and tuberculosis. Every one of these diseases can and should be prevented. Statistics indicate that rickets cause ten percent of the total number of crippled children. Yet this disease is absolutely preventable; there just isn't any excuse for a child suffering from rickets in this day and age. A generation ago when we didn't know about vitamins, or what caused rickets, there may have been an excuse for a child being crippled by this deficiency disease. Today it only points to neglect on the part of the parents. Cod liver oil in winter, sunshine in summer, plus a proper diet will save EVERY child from rickets.

The other diseases that are prime causes of crippled children can be averted by keeping the vitality of children so built up that they will be able to resist disease, and by protecting him from infection insofar as possible. For instance, you can see to it that he is fed pasteurized milk.

Every year a large number of children in the United States and Canada are crippled by infantile paralysis. Well, we know that the disease appears in the late summer and runs its course in a few weeks. During this period parents can be doubly careful to see that a child is not exposed to infection.

Two years ago there was an epidemic of the disease in Ontario. Yet in spite of this, and it was no secret because every newspaper carried regular stories about it, I saw hundreds of young children carried around in crowds by their parents. Such parents seem to adopt an attitude of fatalism regarding their children. "If Johnny is going to get infantile paralysis, he'll get it and nothing I can do will stop it", they say.

Well, this isn't true of infantile paralysis, or of any contagious disease for that matter. There would be as much sense to leaving your child in a burning building and then saying: "If Johnny is going to burn, he'll burn, there's nothing I can do".

HOWE DEALS WITH ECONOMIC SIDE

important tasks prominent men who were life-long Conservatives, as well as Liberals or citizens of other parties.

Mr. Howe, who makes his second campaign speech in Pembroke, Ont., at a Liberal convention tomorrow, dealt with politics and devoted himself almost exclusively with the economic side of Canada's war effort.

All Will Have Work.

War orders placed in Canada already exceeded $100,000,000 and the time was close when every man and woman in Canada would have work. Because of the time necessary to plan and equip for new production, actual placing of war orders in Canada had been slow but Canadian plants would soon be building ships and airplanes and other materials in huge quantities.

Paramount issue in the campaign was "the selection of the government best able to prosecute Canada's war effort with the maximum degree of efficiency," Mr. Howe said. "The best experience for government is experience in government."

Economically Canada was well equipped for the war. In one of the greatest essentials—transportation—Canada was better equipped. Lack of such facilities had hampered the Russian advance on Finland and accounted for failure of the Germans to pres sits attack on the western front.

Many of those now criticising alleged Canadian unpreparedness were those who in recent years demanded railway amalgamation and abandonment of trackage, the minister said. The government had resisted such demands and he prophesied that this surplus of transportation would now prove Canada's salvation in her war effort.

National harbors were bearing double the commerce of pre-war days and without any congestion. The trans-Canada air lines had contributed forty fully-equipped airports, built within the last four years and available for immediate use in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

All Doing Share.

Agriculture, mining, lumbering and fisheries were all ready to meet the emergency and were doing their share in supplying necessities of war.

Mr. Howe recalled the increases asked by the government in the past four years in appropriations for coast defence. Those who now criticized the government for unpreparedness had criticized such appropriations.

The likelihood of war had been foreseen, he said, and both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts were now well defended by naval and air units because of the government's foresight.

The government met one challenge to its leadership when four cabinet ministers from Quebec staked their political futures on resistance "to attempts from Mr. Duplessis (former premier of Quebec) to lead the people of Quebec away from federal leadership in the war," Mr. Howe said.

A second challenge had come from Ontario, Mr. Howe said, "and this time the entire government is meeting the challenge by an appeal to all the people of Canada."

Canadian agriculture is in a position to make its maximum contribution, Mr. Howe said. When war came a bumper wheat crop was being harvested and the volume of wheat in store was largest in history. Mining and fisheries were prepared to make their full contribution.

Expenditures Distributed.

The War Supply Board, composed of a staff of more than 200 specialists, placed orders for more than $60,000,000 worth of war needs and its predecessor, the Defence Purchasing Board, organized last July for $41,000,000.

Mr. Howe gave the following distribution of expenditures by the War Supply Board since it took over from the Defence Purchasing Board Nov. 1: Clothing $3,700,000; foodstuffs $2,900,000, ships $30,000,000, defence projects $6,300,000, aircraft $13,300,000, and miscellaneous $4,000,000.

The minister said that unless international security can be restored there is little hope for freedom or happiness and that Canadians were determined to fight for a lasting peace.

"We face the greatest effort in the life of ou rnation. If we are to succeed in that effort you must choose a government of responsibility and competence on March 26. I have no doubt of your choice."

REGINALD WHITE DESCRIBED AS DEVOUT CHRISTIAN

CHARACTER EVIDENCE

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 9 (CP).—The case for the defence in the murder trial of Reginald White was concluded this afternoon and Mr. Justice J. C. Makins expressed the hope that Crown Counsel Walter Martin and Chief Defence Counsel J. K. Sims would be able to complete their addresses to the jury later today.

The presiding judge said he did not want to have the jury locked up for the night after having heard only one of addresses of counsel. Mr. Justice Makins intimated, however, that his charge to the jury would not be delivered until tomorrow.

Reginald White, on trial for the murder of John Milroy, was described by a defence witness today as being a devout Christian.

Thomas Scott, teacher of a Bible class in Hespeler Baptist Church, said that White, a 35-year-old farm worker, was not satisfied with only attending the Regular Baptist services but frequently also attended later services at the Hespeler United Church.

He said that White attended the regular class held the Sunday morning following the discovery last Aug. 19 of the battered bodies of Milroy and his aged sister, Annie Milroy, in their Branchton home. White is charged with both murders but at present is on trial in connection with the man's death only.

Scott was one of several defence witnesses heard at today's trial session of White who was arrested after the slayings.

Evidence Refused

A feature of early proceedings today was the refusal of Mr. Justice J. C. Makins to admit evidence of Douglas Stuebing, a reporter and photographer of the Kitchener Record, who had been called by the defence to identify certain newspaper articles and pictures which had been published in the Record and other newspapers.

Stuebing was called to testify in connection with an interview he had had with Mrs. William Oliver, a Crown witness, and had answered only a few routine questions when Walter Martin, the Crown Counsel, objected.

"This man has been in court since it opened", Mr. Martin said, referring to Stuebing. "All the other witnesses had been excluded".

Mr. Justice Makins said he could not see "how this can be regarded as proper evidence, and when Defence counsel J. K. Sims attempted to have copies of the Galt Reporter and certain photographs placed in evidence, the presiding judge also ruled against this procedure.

New Line Abandoned

Mr. Sims then attempted a new line of questioning on Stuebing but when the court again objected, he abandoned his effort to obtain testimony from the newspaperman.

Although he had previously testified as to White's mental fitness to stand trial at the trial within a trial during which time the jury was absent, Mr. G. H. Stevenson was called again today to testify along the same lines. Dr. Stevenson is superintendent of The Ontario Hospital at London, Ontario.

Dr. Stevenson said that he had examined the accused on several occasions and as recently as Monday.

Fiancee of Accused To Stand By Him

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 9.—(CP)—Eileen Gooding, fiancee of 35-year-old Reginald White of Hespeler, who now is on trial for the murder of an aged couple at Branchton last August, told newspapermen today she believed White innocent and would "stand by him".

"He's a good boy", she said. "I believe him to be honest and I do not think he did it".

White and Miss Gooding were to have been married last September. White was arrested two days after the double murder.

GREEK PREMIER'S TRUSTED OFFICIAL GOES TO EGYPT

GUARANTEES GIVEN

Athens, Feb. 9 (AP)—One of Premier John Metaxas' most trusted assistants left by plane today for Egypt, where the commanders of powerful armies concentrated in the Near East by Great Britain and France are making a tour of inspection.

The departure of the Under-Secretary of Press and Tourism, Theodore Nikoloudis, coincided with disclosure that General Metaxas in a speech two days ago warned his compatriots they faced the danger of being drawn into the war.

It was explained Nikoloudis was going to confer with Egyptian ministers "on matters interesting to both governments", but it was remarked that his wisit coincided with the presence in Egypt of General Maxime Weygand of France and Lieut-General Sir Archibald Wavell of Britain.

Received Guarantees

Greece has received from the Allied powers guarantees of her independence if it be threatened by aggression. General Metaxas' speech was made before the Salonika Rotary Club shortly after his return from the Balkan Entente meeting at Belgrade.

He said that already "difficult times" had "momentarily threatened to involve us," and warned:

"I do not mean we shall eventually avoid the storm. What I can assure you is that we shall come out of that storm as men capable of demanding the respect of others."

Commenting on the recent conference of the Balkan Entente members at Belgrade, the Premier said the door was left open for Hungary and Bulgaria "to join us in encountering the storm that is coming."

He did not disclose what already had "momentarily threatened" to involve Greece, but added:

"If we were to remain at peace in a crawling posture, it would be better that we should never have peace at all."

Nomination Briefs

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 9—(CP)—Miss Helen Kinnear of Port Colborne, first woman in the British Empire to be named a King's counsel announced yesterday she will seek the Liberal nomination in Welland riding at Welland Saturday. A. B. Damude, member of the parliament just dissolved, will also seek the nomination.

Deloraine, Man., Feb. 9—(CP)—J. A. Ross of Melita, Reeve of Arthur municipality, was chosen at a Conservative nominating convention yesterday to be candidate in the March 26 Dominion election for the Souris seat occupied in the last parliament by G. W. McDonald, Liberal.

Toronto, Feb. 9—(CP)—Thomas Reilly, Toronto business man, was named Liberal candidate in Toronto-Greenwood at a Federal nominating convention yesterday. Denton Massey, Conservative, was member for the riding in the parliament just dissolved.

A. W. Roebuck, Independent Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto-Bellwoods and Liberal nominee for the Federal election in Toronto-Trinity, told the meeting: "The best way you people can do your duty as Canadians is to re-elect the Mackenzie King government and make sure a nondescript nightmare government headed by Dr. Manion is not put in power."

1,400,000 CASUALTIES ESTIMATE

Hong Kong, Feb. 9 (AP)—Japanese casualties since the start of the war with China July 7, 1937, were placed today at almost 1,400,000 by the Central News Agency, Chinese government organ, which said 20 percent of the total were killed. The Agency said the figures were based on Japanese documents seized on various fronts.

CUSTOMS OFFICERS ARE ACQUITTED

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 9—(CP)—A Supreme Court jury in a verdict today acquitted Thomas Smythe and Harry Smith, suspended Port of Windsor customs officers, of three charges of conspiracy. Sam Motruck of Windsor was acquitted of one charge of conspiracy and the jury disagreed on the two others.

Motruk and the customs officers were three of ten persons arrested by Royal Canadian Mounted Police last summer and police alleged the arrests broke up a huge ring which smuggled alcohol into Windsor from the United States by way of Windsor.

The jury retired at midday yesterday and when it had failed to reach a decision at the court closing hour, court was adjourned until this morning.

Mr. Justice George McFarland after thanking the jurors for their careful consideration of the case, declared Smith and Smythe free men and they stepped from the prisoner's box. Bail in the case of Motruk was renewed at $10,000 property bond and he will appear for retrial on the two counts at the next Supreme Court assizes here.

FRANKFORD STRIKE SOON SETTLED

Bata Workers Leave Work But Return in About Two Hours.

Three hundred employees of the Bata Shoe Company of Frankford left their benches late Thursday afternoon demanding more wages and after a conference between Thomas Bata, Jr., and a committee of the workmen, adjustments were made in the wage scale and the whole question was amicably settled. At first Mr. Bata promised that the matter would be adjusted in the immediate future but the workers wanted a settlement at once and the conference held satisfied both parties. It is understood the strike started in the Cutting Department and spread very quickly throughout the whole factory with the exception of the sewing departments. Mr. Chekota and Mr. Davis tried to pacify the workers but finally the manager, Mr. Bata, had to be called into the conference.

Nazi Communique

Berlin, Feb. 9 (AP).—Six members of a French patrol and one German were killed, the German News Agency claimed today, in a clash of scouts on the western front near Forbach.

The agency said the clash came unexpectedly as each patrol apparently decided to scout the same area between the lines. After several minutes of brisk rifle and machine-gun fire, artillery joined the fight, it said.

The agency stated that "it still is impossible to come in contact with English soldiers who are supposed to be in the front lines."

At one part of the line, the agency claimed, the French and Germans conversed by means of placards, the Germans asking "Where is Tommy?" and getting the reply, "In England."

(General Viscount Gort, commander-in-chief of the British army in France, only last night completed a tour of the British section of the Maginot Line, during which he discussed with post commanders the action being taken to maintain close contact with the enemy.

(The Germans themselves recently announced the death of a British officer taken prisoner while on patrol duty.)

BLAST SHATTERS FIREWORKS PLANT

The first of the explosions rocked the Golden States Fireworks Company plant, two miles from the centre of this beach city, shortly before midnight. It was felt at Huntington Park and Pasadena, 15 miles distant, and generally throughout the Los Angeles metropolitan area. Loss was estimated at $200,000.

Flattened by the three major blasts and ten lesser ones over a half-hour period or destroyed by the fire that followed were the main plant building, a brick structure, and 29 small houses in the block-square factory system.

In addition, a house across the street from the plant burned down and walls and roofs of ten other dwellings in the neighborhood were damaged. Windows in other residences were shattered.

Hugo Lizza, the plant owner's son, said he had no idea what caused the explosions "unless somebody deliberately touched a match to the explosives.

Bed, bath and breakfast cost three shillings. There are three floors with a total bed accommodation for 72. This capacity can be increased to more than 100 by the use of camp beds.

The building has a games room, a lounge and a dining room. The manager is Harold Shove, a resident of Edmonton before he enlisted in the 46th in the last war.

EIRE'S NEW BILL CONSTITUTIONAL

Ruling Given by Supreme Court of Eire on Bill to Combat Extremists

Dublin, Feb. 9.—(CP)—The "offences against the State Bill" giving Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's government broad powers to combat extremists was declared constitutional today in a majority opinion of the Supreme Court of Eire.

The majority opinion found the Bill not repugnant to the constitution. It provides for the arrest and imprisonment of persons deemed undesirable without formal charge or trial.

The Bill will be submitted immediately to President Douglas Hyde for signature, thereby becoming law. The Supreme Court opinion was requested by the President in order to ensure legality of the measure.

The powers contained in it are vitally important to the Eire government in its effort to round up leaders of the Irish Republican Army Terrorist organization.

Loophole is Stopped

Under the original act passed last June, 53 men were detained. The brother of one of them secured a writ of habeas corpus from Justice Gavan Duffy in the Dublin High court in December. The lower court held that power to intern on suspicion was fundamentally inconsistent with the rule of law as expressed in the constitution. Subsequently the judge signed an order for release of the prisoner.

Mr. De Valera pressed at the January special sitting of the Dail for an amendment to stop up this loophole. He declared that if the Legislature and judiciary were going to be at loggerheads, the constitution would have to be changed.

The main amendment asked was the power to intern native-born citizen and this was passed by the Dail.

friends are, how much confidence the Moslem world and the Negro world have in France and how the French police are organized."

In warning members of the severe penalties that would follow any leakage, Premier Daladier declared that 24 hours after the recent secret session of the British House of Commons a full account of the proceedings was published in German newspapers.

Members of the Popular Union group in the Chamber composed of former Communists who abjured their views, decided not to attend today's secret session because they could not fully trust themselves to be discreet.

Certain members of the group, it was explained, were not yet stabilized in their new views and the group as a whole "does not want to take responsibility for any indiscretions that might be committed."

Bucharest, Feb. 9 (AP). — Rumania's trade contracts with Germany and the allies were placed today under the control of a new minister, Ion Cristu.

Cristu was given the special portfolio in an attempt to extricate the government from the dilemma caused by the sale to Germany of oil from Rumanian wells operated by British and French-owned companies.

The British and French firms have objected to any of their oil being used to fill German orders.

Prestonsburg, Ky., Feb. 9—(AP)—Sale of an unmarried woman's baby son for 25 cents has been disclosed by Dr. Marvin Ransdell, head of the Floyd County Health Department.

Dr. Ransdell said yesterday that Mrs. Martha Burchett, department nurse, reported the six-weeks-old baby was "bought" by the wife of a coal miner at Garrett, coal mining community.

The nurse said the miner's wife, who already has two children, heard the baby was not wanted and went to the mother's home. There, the nurse continued, the woman was asked what she would pay for the baby and replied:—

"All I have is 25 cents."

The offer was accepted, the nurse said.

The baby was born Christmas day and is to be adopted by his foster parents, the nurse said.

Belleville Anglers' Assoc. Votes to Amalgamate With Ontario Hunters' Association

RESTOCKING REPORT

Dr. Van Blakslee Announces Considerable Work in This Regard Done Last Year

The Belleville Anglers Association unanimously voted in favour of the amalgamation of the Ontario Federation of Anglers with the Ontario Hunters' Association at their annual meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. The local anglers voiced their opinion of being in favour of the joining of these two bodies in an effort to cement the efforts of such sportsmen towards the mutual benefit of both associations, when upwards of 150 members of the local club met to elect their officers for the ensuing year, several ladies being present to supplement the organization.

"The aims and objects of both hunters and anglers in this province are towards the same objective, better fishing conditions for the fishermen and better hunting facilities for those enjoying hunting," explained President J. E. Shortt following his welcoming remarks. President Shortt outlined the activities of the Belleville Anglers' Association for the past year, adding that the restocking of streams and lakes in the district had been the major project of the Association. I. G. Hefkey, secretary-treasurer, presented the annual financial statement, which revealed the association enjoyed an operating balance of $86.86. In the matter of membership, Chairman "Cap" Bottum revealed the membership for the year 1939 was 245, as compared with 274 in the previous year.

Detailed Report Presented

Dr. Van Blakslee, chairman of the restocking committee presented the most detailed report of the evening. In the matter of replenishment of fish in Hastings and Prince Edward Counties, Dr. Blakslee revealed that of 102 applications for restocking, 100 had been fulfilled last year.

"There were nine applications for pickerel with 625,000,000 fry being placed in local waters. Four applications for herring brought three million and for ten applications for restocking maskinonge 175,000 fingerlings were put in local waters. Lake Trout saw 350,000 and Speckled Trout 104,000 with 275,000 Bass and 16,000 Brown Trout fingerlings being placed in our district waters," revealed Dr. Blakslee in his report.

Prize Winners Announced

The prize winners for the annual angling contests conducted by the Belleville Anglers Association, with Fred Croft as chairman, proved most interesting, when the prizes were presented last night. It was announced by Mr. Croft that Frank Aikins had won the maskinonge prize with a 'lunge weighing 42 pounds. "I am told that this 'lunge is the largest reported caught in Ontario last season," revealed Mr. Croft, as he added that four of the seven prizes awarded saw the fish entered in the contest having been caught in the waters of the Bay of Quinte, where game fish abounded more plentiful than in years past.

The winners of the angling contest were:

Maskinonge — Frank Aikins, weight 42 pounds.

Speckled Trout—I. G. Hefkey, 2 pounds, 14 ounces.

Mr. Homer Thomas, of the staff of the Belleville Collegiate, was the guest speaker of the evening and gave a fine impromptu talk on the "elements of duck hunting," making reference to the continued depletion of wild ducks throughout the Bay of Quinte area during the past few seasons and the various reasons thereof. Several films of interesting moving pictures on the subject of angling were shown during the evening through the courtesy of the Canadian Railways.

The election of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Anglers' Association, from which the officers will subsequently be chosen, resulted in the following twelve being elected: Messrs. C. E. Bishop, "Cap." W. H. Bottum, Dr. Van Blakslee, H. Legate, Fred Croft, I. G. Hefkey, J. E. Shortt, Fred Sprague, Russ Smith, Chief Alex Kidd, Ralph Weese and Russel White.

FANCY ROOKIES TO SHOW WARES

Giants Will Have Three Given Most Valuable Player Award Last Season

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)— The National Baseball League has some fancy rookies coming up this spring according to the league's annual "green book" devoted to the exploits of the circuit's new-comers.

Red Tramback, for instance, the most valuable player in the Western Association in 1939, is about to make his Major League debut with New York Giants. He won 21 games as a pitcher last season and played 87 games in the outfield, batting .332.

The Giants also will have the services of two others who were declared the most valuable in their leagues last season—Mickey Witek from the International and Babe Young from the Southern Association.

Pittsburgh Pirates have the tallest man in baseball, pitcher Johnny (Whiz) Gee, six feet nine inches and a 20-game pitcher for Syracuse in the International in 1939. Bob Elliott and Maurice Von Robays are said to be ready to step into regular outfield berths.

"Pee Wee" Reese, the Louisville kid who stole the show in the little world series last fall, is all set to take the shortstop job away from Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn Dodgers.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Down Kingston way the hockey moguls are sticking to the old fashioned "winner take all" system in their O.H.A. groupings. Both in the junior "B" and the intermediate "B" groups the respective Kingston district group winners have been decided. Actually Gananoque should almost have been conceded the group title before ice hostilities commenced. In the eastern intermediate group the four clubs have scored 100 goals to date, Gananoque having bagged 49 of the number, while opponents only scored ten goals on Cook, the Gan. goalie, in six games. In the Kingston district junior group Wally Elmer's "Red Indians" improved so much as the season advanced that they have already won the eastern junior "B" group title and will meet the Belleville "Quintes" in the first round junior O.H.A. playdowns.

However, in more civilized centres of the province the groups shorten their playing schedules and terminate these schedules with a play-off series, such as is the case between the Flyers and the Petes. Tonight, the "Birdmen" make their final group schedule journey to Peterboro where Toots Holway's charges are confronted with the task of winning or else. If the Petes win tonight they'll have cinched first place, leaving the Flyers second best when the choice for play-off dates arises. However, if the Flyers can power-dive down upon the Petes hangar on Brock St. and shoot the "pesky Petes" to earth in their own trenches, the Air Force colors will be flying atop the group flag-staff. Throughout the Central Ontario zone the sport fans are strong for post-schedule play-offs to determine the various group titles, being satisfied to accept group games as merely warm-up or practice matches. If the fans demand this system why should the clubs object. After all the play-off business is good enough for New York, Boston and Toronto, but apparently not for mid-Victorian Jim Sutherland and his Kingston henchmen.

Fred (Dixie) Walker of the Dodgers is in a helluva pickle. Read the letter he sent Hy (N. Y. News) Turkin: "Last season one of my teammates, hearing about me misplacing a lucky hairpin, inserted an ad in the lost and found column, in my name, offering a reward for the hairpin. A nationally known "oddity' cartoonist reproduced the ad and I've been flooded with hairpin givers ever since. ...They (the coiffeur gadgets) come in singles, dozens and cartons. Instead of spending the off-season hunting and fishing like all normal ball players, I'm wasting my time signing express receipts for hairpins. Won't the power of the press please help me out of this mess?" ... We don't mind telling you that Walker does not want any more hairpins.

We have been reliably informed the Trenton branch of the Canadian Legion is anything but satisfied with their reception at the hands of the Ontario Athletic Commission. The Trenton Legion, which is a highly reputable body of returned soldiers, is desirous of staging a return boxing bout between Hub Smith, of the Air Force, and the pride of Trenton, "Jiber" Ellis. However, it seems the Ontario Athletic Commission has completely ignored the Trenton request for a boxing permit to hold this fight, all of which can be doubtlessly laid at the door of Commissioner A. E. Lyon, of Perth. There is little doubt but that the Trenton legionnaires are sincerely conscientious in their efforts, as they even go so far as to state a percentage of the receipts would be given to the Red Cross. The reason given for the O.A.C. rejection of a permit had something to do with "bootleg boxing," which is being practiced in the Ottawa Valley district, the stamping grounds of Commissioner Lyon, but why should the Trenton Legion suffer for misdemeanours committed by others? There hasn't been a non-military boxing bout held in this district in years, so why all the suspicions over nothing?

Do you remember when less than 2,000 persons saw heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey drop Dutch Seifert to the mat in 45 seconds at Memphis 16 years ago tonight? The Manassa Mauler lost his boxing crown to Gene Tunney two years later, and in a return bout in 1927 lost again—before a crowd of 120,757.

In spite of all his wishful thinking, Jimmy Dykes despairs of Monty Stratton ever becoming a pitching regular in the big show again. "It can't be done," Jimmy told a scribe in Philly the other day. Sir Jeems, however, said he would test Monty next season as a batting practice hurler.

George Laughlin's Collegiate cagers moved a full game out in front of Pete Beach's Albert College hoopsters in the Interscholastic basketball race this week. The B.C.I. juniors beat the Albert juniors 17 to 7, while the "collegian" seniors won 29 to 26 from the Albert seniors in one of the scrappiest cage games of the season. In order to even interscholastic matters now Beach's Albert teams must win both district ends of next week's dual bill, as the B.C.I. teams are one full game to the good after three games in each series.

Although district hockey games have seen rather one-sided scores this season, the majority of basketball games played locally in all leagues have been close scores with last-second victories snatched or Merriwell finishes featuring. Last night's O.B.A. game between the Air Force and Queens was no exception, the Flyers won 26 to 25 after McCann potted a last second basket. The Flyers' victory keeps them in the race, along with the Belleville and Kingston "Y" squads who lead the parade.

SPORT SPICE—Yes, tonight's heavyweight bout will be broadcast, commencing at ten o'clock. ...The battle will mark the 9th time champion Joe Louis has stepped into the ring to defend his title...Al Simmons, who was released by the Reds last fall, is getting into shape in hopes of catching on with the Athletics, the team with which he rose to fame over a decade ago ... Connie Mack offered him a contract "if he got in condition to slap the apple again"...Rangers and Boston continue to make a run-away of the N.H.L. race... Paavo Nurmi, that great Finnish runner of yester-year, may be in Toronto on Feb. 21st when Goodyears meet Varsity in a Finnish relief benefit game.... Jock Bennett of Toronto is scheduled to referee tonight's important Air Force at Peterboro' game, while "Red" Townsend goes to Picton for the game with Trenton.

SHOE AND HAT CARE

Always keep your shoes on proper fitting trees. This will mean longer wear. Shine regularly to preserve life of leather. If rain-soaked never put near heat, but let dry slowly on trees.

Hats too need frequent brushing to keep the felt dust-free. Never pile one hat on top of another, but place on flat surface resting on side of crown and side of brim, or on hat forms that lift them above shelf level.

MARMORA H. S. DOWNS STIRLING

Winners Lead by Leonard Brothers in 8 to 3 Victory

Stirling, Feb. 9 (Special)—In a game that offered a lot more thrills than the score would indicate the husky Marmora High School hockey team led by Leonard brothers and Reynolds trimmed Stirling High School 8-3 at the Stirling arena on Wednesday night. Both teams had plenty of support on hand and the northerners proved themselves much the better team especially in the final period when they applied the pressure to rap home five goals. In the first two periods the local squad held their own very well and seemed to have a slight edge in the first period. Marmora possessing a well balanced team of players with plenty of experience behind them knew just when to turn it on and make it pay.

Walker, McIntosh and Vandervoort shared in the goals scored by Stirling as they held the visitors tight for two periods. E. Leonard, clicked once in each of the first two periods with Gray also scoring in the second. Starting the final period even, the visitors turned on their reserve power to bring their total to 8 without a return from Stirling. Reynolds scored three goals for Marmora with Naylor and G. Leonard getting one each. Final score Marmora 8; Stirling 3.

QUEBEC ASSOC. NOT NOTIFIED

Says Agreement Between C.A.H.A. and N.H.L. Broken by Signing of Two Players

Montreal, Feb. 9 —(CP)— The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association was not notified of the signing by Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League of Smiley Meronek and Tony Demers, it was announced last night at a meeting of the Q.A.H.A.

The meeting decided to inform the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association that the Quebec body had not been notified of the signings nor had permission been granted to the players as stipulated in the C.A.H.A.-N.H.L. agreement on players signing professional contracts after Jan. 1.

Meronek and Demers both played with teams under the jurisdiction of the Q.A.H.A. Meronek with Verdun Maple Leafs of the Quebec Senior League, and Demers with Valleyfield Braves of the Provincial League.

The meeting also decided to notify the Ontario Hockey Association that Joe Catlin, wingman recently cut adrift by Cornwall Flyers of the Quebec Senior League is still under the jurisdiction of the Q.A.H.A. and has not been granted a release. Catlin joined St. Catharines of the O.H.A. this week.

CHILEAN GIVEN LITTLE CHANCE AGAINST LOUIS

Fans Expect to See Godoy Laid Away in About Six Rounds

19,000 EXPECTED

Louis Will Pick Up $40,000 to Make Ring Earnings $1,750,000

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—Along about 10:30 tonight, unless all signs are wrong, Joe Louis will be ready to sit down to his first fried chicken in six weeks, still heavyweight champion of the world.

That gives him half an hour, or approximately seven rounds of his scheduled 15-round title go with Arturo Godoy, the Chilean challenger.

Of course, Arturo could make fistic history by taking the crown away from dusky one-man wrecking crew, but so could the statue of Billie Penn dive off the top of Philadelphia's city hall into the Delaware River. That's about as much chance as the boys are giving the rough, tough Godoy. The odds-layers still were holding Louis a 1 to 7 favorite.

Godoy's best chance appeared to be in staying in a crouch and crowding in close. As soon as Arturo comes out of the shell to take a peek at what's happening, there's going to be a slight explosion—right on the end of his chin.

Some 18,000 to 19,000 fans will pay about $110,000 to see the Brown Bomber roll out his artillery at Madison Square Garden. Of this, Louis is to receive 40 per cent, less taxes, or about $40,000 thereby boosting his ring earnings to more than $1,700,000. Godoy figures to pick up about $17,500.

OHIO FARMER, CY YOUNG RECOGNIZED AS MOST DURABLE PITCHER IN HISTORY

Still pitching, 1912

Cy Young today

A big, raw-boned farmer, Denton Tecumseh (Cy) Young, hurled a no-hit game for Canton in the Central League, July 25, 1890, fanning 18 McKeesport, Pa., batters.

That started baseball's most durable pitcher on the road to success.

Born at Gilmore, Ohio, in March, 1867, Cy was raised, and remained a farmer all his life. His first professional baseball was with Red Cloud, Nebraska, in 1889. He went to Canton, Ohio, the next season.

Goes To Cleveland.

Young's no-hit game that July day drew the attention of Cleveland scouts. The farmer boy took a gamble, signed with the Cleveland club of the old National League. In his first game, the country boy from Ohio hurled a win against Cap Anson's White Stockings.

Anson himself tried to get Young to change uniforms that very night, offering him $1,000 to do it. But Cleveland held on and Young went on to win ten games while losing seven that year.

The iron man of his day, Young combined blinding speed and curves to pile up a memorable record. For ten straight years Young notched at least 20 or more victories for Cleveland and St. Louis in the National League. He won 27 in his second year with the Cleveland team, and 36 the third year. He won 35 and lost 10 in 1895.

Many Strikeouts.

In 1901, Boston of the American League lured him into the fold. He pitched for Boston until 1909, and then he joined the Cleveland Naps for the 1910 and 1911 seasons. He closed his major league career with Boston of the National League in 1911, winning 12 and losing four.

Young's lifetime averages shows he won 511 games, more than any other pitcher. He hurled in 874 games and lost 315 for a grand average of .619. Young struck out 2,832 batters, getting more than 200 in both 1904 and 1905.

Too Fat.

In recent years Young has barnstormed with a team of veterans and has worked as a clerk in the Ohio House of Representatives. He lives on his farm at Peoli, Ohio.

When he laid aside his glove, observers at that time reported him as saying, "My arm is as good as the day I came into the majors, but I'm too portly to get about."

SIDNEY WHITE WINS CONTEST

Sidney White, 177 Dufferin Avenue, was the winner of the True and False contest conducted at the Belle Theatre last evening. Mr. White defeated F. Longwell of Foxboro, they being the only two of eight, who answered correctly all the True or False questions asked the week previous, that were present in the theatre. A tie breaker contest was held and Mr. White answered all his questions correctly, while Mr. Longwell missed on one. White was given a substantial cash prize by the management.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Mrs. Fred Jarrell Thrilled on Winning $200 and Watch

"It was really the greatest thrill of my lifetime, why I'm still so nervous I hardly know what to say," admitted Mrs. Fred Jarrell; 24 Grier St., after winning $200.00 and a gold watch as the result of giving the correct answer in the Robin Hood musical quiz program over radio station CBL, Toronto last night.

When the telephone rang in Mrs. Jarrell's home last night, after the Grenadier Guards Band had played a number, Mrs. Jarrell immediately gave the radio announcer the correct name of the selection played "Out of the dusk to you", the answer winning for her the grand prize of $200.00, plus a gold watch.

District representatives of the Robin Hood Flour Company, supplied Mrs. Jarrell with a new demonstrator radio in order that she might clearly hear last night's program. "As soon as I made the correct answer, district representatives of the company, who were waiting outside in a parked automobile, came into the house and presented me with the cheque and gold watch," Mrs. Jarrell stated today as she added her personal thanks to all of the people in Belleville, who had assisted her in good wishes.

POLICE COURT

The first session of city police court to be held in Belleville in a full week saw a goodly number of accused persons appearing before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., on charges of intoxication. Convictions were registered in each and jail terms accepted in default of the payment of the assessed fines.

Take Jail Term

William Saunders, Wm. McVeigh and James McTavish, all transients, who were arrested yesterday by Sergeant Arthur Harman and P.C. Thomson, admitted today they had been intoxicated, when arrested in a local restaurant. Unable to meet the fine levied, the trio took 14 days in default.

Unable to Pay Fines

George McGouran and Sidney Patrick, of the R.C.A.F. station, Trenton, also appeared on charges of intoxication. McGouran entered a plea of not guilty, but following the evidence submitted by Sergeant Arthur Booth and P.C. Evans, His Worship did not hesitate in convicting the accused. "You are not suggesting that the officers have committed perjury?" Magistrate Butler asked McGouran, but received no reply as he convicted the accused. Patrick pleaded guilty. McGouran was fined $10.00 and in addition $17.50 costs, while Patrick was assessed the conventional "ten and costs". Both stated they were unable to pay their fines. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., instructed the officers to take the men into the police station and notify their superior officers at the R.C.A.F.

Convicted of Theft

Les Fraser, Belleville, was sentenced to serve not less than three months nor more than six in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of several charges of theft from his employer. "This man made collections for goods received and failed to return the money to his employers," explained Mr. Donnan as he added no leniency could be expected as Fraser was at present on suspended sentence.

P. E.-Lennox Liberals Fail To Select Candidate

Only Two Men of Twelve Submitted Allow Names to Stand for Further Consideration

MEET NEXT WEEK

Despite the fact that it was reported to be one of the liveliest conventions held in years, delegates to the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal Association after four hours' deliberation and speeches failed to select a candidate to represent the riding at the forthcoming Federal elections. The convention was held in Napanee yesterday.

Twelve names were submitted to the convention as possibilities, but ten of their owners refused to let their names stand. The other two, Wilfred Lane, Picton lawyer, and W. G. Paul, ex-mayor of Napanee, while not actually withdrawing their names, told the convention they would not give a definite answer until further consideration had been given the matter.

The convention was adjourned until next week when delegates will renew their efforts to select a candidate.

Gerald Smith, secretary of the association was strongly urged to accept the nomination, his name being placed before the convention on two different occasions. Others nominated were —Burton Pearsall, Bloomfield; Wilfred McCabe, warden of Lennox County; Gordon Hawley, Dr. H. W. Smith, Howard Weese, B. F. Davy, Mrs. W. G. Fretts, Dr. F. C. Wilson, and Dr. D. R. Hall, mayor of Napanee.

FLYERS RALLY, BEAT QUEENS 26-25 COUNT

McCann of Air Force Sinks Winning Basket in Thrilling Cage Game

Rallying in the last minute of play, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" snatched a last minute 26 to 25 victory over the Queens Quintette in a scheduled O.B.A. basketball game played at the B.C.I. gymnasium last evening, McCann, fleet-footed Air Force forward, sinking the winning basket as the Flyers rallied to win.

Trailing 14 to 12 at the halfway mark, the Queens "students" rallied in the last half to forge to the lead in one of the most thrilling and closely contested cage contests of the current O.B.A. season. With only a few seconds left to play, McCann raced in from the corner to sink what proved to be the winning basket and give the Flyers the odd point. The scoring was equally divided as both teams played strong defensive ball.

The line ups:

Nemesis

By LUCILLE ROSEHOLM

"Please, miss," Rosa Amato smiled at me timidly, placing her crooked little brown hand in mine. "Amato says I can come to you for help. He says the rich people have put away money to give us." She murmured this apologetically with many stops and starts and coughs.

"But, Rosa, hasn't Vittorio a fine business with everybody having old shoes repaired instead of buying new ones?"

"But nobody can pay." She spoke the words so readily, so mechanically, that I knew they had been rehearsed. I decided, also, that Amato must have sent her to me with stern, unequivocal commands which no amount of courage would defy.

"I'll be over to see you in the morning," I promised, "and then we can see just what you need."

She backed her way out of the office as if afraid to give further offense, eyes on the floor, shawl pulled tightly around thin shoulders, brittle knees racking at each step.

The next morning, as investigator for the emergency relief, I paid the Amatos my first official visit. As I walked through the dusty, whirring repair shop toward the closed door of their home in the rear, a wave of apprehension beset me.

How often, as a child, I had come to the door with slippers to be soled and run out with my hands full of luscious wrinkled Italian olives that Rosa smuggled to me when Amato's back was turned! How often I had wondered why that door was always closed. Was it a sanctuary of evil? I recalled, now, the terror with which we used to whisper our suspicions when, in the black of the night or the slate of the dawn fearful, pitiful cries tore through a slit of window. And the next day Rosa would appear red-eyed and swollen with ugly patches of blue and yellow and purple marbling her face. Then her sharp glistening eyes were dull and heavy as mud and no cajoling could evoke a smile or a cookie.

But the room had no ghouls. It was clean and cluttered and virtually papered with holy Madonnas. There was a coal stove and a kitchen pantry in one corner, a plush chair with a beaded lamp of Victorian elegance in another, an oak dresser with a crocheted table scarf in third, and a square brass bed wearing a tremendous quilt of red and orange and green and yellow in the fourth. It was, in a word bedroom, kitchen, library and church, as bright and busy and colorful as the Ponte Vecchio itself.

It looked as warm and homely as Rosa, and for the moment I was sure that no screams, no hearings could have taken place in such a friendly home. Then Amato entered. His fierce black mustache was salted with gray and the ends, which used to be so handsomely waxed, drooped shapelessly down the sides of his mouth. His thin string of a mouth curled bitterly as ever, nor had his gleaming evil eyes grown softer with years.

"Miss," he said, "we need a new mattress. See," tearing of the carefully laid quilt and exposing a flat, tattered pile of tufting, "we sleep on the hard wood." He was a heavy man with plenty of flesh on him; but I could picture Rosa's poor tired bones aching against the bare slats.

"I'll order a new one for you," I said to Rosa; and as I turned to go she pressed a dry, hard little hand into mine and whispered, "Grazia."

The day the mattress arrived I went myself to see that they had delivered the right one before it should be used. As Amato was downtown buying supplies Rosa and I delightedly placed the new mattress on the bed and quickly carried the old one out into the yard to be burned.

This was a momentous ceremony; so Rosa slyly offered me a glass of delicious red wine with which we celebrated gaily. We lighted a match and in a moment the flames leaped high. Rosa pressed her hand into mine and together we enoyed watching the fire slowly consume the shabby, disreputable mess. Suddenly we heard a wild clamor.

"What you burn there?" shrieked Amato.

"Your filthy old mattress!" I cried triumphantly.

By this time the flames had died away and only ashes remained. Amato stared at us furiously for a moment. Then, with a scream of agony he rushed into the smoldering mass and feverishly threw himself upon it, raking with his bare hands, the gray dust. Finding nothing he turned to us in a frenzy.

"You," he cried wringing his hands at me in rage and anguish, "you why you not wait till I come home? You know what you done?" His voice became a hoarse sob, cracking in his throat. "You have burn my savings for forty years. I have all my eighteen hun'red dollars hid' away in that mattress!"

TROOPS CARRIED WITHOUT LOSS

Not a Single Man Lost as Canadians Are Transferred to United Kingdom

(By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 9 (CP-Cable) —Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the Canadian Active Service Force, declared today that the transfer of Canadian troops from Canada to Great Britain had been carried out without the loss of a single man and according to a schedule worked out months ago.

At a luncheon given by Sir William Coxen, Lord Mayor of London, for the senior officers of the forces of the Dominions now in Great Britain, General McNaughton said that "now that the initial movements have been completed, I feel at liberty to say that the schedule for the transport of troops was determined months ago and has been carried through on time, to the day, to the hour as laid down in advance, and that force whose strength is measured in tens of thousands has reached these shores without the loss of a single man."

Then, turning to senior officers of the navy present, including Rear-Admiral the Duke of Kent General McNaughton added that "for this we give thanks to Divine Providence and to the might of the British navy."

Many Guests Present

Included among the guests, most of whom were officers of the C.A.S.F., were Oliver Stanley, Secretary of State for War; Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, First Sea Lord and Chief of Naval Staff; Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom; and Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding, Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief the Fighting Command; Air-Marshal Sir Frederick Bowhill, Air Officer Commanding-in-Chief the Coastal Command; General Sir Walter Kirke, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Forces; Air-Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney, Air Officer Commanding the Reserve Command of the R.A.F.; and Air Vice-Marshal Richard Peirse, Deputy Chief of Air Staff.

The luncheon was held in the Egyptian room of the Mansion House.

General McNaughton defined Canada's war effort as a common struggle with other sections of the Empire to "end the menace to our rights and liberties."

Three Top-Grade In Eggs Easier

Although the fair volume of fresh receipts changed hands fairly well on the egg market, the three top grades in the graded section eased 1-2c per dozen. The retail division remained at former values.

The butter marke experienced a dull session, with about the only demand coming from outside points. While local interest was lacking, prices continued to hold previous levels in view of the small shipments of fresh-make butter to this market. Prints moved through retail channels at Wednesday's prices.

MODERN HUTS GIVEN TROOPS

Third Contingent Canadians Filter in to Aldershot Camp

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aldershot, Feb. 9—(CP Cable) —The ever-expanding training camp of the Canadian forces was the scene of the most intensive industry in weeks today.

At every encampment men of the incoming contingent whose arrival was announced yesterday were busy putting billets into shape, requisitioning essential supplies, and concentrating on the major task of unloading the stores and equipment the contingent brought with it.

A number of units detained at the port of debarkation for special duties filtered in today. They were greeted by Lieut.-General Charles Broad, general officer commanding the Aldershot command, and a large group of Canadian officers who arrived in the earlier flights.

Troops Sing Popular Songs

The men came in marching to popular songs while friendly salutations were exchanged with Canadian and Imperial units which passed them en route.

A majority of the newcomers were assigned to the most modern huts in the area providing every facility and even shower baths that actually worked. But the few who drew older barracks did not fancy the idea of relying on fireplaces for heat.

Like their comrades who came before them, they are finding the raw, damp English winter more severe than the sub-zero temperatures back home. A number of the men were nursing colds caught during the crossing.

"What does a fellow do to keep warm in this country?" asked a shivering youngster who had been through many western blizzards.

"You'll find out soon enough," a first fight veteran told him. "But you should complain about the cold. We've just came through the winter. This is what they call the spring over here."

National Gov't to Have Outstanding

Advocates Non-Political Board

"I advocated full co-operation under a non-political board which would have the power to see that co-operation was actually entered into," he said, "and, at the same time, there must be protection of the men whose employment might be interfered with through co-operative measures.

"That, in brief, was and is the policy which I have advocated througout on railway matters and it is the only practicable policy that has been advocated. That is, it could make great savings for both roads and would, at the same time not be unpopular with the people of Canada generally, so long as it cared justly and fairly for the men whose employment might be affected through co-operative measures".

Dr. Manion claimed that "in every section of Canada where conscription is unpopular", it was being rumored that National government meant conscription as Union government did in 1917.

Implied Reference in Change

"I note that even Mr. King in his broadcast last night made an implied reference to the same thing," he said.

"No one knows better than Mr. King my position against conscription because he was present in the House of March 30 last when I made my position quite clear. In that speech I very frankly opposed conscription, as I do now, on the grounds among others that it is unnecessary under present-day conditions of warfare (it has proved true since this war began); that in the last war its chief result was national disunity and misunderstanding while it raised very few men for our armies; and, finally, that the first duty of a public man is to hold this country together, to maintain national unity and understanding, not to disrupt the country and to cause serious disharmony and disunity, resulting in the impairment of our war effort at this very critical time in the life of our nation, when an enthusiastic war effort is so essential.

Opposes Conscription.

"While opposing conscription then, as I do now, I advocated complete co-operation, short of conscription, beside Britain in case of war."

Dr. Manion reiterated that a National government would be composed of outstanding leaders, regardless of politics. Such a government would be set up with the prime object of carrying out Canada's war effort "efficiently and economically—something which has not been done in the past."

Dr. Manion charged Prime Minister Mackenzie King with having made "the supreme betrayal"—not only of Britain but also of Canadian industry and Canadian workers — when Britain was refused the right to establish her own training schools in Canada two years ago.

"King made his refusal at a time when Britain was facing a life and death struggle for existence," Dr. Manion said.

Prime Minister Flayed.

Dr. Manion flayed the prime minister time and again over that event, dismissing as a "useless gesture" the prime minister's counter-offer to train British pilots in Canadian establishments at that time, in 1937 or 1938. The simple truth, he said, was that Canada had no such establishments then, practically no fighting planes and no teaching air personnel.

Speaking to a party rally in a theatre in this eastern Ontario town, Dr. Manion was joined on the platform by members of the Ontario Legislature and candidates in the approaching federal election, headed by Hon. H. A. Stewart, member for Leeds in the parliament just dissolved.

Refused Training School Is Charge.

Dr. Manion contended that the prime minister had refused Britain a training school here for British pilots, maintained by Britain, "at a time when Britain felt herself helpless to train her own flyers, because of congested population, lack of open spaces, short flying days due to fogs and many accidents among airmen due to those causes. Above all, at a time when it was known that Germany had an overwhelming superiority in numbers of airships and when it was the conviction of all thoughtful people that the next war would be ushered in by mass attacks of thousands of German planes on London and other vulerable points in Britain."

"If Britain's reasonable request" had been granted, he said, British flying schools would have been established in Canada and Canada could have trained its own airmen at "comparatively little expense," instead of, as now, embarking on what Mr. King calls the "Commonwealth Air Training Plan", which is really almost totally Canadian, at a cost to the dominion, according to Mr. King's own figures, of $350,000,000.

Prevented Big Industry.

By his refusal, said Dr. Manion, Mr. King had prevented the building up in Canada with British money of a great airplane industry. "His refusal was so churlish that British representatives, who had come here in 1938 or sooner with $100,000,000 worth of airplane orders to be given to Canadian industry, went back home and there began the building up of the huge industry that has since been established in the British Isles."

This was done in spite of the fear that in time of war German air attacks might wreck such plants, he added.

On top of that, huge plane orders were being filled today for Britain and France in the United States, thousands of which might have been built in Canada.

Dr. Manion said this refusal by the prime minister came when 500,000 Canadian workers were looking for jobs.

Unfaithful in Many Ways is Charge

"Many thousands of these men owe to the King government nothing but Christian forgiveness for this stupid refusal to stand beside Britain against Hitler's ghastly threats, as well as for that government's failure in peacetime, from 1935 on, to do anything practical or worthwhile to correct Canadian conditions in which over 1,000,000 men, women and children were on relief.

That is the great betrayal of Mr. King, he charged, and the Prime Minister had been equally unfaithful to the Canadian people in other ways.

"For example, I accuse Mr. King of having repudiated his public pledges of a lifetime, when he gagged parliament on January 25—when he insulted the representatives of the people, in both Senate and House of Commons, by calling them to Ottawa at great expense to the country and to the members themselves and then, without giving them an accounting of his stewardship, peremptorily sending them back home like school boys in disgrace.

Accused of War Effort

"By this act he imitated Hitler in the latter's treatment of the German parliament. Freedom of speech, particularly in parliament, is the very cornerstone of our liberties. We are today fighting for liberty in Europe while Mr. King destroys it at home.

"I am almost compelled to believe that he must have imbibed some of the spirit of Hitler when he made that well-publicized visit to the Fuehrer in Berlin a couple of years ago.

"I accuse Mr. King in his war effort, as in his peacetime inactivity of being unfaithful to the trust reposed in him by the Canadian people.

"Millions of dollars have been wasted, dependents of soldiers were ungratefully ignored, the soldiers themselves were for months ill-clad, military equipment both for our soldiers and for the defence of our shores was non-existent, voluntary recruiting was discouraged, profiteering and patronage were permitted.

War Effort Mishandled Claimed

"Indeed, the whole war effort was mishandled, resulting in discontent and dissatisfaction throughout Canada."

Dr. Manion charged Mr. King with "a tricky, unscrupulous act in torpedoing parliament," preventing members from obtaining information as was their right, yet responsible government was an "hereditary thing" with Mr. King, his ancestors having "fought and run for it."

Referring to the one-day session last month, Dr. Manion said Mr. King's "unsportsmanlike conduct" was emphasized by the fact that he himself made a prepared speech while other members were "gagged:"

"I know it was a prepared speech" he said "because he quoted two pages from Abraham Lincoln, and he also quoted 70 lines of poetry, that took nearly the whole of the session. I have heard speakers quote a single verse or perhaps two but never before have I heard a man read 14 verses of five lines in a single speech.

"I shall never forget it if I live to be 1,000, the look of amazement and wonder on the faces of his own friends as he went on, and on."

"The issue in this election is the conduct of the Mackenzie King Government in peace and war," he said.

The Prime Minister had said national unity was the issue. "Every decent loyal Canadian, French speaking or English, is all for unity. How can that be an issue when there is nobody on the other side?"

Defence Minister Scored

The record of the government was one of inefficiency, incompetence, patronage and profiteering. When war broke out it had no defences, no equipment, and apparently no plans to get any, despite warnings from the defence association.

Defence Minister Rogers had refered to him as the first casualty in this war of nerves, Dr. Manion recalled, but from Mr. Rogers' "dismal record of failure as Labor Minister and still more dismal record as Defence Minister," he felt Mr. Rogers must be a "casualty of the last war and hasn't got over it."

Dr. Manion said T. A. Kidd, Conservative candidate in Kingston, Mr. Rogers' riding, would put Rogers "back where he belongs—teaching."

"I hate to see a good teacher become a poor minister," he added. (Mr. Rogers was Professor of Economics at Queens University before entering parliament in 1935.)

MANY STREETS IN CITY SANDED

The Department of Public Works had their city sander out this morning spreading sand on streets and roadways situated on the various slopes of the city over which motorists were experiencing difficulties in getting their steeds to pass. Also about twenty-five city workmen were observed removing ice from the curb on Front Street as they picked it loose and loaded it on trucks for disposal.

Turkey Makes Unexpected Move By Seizing Krupp Shipyards

100 German Technicians Dismissed from War and Naval Ministries

SABOTAGE PLOT

Istanbul, Feb. 9 (AP)—Authoritative sources tonight said government dismissal of 180 German technicians and occupation of the German-owned Krupp shipyards were due to discovery of a far-flung German sabotage plot in the Near East.

The blanket discharge, coming one day after Turkish seizure of the German-owned Krupp shipyards here, applied to 20 marine specialists at the Turkish naval base of Gyeldjuk on the Sea of Marmora, 20 technicians at a munitions factory near Ankara, and 60 others active in Turkey's military preparations.

Officials said that henceforth no German could work in state-owned industries. This was believed to affect several hundred men in addition to those discharged.

Reports that Germany's ambassador, Franz Von Papen, had been directed to make a sharp protest against the shipyards confiscation were answered in government circles with the assertion that Turkey was within her legal rights.

Marines continued to occupy the Krupp yards on the Golden Horn, at an inlet on the strategic Straits of the Bosphorus, where 30 Germans had been supervising completion of two submarines for the Turkish navy until their sudden ouster yesterday.

Confiscation of other German property in Turkey was expected "sooner or later" in informed circles, which saw the once-strong German influence in Turkey waning since Turkey's alignment with Great Britain and France.

It was learned hundreds of other German experts employed in Turkey would be discharged and sent back to the Reich. They have been acting as government advisers, factory technicians, and professors in Istanbul University and Ankara Agricultural College.

Forced liquidation of German enterprises and voluntary withdrawal of many German business men was reported already under way, the Germans alleging that Turkish obstructions made further trade impossible.

Measures against German interests were seen by foreign observers as logical upon recalling Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu's recent statement that "Turkey is not neutral but only nonbelligerent for the moment."

(In Berlin, German sources said confiscation of the Krupp shipyards on the Golden Horn, an inlet of the strategic Bosphorus Straits, was likely to result in nothing more serious than diplomatic words and more emphatic press comments.)

Declining to explain the seizure, official Turkish quarters remarked only that "Spring is coming."

Many observers have expressed fear that Spring will bring a German or Russian thrust into the Balkans to seize the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, which link the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

In this connection, attention was riveted today on British and French troop concentrations in the Near East, with a statement in Paris by the French Minister of Colonies that France's colonial army could be swelled to 2,000,000 men if necessary. Turks assert that the French and British now have some 500,000 men under arms in the Near East.

An article in the Turkish press, apparently inspired, said, "the Allies have counted on the possibility of a Russian attack across the Balkans toward the Dardanelles. Allied and Turkish armies will give adequate support to the defenders."

Turkish marines occupied the shipyards yesterday; today the government dismissed 100 German technicians employed by the war and naval ministries and gave them 48 hours to leave the country.

Authoritative sources said the government had uncovered evidence of a network of Nazi agents ready to perpetrate explosions, train wrecks and other havoc throughout the near east on the signal from Berlin.

Under the circumstances, they said, it was possible to allow the Germans to remain in strategic positions, especially as the technicians were completing work on submarines which Turkey would expect to throw into combat if they became involved in war.

Turkey's action against Germans came as elsewhere in the Balkans and in the near east steps were being taken to avoid or prepare against any extension of the war.

Differences Exist For Some Time

Berlin, Feb. 9—(AP)—Differences have existed for some time between Turkish authorities and the management of the Krupp shipyards on Turkey's Golden Horn, seized by the Turkish government, informed quarters said today.

They said also that there have been differences between German technicians, 100 of whom were reported dismissed today, and the Turkish authorities for whom they were working.

It was said that in many countries foreigners are being pushed out of concerns considered essential to defence. The technicians, it was added, all were on private contract and hence official relations between the German and Turkish governments need not be affected by their dismissal.

What action would be taken regarding the Istanbul developments was unpredictable, authorized spokesmen said, until the full circumstances become officially known to the Berlin government. The foreign office at 1 p.m. today claimed to be still without official word from the Embassy in Turkey.

JUDICATURE BILL NOWBEINGARGUED

Power With Attorney-General

But in proposing to abolish grand juries, Col. Drew argued, nothing was being done to take away the powers of the Attorney-General to prefer an indictment directly against an individual. If the grand jury, before whom that indictment must now be taken, was done away with, it meant the Attorney-General, or an officer appointed by him, could cause a man to go to trial without any preliminary hearing whatever.

Speaker Gives Ruling.

"What is being done here in this legislature is simply a further encroachment of the Fascism which has been growing apace," said Col. Drew.

During the debate between Mr. Conant and Col. Drew, Speaker James Clark ruled that Col. Drew might describe legislation before the House as Fascist in tendency but he could not so describe legislation already passed.

The changes in the bill, the Jurors' Amendment Act, were recommended by F. H. Barlow, Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario, in an interim report on the overhauling of Ontario judicial procedure.

Will Inspect Buildings.

One recommended change is not being made. The government does not propose to abolish inspection of public institutions—a task now performed by the grand jury. A clause in the bill provides for the selection of juries from regular jury panels to carry out this inspection.

Practice and procedure in Ontario courts was substantially the same as it was in 1881, said Mr. Conant. Conditions today required new methods and other reports in the administration of justice. Most British jurisdictions had abolished grand juries. The three Prairie Provinces never had them. Quebec got along well without them.

Twelve men on a county jury was a waste and an anomaly.

Statement Incorrect is Claim

"It not infrequently happens that the amount involved in a county court jury trial is less than the cost of the jury", said Mr. Conant. "A litigant may have a trial before a judge and jury in the county court on an action involving $125, the maximum jurisdiction of Division Courts in actions of tort being limited to $120. It is estimated that the average actual cost of a county court civil action trial with a jury is in excess of $300."

Col. Drew said the Barlow report, copies of which had been furnished the House members, said the recommendations in it had the approval of a committee of the Benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

"Is it not correct that the Attorney-General has a letter saying that statement is incorrect and that they do not agree with the recommendations", asked Col. Drew.

Mr. Conant said that some members of the committee might have expressed themselves in favor of the report, but it was incorrect to say the Benchers concurred. It seemed to him there had been some communication in the matter.

The report should be corrected and the letter tabled in the House, said Col. Drew, pressing for its production. Mr. Conant said he would table it.

The important issue was the protection of people who might be accused, said Col. Drew. While Mr. Conant cited the abolition of the grand jury in Great Britain, that jurisdiction still retained a form of preliminary hearing to decide whether committal was warranted.

Wants Bill Before Committee

If the bill were adopted, however, the Attorney-General or an officer named by him could take an indictment directly before an Assize Court jury.

"When there is no intervening protection you easily reach the place where the gossip of the countryside may decide whether there is to be a prosecution or not," said Col. Drew. He urged reference of the bill to the Legal Bills Committee. It was an affront to the law profession to refuse it the opportunity to make representations before a committee.

The legislature had no jurisdiction to legislate in criminal matters and could not provide another pre-trial procedure, said Mr. Conant. The British parliament could so legislate.

The House had already passed this session legislation as iniquitous as any statute in Hitler's Germany said Col. Drew. (His reference was to the Succession Duty Act.)

Form of Fascism Claim

"This form of legislation is carrying this government towards a form of Fascism in its legislation" he said.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn, absent from the House for two days working on his budget address, was expected back today and may join in the debate.

First reading was given yesterday to a bill to extend to passenger bus and motor transport drivers the privilege of voting in advance polls at municipal elections. Another bill given first reading would enable a municipality to sue the person or corporation responsible for injury to police officer while the latter was on duty, action to be for wages and medical bills.

capture of 13 steel and concrete forts in the Hotinen and Summa areas of the Karelian Isthmus. The report said "the enemy suffered great losses.")

But the parachute campaign by Russians disguised as Finnish soldiers and farmers aroused the concern of Finnish military leaders.

Several patrols of these saboteurs dropped from planes were captured yesterday, the Finnish high command said, but added that others had caused considerable damage.

One Finnish informant said parachute patrols tapped communication lines in an effort to determine troop concentrations and attempted to foster discontent in Finnish ranks. He said these troops defended themselves with hand grenades and dynamite when attacked.

Finns declared a major offensive by 250,000 Russian troops had been turned back on four points and "some thousands" were dead in terrific fighting on the Karelian Isthmus.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

to Italy, which would be his first call.

Disclosing the move at a Press conference, the president said Welles had been instructed to make no proposals or commitments in the name of the United States.

Statements made to him by officials of European governments will be received solely for the President and State Secretary Cordell Hull, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Formal Statement is Read

The President, refusing to elaborate on his announcement, read the following formal statement to the newspapermen:—

"At the request of the President, the Undersecretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles will proceed shortly to Europe to visit Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain. This visit is solely for the purpose of advising the President and the Secretary of State as to present conditions in Europe.

"Mr. Welles will, of course, be authorised to make no proposals or commitments in the name of the Government of the United States.

"In Strictest Confidence"

"Furthermore, the statements made to him by officials of governments will be kept in the strictest confidence and will be communicated by him solely to the President and the Secetarry of State."

The President also announced at the Press conference that Myron C. Taylor, his personal peace envoy to the Vatican, would sail for Italy next week, probably on the 17th.

Taylor, Mr. Roosevelt said, will carry with him to Rome only a personal letter from the President requesting that he accept the mission.

Mr. Roosevelt said Welles would be in Europe only long enough to visit the four countries. Asked whether he would visit Chancellor Hitler, the President said he did not know.

President's Explanation

To a question whether he had advised Congress of the move, Mr. Roosevelt replied that it was purely a matter for himself and Secretary Hull. The President told the reporters that Welles would carry no message from him nor would a staff accompany him.

When someone inquired whether Welles would discuss with European leaders any peace plan the president might have in mind, Mr. Roosevelt sharply told the questioner not to get didactic. He added that he did not know whom Welles would see, what he would say or what the government officials would say to him.

FORCED FLIGHT

Claire would have collapsed if Bill hadn't reached out and taken her in his arms. He could hear her heart beating against his chest, racing madly. Her face was contorted with fright.

He leaned down and kissed her gently on the lips, and then again, as she clung to him.

"It's a bluff," he whispered. "They can't possibly know of this place. Don't be afraid, but be very quiet."

"Come out, Cameron!" the voice in the bedroom called again, an angry note in it now. "We know you are hidden there. It will go worse with you if we have to hunt for you!"

There was complete silence for more than a minute as the man who had shouted waited for an answer. Claire's heart was still beating wildly and it seemed to her that its thumping could be heard through the wall.

They then heard a guttural command in German in the next room, and the sound of several persons moving heavily about. The searchers apparently were looking under the bed, behind the chairs, the curtains, every place a person might hide.

From the kitchen and the other bedroom came sounds of a similar hunt, the banging of doors.

Suddenly a voice rang out:

"Come here, all of you! Stand guard in front of this chest! This is where he's hidden! When you are ready, I'll open the door. Shoot if he makes a move! He's a desperate man!"

Claire closed her eyes.

The test had come—the test of the careful efforts that had been made to entirely conceal all entrance to the hidden room.

"Ready!" she heard the command and recognized again the voice. It was that of George Roland.

The door of the big chest was flung violently open, and there was the sound of a man jumping to one side. Roland obviously was taking no chances on risking his precious skin.

They heard his exclamation of surprise when the opened wardrobe revealed nothing.. Then they could hear him breathing heavily. Evidently he had thrust his head inside the chest.

"Move this wardrobe!" he commanded.

The heavy chest grated against the wall. Then came the careful sounding of the walls, searching for some hidden room that might give a hollow sound and reveal a hiding place. Smart, sharp raps.

Claire blessed Frau Weber's dead husband for having done such a good job. He had, his widow told her, placed a thin plate of padded steel in the panel so that if ever it were tapped it would give off the sound of a real wall.

Roland, cursing now, ordered his men to put the chest exactly as it had been.

"A mistake has been made, somewhere," he said, gruffly. "The person who denounced Frau Weber was wrong. We must put everything back as it was, so she will not suspect that we have searched the place. She is too valuable to us to arouse her anger."

Claire and Bill heard the chest being pushed back into place, and the men moving about the apartment for several more minutes. Then, at last, the sound of the outer door being closed.

The girl collapsed weakly onto the cot, and her body shook with convulsive sobs as she finally gave way to tears.

She was still unnerved half an hour later when a sharp knock came on the wall and they heard the voice of Frau Weber calling to them. There was a note of alarm in her voice, which turned to relief as Cameron sprang up and pulled the lever that opened the wall panel.

"How you frightened me!" the German woman exclaimed as they appeared. "I thought—I don't know what I thought."

"We had visitors," Cameron explained, and went on to tell her what had happened. Frau Weber's face reflected the alarm she felt and Lili rushed to the door, opened it cautiously and looked out.

"They they do suspect us, Mother," Lili said as the American finished.

"It seems so. There has been a slip, somewhere. Perhaps you were followed here, Herr Cameron?"

"I'd swear we were not. We saw no one."

"Naturally. But some one saw you—a stranger in this neighborhood—a report was made, and the raid followed."

"It was George Roland who led them here," Claire told her.

"Ah, Herr Roland?" Frau Weber shrugged her shoulders. "He goes too far, I think. We shall see."

"But, Mother—now that we are under suspicion . . . " her daughter said.

"Yes, Lili, you're right. You, Herr Cameron and the Fraulein must go. Our work is more important than any individuals. If they come back here—and I know they will—there must not be the slightest shred of evidence against either of us. Otherwise we are through—our usefulness will be at an end."

"You mean—you mean, we must go?" Claire asked, her eyes widening with fright. "You'll not turn us out, Frau Weber, surely?"

"No, no, of course not, my dear. But you must leave here—at once. While you get ready, Lili will get together a bag of food. It won't be much—we haven't much. No one has, but you're welcome to what there is."

"You are very kind, Frau Weber," Cameron said. "You have been marvellous to take us in—to protect us."

"But what shall we do?" Claire asked, panic-stricken at the prospect of being turned out in the streets.

"This is an emergency," the German woman said. "We must meet it as such. No word has come through yet, but I'm sure it will. Your best chance is to go back to where you arrived, Fraulein—to Pichelsdorf. You can hide in the heavy woods there for several days if necessary. There is water, and if you are careful, the food we give you will hold out."

"But isn't there a chance that the men who came here—who searched the place—may be watching outside?" Cameron asked.

"The chances are almost a hundred to one they are still very close by. For some reason Herr Roland suspects me, and you may depend upon it, friend or no friend, he'll see me condemned to the axe if he can prove that I've betrayed the Nazi cause."

"Then how shall we get away?" Claire asked. "If we go out the door, they may be waiting for us outside in the dark, and it's the only way out of the flat."

Lili laughed, her pale cheeks showing the trace of a dimple that might have been charming if she had not been so thin.

"There is another way out," she said. "A way we have used before. The roof."

"You must take your crutches, too," she advised. "A crippled man in uniform will attract little or no attention, and the Fraulein will be taken for a friend or a relative, helping the injured soldier along."

While she was talking, Lili had been getting an ironing board from the kitchen. At first glance it appeared like any other board, but to the astonishment of the Americans, she opened it out to twice its regular size. It really was two boards, cleverly tooled to fit into each other.

"When it's opened out, it locks together," she explained, "making it twice as long—long enough for our purpose, and strong enough to hold a heavy man."

Frau Weber carefully explained what they were to do when they crossed over to the roof of the next building.

"On the far side there is a stairway," she said. "It will bring you out in the next street and if, as I suspect, there are guards in the alleyway below our place, they'll never see you. If you should see any one in the street, wait until they are out of sight. Fraulein Dietrich knows which bus to take—Number 57. It will land you at Pichelsdorf in about an hour, and if you are careful you may not be noticed."

"How do we know a plane will come for us?" Claire asked.

"You don't. It's the only chance you have to escape, though, and I'm sure your friend will be there soon. The message went through. I checked on that. Your friend will be there if—if he's still alive . . ."

CHAPTER 22

SEEKING REFUGE

"I don't know what I'd have done if you hadn't given me shelter," he said. "You're a brave woman, Frau Weber. I hope to meet you again under happier circumstances."

The woman kissed Claire, and then told Lili it was time to go. The girl had slipped quietly out the front door a few minutes before and listened outside. She also had made sure the stairway was clear, returning as silently as she had gone."

At her mother's words, she picked up the ironing board that could be extended to nearly twice its length, and put it under her arm.

"All right," she said. "We're ready."

Frau Weber turned out the light before opening the door and the three of them slipped out into the darkness, Cameron carrying his crutches and Claire holding the bag of food the woman had given her.

Lili tiptoed along the corridor, and slowly started up the stairs. At each landing she whispered for the other two to wait in the shadows while she scouted to make sure they would encounter no one. At last they reached the roof, over the fourth floor and, guided by Lili who held Cameron's hand while he in turn clasped Claire's, they crept to the far edge.

"Now," Lili whispered, "if you'll put down your crutches and help me open out the board."

Cameron did as she told him, and with her carried the board to the coping around the roof top. He steadied it as she pushed and in a few moments, he felt it firm beneath the pressure of his hands.

"Good," the girl said. "It's in place. When you both get safely across, raise the end and push it to the edge. I can draw it back to this side."

"I'll go first," Cameron whispered. He found Lili's hand in the darkness and shook it as he voiced his thanks.

Slowly he edged his way across the board, carrying the bag of food. When he was across, Lili slid the crutches out on the board, he reached them and drew them over. Then, when Claire was ready, he held out the crutches to her and she grasped the end of each.

"I hope all this terrible business soon ends," Claire paused to say to Lili, "and you will have your Freddy back again, safe and sound."

When Claire was safely across, Cameron raised the board as Lili had directed, and leaning out supported it as far as he could while she drew it back.

"All right," she hissed, finally, and Bill and Claire collected the crutches and their bundle and started hunting for the stairway. There was a faint glow from the stars, but otherwise Berlin was entirely shrouded in darkness. As they felt their way carefully about the roof, it seemed hours to Claire before they located the steps leading down.

Bill led the way, his crutches held in a position for instant defense if they should meet any one. But their luck held, and they made their way to the street without interference. They had seen faint edges of light under several doors as they passed along the corridors from one flight of stairs to the next, but no one had appeared to challenge them.

While Claire crouched in the entrance to the flat building, Cameron adjusted his crutches and hobbled slowly out to reconnoiter. He was back in a few minutes without having seen or heard anything, so they started, the girl touching his arm as he made his way slowly along with the aid of the crutches. His bandaged foot he carefully held up from the pavement.

At last they reached the corner where Frau Weber had told them their bus would stop, and settled down to wait. Claire glanced at her watch, and by the radium tinted numerals saw that it was 11.30. They had delayed longer and taken much more time than she had imagined.

"No use waiting for a bus now," she said. "I'm sure they don't run at night, at least not this late. They're not permitted to have lights."

"Where can we go? We can't sit out here all night—it's too cold for you."

"I can stand the cold, Bill, but I'm afraid there's too much danger of an officer coming along and questioning us. Perhaps we'd better get off the street."

She had looked around carefully when she arrived in Berlin on the bus, and remembered a building close by which might offer shelter. Holding Cameron's arm while he hobbled along, she guided him there. The front doors were locked but there was a deep recess at one side of the entrance and Claire drew her companion into it.

"At any rate, we'll be out of the cold wind here," she said, "and unless a brown shirt comes along with a flashlight, we're reasonably safe."

"If he does, I'll crack him over the head with a crutch," Cameron threatened.

Fortunately for the brown shirts and for the fugitives, no one did bother them, and Claire was even able to get a little sleep, crouched on the marble floor of the entrance, leaning against Cameron's knees. He stood over her, alert, prepared to put up a fight if they were surprised.

At the first streak of daylight, he awakened her and they moved back toward the bus stop. At Claire's suggestion they did not go to the little island in the middle of the street, but waited in a doorway. When she saw a bus approaching they hurried across the street. It was the wrong bus but Number 57 came along right after, and they climbed aboard.

Claire recognized the old driver as the same one with whom she had ridden into the city, but there was no light of recognition in the man's dull eyes as he exclaimed "Heil Hitler" in a flat voice and extended his right arm upward in salute. They obediently "heiled" back and the driver clucked sympathetically as he noted Cameron's bandaged foot and crutches.

"Pichelsdorf," Claire said, and proffered money for the fare. The man made the change, and then the bus lurched off as he shifted gears.

"If we have any trouble" Cameron whispered, "we'll go out this door and make a run for it." Claire nodded.

The ride, however, was without incident. Only two other passengers got on and they had the bus virtually to themselves as they rode along in the gray early morning light.

The sun was just coming up over the horizon when they stepped down from the bus. Much to their relief, they saw that the road was clear except for the vehicle. Claire recognized the woods, and after a short search found the path over which she had walked before.

They had no more than reached the first fringe of trees, still within hearing of the main road, when they heard the roar of motors and hastily concealed themselves.

"Just in time," Cameron breathed, peering out through the underbrush. "It's a patrol on motorcycles." The patrol sped down the road, and as the fugitives watched they saw it stop the lumbering bus, now nearly a mile down the road. A few minutes later the vehicle moved on, the men returned to their motorcycles, remounted, and the whole troop sped onward — away from the woods.

"What a break!" Bill mopped his forehead with his sleeve. "If they had caught up with the bus five minutes sooner, or if they had asked the driver any questions, we'd really be in a spot now."

"I hope our luck holds," Claire said. Soon she located the winding path which she knew would lead them to the clearing where Rene Martin had landed.

"How long do you think it will to before Rene shows up?" she asked as they walked along.

"You've got me there. I have no more idea than you have — but I hope it's soon. It's not going to be much fun dodging around behind these trees with the chance of a Nazi popping out at us, a gun aimed at our heads."

"But you're certain he will come?" A note of fear appeared in Claire's voice despite her efforts to hide it.

"Of course, dear. He won't fail us." Claire didn't know he added the words "I hope" to himself. Looking up into his confident, smiling face, she took new hope.

AT THE BELLE

"HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME"

A brilliant screen transmutation of Victor Hugo's renowned novel "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will come next to the Belle Theatre with Charles Laughton in the title role, with a star-studden feature cast, with a record roster of atmosphere players, and with a vivid pageant of medieval Parisian life staged against dazzling sets of monumental proportions.

Treating of that significant period of European history just before Columbus discovered America, when thinkers everywhere were throwing off the shackles of superstition and ignorance and were awakening to a new world of progress, "The Huchback of Notre Dame" has long been a classic of literature. Written in 1823-30, the book created a worldwide sensation and established the name of Victor Hugo.

Its immortal tale deals with Quasimodo, the deformed but loyal orphan who rings the great bells of Notre Dame. A beauteous dancing gypsy, Esmeralda, comes to Paris for the annual Feast of Fools in the winter of 1482. She arouses the sinister interest of the King's High Justice, Frollo, who pursues her to the cathedral where, thanks to the right sanctuary, she receives shelter and safety. Later, Esmeralda flees, Quasimodo endeavoring to bring her back. He is caught and flogged for abduction, while Esmeralda finds refuge with the powerful Beggars' Guild.

While entertaining at the birthday party of Fleur de Lys, Esmeralda attracts a soldier, Phoebus who is slain by the jealous Frollo. Esmeralda is accused, tried and sentenced to the gallows. The Archbishop of Notre Dame learns that his brother, Frollo, is really guilty of the crime, but before he can secure her freedom, Quasimodo rescues the condemned girl by swinging out of the bell-tower on a rope snatching her from the hangman's noose. Then he drops molten lead to keep away a frenzied mob. However, Frollo steals into the building, and Quasimodo faces him in an exciting battle, slaying the evil High Justice, but receiving his death-wound in doing so.

Charles Laughton surpasses every previous pertrayal. Equally splendid is rated Maureen O'Hara, Laughton's protegee, who, according to preview critics, makes a sensational American debut as the gypsy girl. The nineteen-year-old newcomer has been seen once before opposite Laughton in the British-made "Jamaica Inn".

Historic excellence is also exhibited by the other prominent members of the support, such as Sir Cedric Hardwicke (Frollo), Thomas Mitchell (Clopin, King of the Beggars), Edmond O'Brien (Gringoire), Alan Marshal (Phoebus), Walter Hampden (the Archbishop), Katharine Alexander and Harry Davenport.

Some of the most costly and breath-taking settings ever built for film purposes parallel the Paris scene of the period. Interiors and exteriors of the great Notre Dame cathedral, the Sainte-Chapelle, the Palais de Justice and the beggars' retreat in the cavernous Court of Miracles were reproduced in huge detailed fashion.

An RKO Radio Picture, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is a production by Pandro S. Berman, and was directed by William Dieterle, responsible for such productions as "The Story of Louis Pasteur", "The Life of Emile Zola", "Juarez", and "Midsummer Night's Dream".

A funny Walt Disney's Donald Duck cartoon "Officer Duck" and the popular Paramount British news reel will be exhibited on the same program. On the week-end matinee another breath-taking chapter of "Daredevils of the Red Circle" will be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Law of The Pampas"

A roaring action story of range warfare—plus the romantic background of faraway Argentina—plus a number of lilting new Latin songs add up to "Law of the Pampas" latest of the "Hopalong Cassidy," outdoor dramas, which is now playing at the Capitol theatre.

William Boyd is his usual adventure-loving, devil-may-care self as "Hopalong" in a story which for sheer thrills, rapid action and romance surpasses even the best of past "Cassidys." He's assisted by the biggest "name" cast he has had so far, including Russell Hayden, Sydney Blackmer, Steffi Duna, Sidney Toler and that popular male quartet of the air waves, The King's Men.

Hoppy travels several thousand miles from the home range for adventure, when the wealthy Argentine buyer of some "Bar 20's" prize cattle asks him to accompany the herd to the ranching country below the equator. Eager to help a friend and always avid for excitement, "Hopalong" accepts, taking with him his pal, "Lucky", played with his usual spirit by the handsome Hayden.

Danger and strife follow "Cassidy," even to Argentina, this time in the person of the sinister Blackmer, an American married into the wealthy family "Hoppy" is visiting. When the visitor learns that one member of the family after another has been mysteriously murdered, until there are only two left, he begins to suspect the unfriendly Blackmer of the crimes.

"Hoppy's" shrewd investigation, carried out in strange surroundings and without the knowledge of the family, reveals that Blackmer, in league with two European desperadoes and an unsuspecting native girl, is the man behind the mysterious killings. Enlisting the aid of "Lucky" and the loyal Argentine gauchos, "Cassidy" goes out after the outlaws in his traditional "Bar 20" manner.

The romance of the Argentine background is enhanced by four original songs with a strong Latin flavor. They are: "Habanera," "Rosita," "Los Gauchos" and "La Jornado," sung by the King's Men, and the popular tango, "Fantasia Argentina," sung and danced by the vivacious Miss Duna.

The added attraction features James, Lucille and Russell Gleason in a comedy riot, "Should Husbands Work?" To conclude the bill the management was fortunate to secure as an added special attraction "First Days" showing how England was prepared for war with intimate glimpses into the Motherlands precautionary system.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Little Accident" and "Man From Montreal"

Everybody's sweetheart, Baby Sandy, that dynamite kid in diapers, is now at the McCarthy Theatre in her newest comedy-howl, "Little Accident." Presented previously at the McCarthy Theatre New Year's Eve only, "Little Accident" made an instant hit as a swell comedy feature and this reviewer who saw it New Year's Eve is pleased at this time to recommend it to all, as a gay comedy treat certain to be enjoyed by every moviegoer. Edgar Kennedy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson and Ernest Truex are also featured in addition to Baby Sandy.

Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Man from Montreal," a new feature presentation of the adventures of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, is also now at the McCarthy Theatre as a second big treat in addition to Baby Sandy in "Little Accident."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Russians are making first serious attempt to use parachute jumpers in the war against Finland.

For years the Russians have been training selected men and women for this dangerous type of operation and the descent of hundreds of parachutists from the skies has been a feature of the great annual displays of Soviet armed power at Moscow.

According to reports now coming out of Finland both men and women are being dropped behind the Finnish lines. While many have been killed or captured the Finns can by no means be sure that others have not escaped.

It is probable the parachutists are expected to supplement the efforts of the Soviet air force bombers in demoralizing the civilian population and throwing the Finnish transport and supply facilities into confusion. Some may be spies, purely and simply. Others may be primarily saboteurs.

The spies will be expected to gather information which will assist Soviet airmen in their raids while the saboteurs will carry explosives for the destruction of bridges and other vital structures. The Germans used parachutists for similar work on a small scale in Poland but it is not believed they contributed in any great degree to success of German operations there. As the Russians emphasized parachute jumping in their war preparations and now are using it on a considerable scale the results may be a test of the value of these suicide squads.

FORCED FLIGHT

Claire would have collapsed if Bill hadn't reached out and taken her in his arms. He could hear her heart beating against his chest, racing madly. Her face was contorted with fright.

He leaned down and kissed her gently on the lips, and then again, as she clung to him.

"It's a bluff," he whispered. "They can't possibly know of this place. Don't be afraid, but be very quiet."

"Come out, Cameron!" the voice in the bedroom called again, an angry note in it now. "We know you are hidden there. It will go worse with you if we have to hunt for you!"

There was complete silence for more than a minute as the man who had shouted waited for an answer. Claire's heart was still beating wildly and it seemed to her that its thumping could be heard through the wall.

They then heard a guttural command in German in the next room, and the sound of several persons moving heavily about. The searchers apparently were looking under the bed, behind the chairs, the curtains, every place a person might hide.

From the kitchen and the other bedroom came sounds of a similar hunt, the banging of doors.

Suddenly a voice rang out: "Come here, all of you! Stand guard in front of this chest! This is where he's hidden! When you are ready, I'll open the door. Shoot if he makes a move! He's a desperate man!"

Claire closed her eyes.

The test had come—the test of the careful efforts that had been made to entirely conceal all entrance to the hidden room.

"Ready!" she heard the command and recognized again the voice. It was that of George Roland.

The door of the big chest was flung violently open, and there was the sound of a man jumping to one side. Roland obviously was taking no chances on risking his precious skin.

They heard his exclamation of surprise when the opened wardrobe revealed nothing.. Then they could hear him breathing heavily. Evidently he had thrust his head inside the chest.

"Move this wardrobe!" he commanded.

The heavy chest grated against the wall. Then came the careful sounding of the walls, searching for some hidden room that might give a hollow sound and reveal a hiding place. Smart, sharp raps.

Claire blessed Frau Weber's dead husband for having done such a good job. He had, his widow told her, placed a thin plate of padded steel in the panel so that if ever it were tapped it would give off the sound of a real wall.

Roland, cursing now, ordered his men to put the chest exactly as it had been.

"A mistake has been made, somewhere," he said, gruffly. "The person who denounced Frau Weber was wrong. We must put everything back as it was, so she will not suspect that we have searched the place. She is too valuable to us to arouse her anger."

Claire and Bill heard the chest being pushed back into place, and the men moving about the apartment for several more minutes. Then, at last, the sound of the outer door being closed.

The girl collapsed weakly onto the cot, and her body shook with convulsive sobs as she finally gave way to tears.

She was still unnerved half an hour later when a sharp knock came on the wall and they heard the voice of Frau Weber calling to them. There was a note of alarm in her voice, which turned to relief as Cameron sprang up and pulled the lever that opened the wall panel.

"How you frightened me!" the German woman exclaimed as they appeared. "I thought—I don't know what I thought."

"We had visitors," Cameron explained, and went on to tell her what had happened. Frau Weber's face reflected the alarm she felt and Lili rushed to the door, opened it cautiously and looked out.

"They they do suspect us, Mother," Lili said as the American finished.

"It seems so. There has been a slip somewhere. Perhaps you were followed here, Herr Cameron?"

"I'd swear we were not. We saw no one."

"Naturally. But some one saw you—a stranger in this neighborhood—a report was made, and the raid followed."

"It was George Roland who led them here," Claire told her.

"Ah, Herr Roland?" Frau Weber shrugged her shoulders. "He goes too far, I think. We shall see."

"But, Mother—now that we are under suspicion . . ." her daughter said.

"Yes, Lili, you're right. You, Herr Cameron and the Fraulein must go. Our work is more important than any individuals. If they come back here—and I know they will—there must not be the slightest shred of evidence against either of us. Otherwise we are through—our usefulness will be at an end."

"You mean—you mean, we must go?" Claire asked, her eyes widening with fright. "You'll not turn us out, Frau Weber, surely?"

"No, no, of course not, my dear. But you must leave here—at once. While you get ready, Lili will get together a bag of food. It won't be much—we haven't much. No one has, but you're welcome to what there is."

"You are very kind, Frau Weber," Cameron said. "You have been marvellous to take us in—to protect us."

"But what shall we do?" Claire asked, panic-stricken at the prospect of being turned out in the streets.

"This is an emergency," the German woman said. "We must meet it as such. No word has come through yet, but I'm sure it will. Your best chance is to go back to where you arrived, Fraulein—to Pichelsdorf. You can hide in the heavy woods there for several days if necessary. There is water, and if you are careful, the food we give you will hold out."

"But isn't there a chance that the men who came here—who searched the place—may be watching outside?" Cameron asked.

"The chances are almost a hundred to one they are still very close by. For some reason Herr Roland suspects me, and you may depend upon it, friend or no friend, he'll see me condemned to the axe if he can prove that I've betrayed the Nazi cause."

"Then how shall we get away?" Claire asked. "If we go out the door, they may be waiting for us outside in the dark, and it's the only way out of the flat."

Lili laughed, her pale cheeks showing the trace of a dimple that might have been charming if she had not been so thin.

"There is another way out," she said. "A way we have used before. The roof."

"You must take your crutches, too," she advised. "A crippled man in uniform will attract little or no attention, and the Fraulein will be taken for a friend or a relative, helping the injured soldier along."

While she was talking, Lili had been getting an ironing board from the kitchen. At first glance it appeared like any other board, but to the astonishment of the Americans, she opened it out to twice its regular size. It really was two boards, cleverly tooled to fit into each other.

"When it's opened out, it locks together," she explained, "making it twice as long—long enough for our purpose, and strong enough to hold a heavy man."

Frau Weber carefully explained what they were to do when they crossed over to the roof of the next building.

"On the far side there is a stairway," she said. "It will bring you out in the next street and if, as I suspect, there are guards in the alleyway below our place, they'll never see you. If you should see any one in the street, wait until they are out of sight. Fraulein Dietrich knows which bus to take—Number 57. It will land you at Pichelsdorf in about an hour, and if you are careful you may not be noticed."

"How do we know a plane will come for us?" Claire asked.

"You don't. It's the only chance you have to escape, though, and I'm sure your friend will be there soon. The message went through. I checked on that. Your friend will be there if—if he's still alive . . ."

CHAPTER 22

SEEKING REFUGE

"I don't know what I'd have done if you hadn't given me shelter," he said. "You're a brave woman, Frau Weber. I hope to meet you again under happier circumstances."

The woman kissed Claire, and then told Lili it was time to go. The girl had slipped quietly out the front door a few minutes before and listened outside. She also had made sure the stairway was clear, returning as silently as she had gone."

At her mother's words, she picked up the ironing board that could be extended to nearly twice its length, and put it under her arm.

"All right," she said. "We're ready."

Frau Weber turned out the light before opening the door and the three of them slipped out into the darkness, Cameron carrying his crutches and Claire holding the bag of food the woman had given her.

Lili tiptoed along the corridor, and slowly started up the stairs. At each landing she whispered for the other two to wait in the shadows while she scouted to make sure they would encounter no one. At last they reached the roof, over the fourth floor and, guided by Lili who held Cameron's hand while he in turn clasped Claire's, they crept to the far edge.

"Now," Lili whispered, "if you'll put down your crutches and help me open out the board."

Cameron did as she told him, and with her carried the board to the coping around the roof top. He steadied it as she pushed and in a few moments, he felt it firm beneath the pressure of his hands.

"Good," the girl said. "It's in place. When you both get safely across, raise the end and push it to the edge. I can draw it back to this side."

"I'll go first," Cameron whispered. He found Lili's hand in the darkness and shook it as he voiced his thanks.

Slowly he edged his way across the board, carrying the bag of food. When he was across, Lili slid the crutches out on the board, he reached them and drew them over. Then, when Claire was ready, he held out the crutches to her and she grasped the end of each.

"I hope all this terrible business soon ends," Claire paused to say to Lili, "and you will have your Freddy back again, safe and sound."

When Claire was safely across, Cameron raised the board as Lili had directed, and leaning out supported it as far as he could while she drew it back.

"All right," she hissed, finally, and Bill and Claire collected the crutches and their bundle and started hunting for the stairway. There was a faint glow from the stars, but otherwise Berlin was entirely shrouded in darkness. As they felt their way carefully about the roof, it seemed hours to Claire before they located the steps leading down.

Bill led the way, his crutches held in a position for instant defense if they should meet any one. But their luck held, and they made their way to the street without interference. They had seen faint edges of light under several doors as they passed along the corridors from one flight of stairs to the next, but no one had appeared to challenge them.

While Claire crouched in the entrance to the flat building, Cameron adjusted his crutches and hobbled slowly out to reconnoiter. He was back in a few minutes without having seen or heard anything, so they started, the girl touching his arm as he made his way slowly along with the aid of the crutches. His bandaged foot he carefully held up from the pavement.

At last they reached the corner where Frau Weber had told them their bus would stop, and settled down to wait. Claire glanced at her watch, and by the radium tinted numerals saw that it was 11.30. They had delayed longer and taken much more time than she had imagined.

"No use waiting for a bus now," she said. "I'm sure they don't run at night, at least not this late. They're not permitted to have lights."

"Where can we go? We can't sit out here all night—it's too cold for you."

"I can stand the cold, Bill, but I'm afraid there's too much danger of an officer coming along and questioning us. Perhaps we'd better get off the street."

She had looked around carefully when she arrived in Berlin on the bus, and remembered a building close by which might offer shelter. Holding Cameron's arm while he hobbled along, she guided him there. The front doors were locked but there was a deep recess at one side of the entrance and Claire drew her companion into it.

"At any rate, we'll be out of the cold wind here," she said, "and unless a brown shirt comes along with a flashlight, we're reasonably safe."

"If he does, I'll crack him over the head with a crutch," Cameron threatened.

Fortunately for the brown shirts and for the fugitives, no one did bother them, and Claire was even able to get a little sleep, crouched on the marble floor of the entrance, leaning against Cameron's knees. He stood over her, alert, prepared to put up a fight if they were surprised.

At the first streak of daylight, he awakened her and they moved back toward the bus stop. At Claire's suggestion they did not go to the little island in the middle of the street, but waited in a doorway. When she saw a bus approaching they hurried across the street. It was the wrong bus but Number 57 came along right after, and they climbed aboard.

Claire recognized the old driver as the same one with whom she had ridden into the city, but there was no light of recognition in the man's dull eyes as he exclaimed "Heil Hitler" in a flat voice and extended his right arm upward in salute. They obediently "heiled" back and the driver clucked sympathetically as he noted Cameron's bandaged foot and crutches.

"Pichelsdorf," Claire said, and proffered money for the fare. The man made the change, and then the bus lurched off as he shifted gears.

"If we have any trouble" Cameron whispered, "we'll go out this door and make a run for it." Claire nodded.

The ride, however, was without incident. Only two other passengers got on and they had the bus virtually to themselves as they rode along in the gray early morning light.

"You've got me there. I have no more idea than you have — but I hope it's soon. It's not going to be much fun dodging around behind these trees with the chance of a Nazi popping out at us, a gun aimed at our heads."

"But you're certain he will come?" A note of fear appeared in Claire's voice despite her efforts to hide it.

"Of course, dear. He won't fail us." Claire didn't know he added the words "I hope" to himself. Looking up into his confident, smiling face, she took new hope.

"HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME"

A brilliant screen transmutation of Victor Hugo's renowned novel "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" will come next to the Belle Theatre with Charles Laughton in the title role, with a star-studden feature cast, with a record roster of atmosphere players, and with a vivid pageant of medieval Parisian life staged against dazzling sets of monumental proportions.

Treating of that significant period of European history just before Columbus discovered America, when thinkers everywhere were throwing off the shackles of superstition and ignorance and were awakening to a new world of progress, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" has long been a classic of literature. Written in 1823-30, the book created a worldwide sensation and established the name of Victor Hugo.

Its immortal tale deals with Quasimodo, the deformed but loyal orphan who rings the great bells of Notre Dame. A beauteous dancing gypsy, Esmeralda, comes to Paris for the annual Feast of Fools in the winter of 1482. She arouses the sinister interest of the King's High Justice, Frollo, who pursues her to the cathedral where, thanks to the right sanctuary, she receives shelter and safety. Later, Esmeralda flees, Quasimodo endeavoring to bring her back. He is caught and flogged for abduction, while Esmeralda finds refuge with the powerful Beggars' Guild.

While entertaining at the birthday party of Fleur de Lys, Esmeralda attracts a soldier, Phoebus who is slain by the jealous Frollo. Esmeralda is accused, tried and sentenced to the gallows. The Archbishop of Notre Dame learns that his brother, Frollo, is really guilty of the crime, but before he can secure her freedom, Quasimodo rescues the condemned girl by swinging out of the bell-tower on a rope snatching her from the hangman's noose. Then he drops molten lead to keep away a frenzied mob. However, Frollo steals into the building, and Quasimodo faces him in an exciting battle, slaying the evil High Justice, but receiving his death-wound in doing so.

Charles Laughton surpasses every previous portrayal. Equally splendid is rated Maureen O'Hara, Laughton's protegee, who, according to preview critics, makes a sensational American debut as the gypsy girl. The nineteen-year-old newcomer has been seen once before opposite Laughton in the British-made "Jamaica Inn".

Historic excellence is also exhibited by the other prominent members of the support, such as Sir Cedric Hardwicke (Frollo), Thomas Mitchell (Clopin, King of the Beggars), Edmond O'Brien (Gringoire), Alan Marshal (Phoebus), Walter Hampden (the Archbishop), Katharine Alexander and Harry Davenport.

Some of the most costly and breath-taking settings ever built for film purposes parallel the Paris scene of the period. Interiors and exteriors of the great Notre Dame cathedral, the Sainte Chapelle, the Palais de Justice and the beggars' retreat in the cavernous Court of Miracles were reproduced in huge detailed fashion.

An RKO Radio Picture, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is a production by Pandro S. Berman, and was directed by William Dieterle, responsible for such productions as "The Story of Louis Pasteur", "The Life of Emile Zola", "Juarez", and "Midsummer Night's Dream".

A funny Walt Disney's Donald Duck cartoon "Officer Duck" and the popular Paramount British news reel will be exhibited on the same program. On the week-end matinee another breath-taking chapter of "Daredevils of the Red Circle" will be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Law of The Pampas"

A roaring action story of range warfare—plus the romantic background of faraway Argentina—plus a number of lilting new Latin songs add up to "Law of the Pampas" latest of the "Hopalong Cassidy," outdoor dramas, which is now playing at the Capitol theatre.

William Boyd is his usual adventure-loving, devil-may-care self as "Hopalong" in a story which for sheer thrills, rapid action and romance surpasses even the best of past "Cassidys." He's assisted by the biggest "name" cast he has had so far, including Russell Hayden, Sydney Blackmer, Steffi Duna, Sidney Toler and that popular male quartet of the air waves, The King's Men.

Hoppy travels several thousand miles from the home range for adventure, when the wealthy Argentine buyer of some "Bar 20's" prize cattle asks him to accompany the herd to the ranching country below the equator. Eager to help a friend and always avid for excitement, "Hopalong" accepts, taking with him his pal, "Lucky", played with his usual spirit by the handsome Hayden.

Danger and strife follow "Cassidy," even to Argentina, this time in the person of the sinister Blackmer, an American married into the wealthy family "Hoppy" is visiting. When the visitor learns that one member of the family after another has been mysteriously murdered, until there are only two left, he begins to suspect the unfriendly Blackmer of the crimes.

"Hoppy's" shrewd investigation, carried out in strange surroundings and without the knowledge of the family, reveals that Blackmer, in league with two European desperadoes and an unsuspecting native girl, is the man behind the mysterious killings. Enlisting the aid of "Lucky" and the loyal Argentine gauchos, "Cassidy" goes out after the outlaws in his traditional "Bar 20" manner.

The romance of the Argentine background is enhanced by four original songs with a strong Latin flavor. They are: "Habanera," "Rosita," "Los Gauchos" and "La Jornado," sung by the King's Men, and the popular tango, "Fantasia Argentina," sung and danced by the vivacious Miss Duna.

The added attraction features James, Lucille and Russell Gleason in a comedy riot, "Should Husbands Work?" To conclude the bill the management was fortunate to secure as an added special attraction "First Days" showing how England was prepared for war with intimate glimpses into the Motherlands precautionary system.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Little Accident" and "Man From Montreal"

Everybody's sweetheart, Baby Sandy, that dynamite kid in diapers, is now at the McCarthy Theatre in her newest comedy-howl, "Little Accident." Presented previously at the McCarthy Theatre New Year's Eve only, "Little Accident" made an instant hit as a swell comedy feature and this reviewer who saw it New Year's Eve is pleased at this time to recommend it to all, as a gay comedy treat certain to be enjoyed by every moviegoer. Edgar Kennedy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson and Ernest Truex are also featured in addition to Baby Sandy.

Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in "Man from Montreal," a new feature presentation of the adventures of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, is also now at the McCarthy Theatre as a second big treat in addition to Baby Sandy in "Little Accident."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Russians are making first serious attempt to use parachute jumpers in the war against Finland.

For years the Russians have been training selected men and women for this dangerous type of operation and the descent of hundreds of parachutists from the skies has been a feature of the great annual displays of Soviet armed power at Moscow.

According to reports now coming out of Finland both men and women are being dropped behind the Finnish lines. While many have been killed or captured the Finns can by no means be sure that others have not escaped.

It is probable the parachutists are expected to supplement the efforts of the Soviet air force bombers in demoralizing the civilian population and throwing the Finnish transport and supply facilities into confusion. Some may be spies, purely and simply. Others may be primarily saboteurs.

The spies will be expected to gather information which will assist Soviet airmen in their raids while the saboteurs will carry explosives for the destruction of bridges and other vital structures. The Germans used parachutists for similar work on a small scale in Poland but it is not believed they contributed in any great degree to success of German operations there. As the Russians emphasized parachute jumping in their war preparations and now are using it on a considerable scale the results may be a test of the value of these suicide squads.

Solar heat! In using coal for heat we are availing ourselves of the heat radiated from the sun ages ago. It would be most sensible if we could efficiently use the sun's heat as we receive it daily. Dr. Charles G. Abbot of the Smithsonian Institution, who has devised several successful solar heaters, has calculated that by using only one-tenth of the area of New Mexico and figuring an efficiency of 15 per cent., enough power would be realized to be comparable to all the coal, oil and water used at the present time for heat, light and power in the United States. Sun heaters, of course, are most practicable in the lower latitudes and where the percentage of

$30,000,000 PLANE ORDER PLACED IN CANADA

British High Commissioner's Office at Ottawa Makes Announcement

Ottawa, Feb. 10 (CP)—The British government has placed a new order for military planes, valued at about $30,000,000 with Canadian Associated Aircraft, it was announced today from the British High Commissioner's office here.

The announcement confirmed unofficial reports earlier this week that additional orders would be given the six-company organization formed to manufacture planes for Britain.

"Following the visit of the British Air Mission to Canada in the Autumn of 1938, Canadian Associated Aircraft Limited came into being for the execution of a group manufacturing scheme for the production of large type aircraft," the statement said.

Develop Production

"Since the war, apart from other aircraft orders, it has been arranged to extend very considerably the scheme under the control of Canadian Aircraft Limited by placing with that company further contracts of a value of roughly $30,000,000 which will enable them to build up a widespread organization of sub-contractors in the development of Canadian production for the United Kingdom government of aircraft of the latest type.

LABOR MINISTER, NORMAN McLARTY DEFENDS PREMIER

Says Mackenzie King Sought Two Years Ago Same Training Plan as Now in Effect

FRIEND OF LABOR

Paris, Ont., Feb. 10 (CP) —Labor Minister Norman McLarty was quick to spring to the defence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King after Conservative Leader Manion's criticism of the delay in starting an Empire Air Training Plan.

Speaking to a Brant riding Liberal nomination meeting here last night, Mr. McLarty referred to the Brockville speech by Dr. Manion on Thursday in which Mr. Mackenzie King was accused of the "great betrayal" of labor in not adopting two years ago Great Britain's suggestions for training student pilots in Canada.

The Commonwealth Air Training Plan now in effect in the Dominion is of the type Mr. Mackenzie King sought two years ago, Mr. McLarty said.

DEFENDS GUN CONTRACT

Declares Magazines of Bren Gun, Made by John Inglis Co., Satisfactory

Vancouver, Feb. 10—(CP)—With an accounting of his stewardship of the National Defence Ministry and a story of the Government's efforts to build up Canada's defences in the last five years, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Pensions, last night launched his campaign for re-election in the forthcoming Dominion election.

The British Columbia minister, shifted from the Defence to the Pensions Ministry in the Cabinet shuffle shortly after the outbreak of war, was chosen at a Liberal convention to seek re-election in Vancouver Centre.

Mr. Mackenzie replied in his home-town for the first time to a series of criticisms made in eastern Canada of his activities as Defence Minister. The criticisms, he said, were based upon "half truths."

Bren Gun Contract

He defended the Government's Bren gun contract with the John Inglis Company, Toronto, which was drawn up in 1938, the company agreeing to manufacture 7,000 guns for the Canadian army and 5,000 for the British.

FINNISH LINES REMAIN INTACT OFFICIALS DECLARE

Destruction of 32 Enemy Tanks Yesterday Brings Total to 72 in Two Days

MANY SOVIET ATTACKS

Main Assault of Russian Army Launched Against Karelian Isthmus

Helsingfors, Feb. 10 (AP) — The Red army's massed offensive on the Karelian Isthmus was continued for the ninth successive day, the Finns reported tonight, but all assaults were thrown back with heavy losses.

Russian infantry continued to attack with undiminished vigor and with heavy artillery and tank support, but nowhere were the Finnish lines broken, declared the high command.

Tonight's communiue reported destruction yesterday of 32 enemy tanks, making a total of 72 destroyed or captured in two days. It also reported four Russian planes shot down.

Although the heaviest assaults were on the Karelian Isthmus where the Red army has made its main efforts to break through, the Finns reported that the Russians lost 800 men killed northeast of Lake Ladoga, site of another long-continued battle.

Shells of All Sizes.

Finns reported today that shells of all sizes were being dropped from planes on Finnish positions in the war zone. They said the use of shells indicated a shortage of bombs, believed to be the reason for a slackening of air attacks on civilian Finland.

The only home area reported bombed yesterday was Hangoe (Hanko), Southwestern Finland, where 25 bombs were dropped but no casualties were reported.

Fierce fighting was reported on the Karelian Isthmus where wave after wave of Russians advanced on Finnish posts but were reported repulsed in savage bayonet and hand grenade encounters with the Finns.

Used Ammunition Quickly

Finnish officers reported the Red army had advanced in such great numbers that ammunition supplies temporarily were exhausted faster than replenishments could be rushed to the front.

Russo-German Pact Disappoints Reich, Air Secretary Asserts

Conditions in German-Occupied Poland Worse Than in Russian-Occupied Area — German Methods Include Decimation of Natural Leaders of National Movement and Actual Torture is Charged — Religion is Persecuted—Britain Fights to End Such Conditions, He Declares

London, Feb. 10—(CP - Cable)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air, declared today the Russo-German pact was both a political and material disappointment to the Reich, and attacked as "obominable" conditions in German-occupied Poland.

The Air Minister, in the sixth of a series of ministerial speeches, said terms of the pact are "unknown outside the Kremlin and the inner circles of the Nazi party" but were an "uncertain and doubtful bargain" and the "compelling cause of uneasiness in Germany."

He said Russian transport difficulties must have greatly damaged any hope there may have been of Germany obtaining adequate supplies of oil and raw materials from Russia.

Citing an assertion by the Polish government - in - exile that 15,000 persons had been shot in German-occupied Poland, Sir Kingsley declared conditions there were far worse than in Russian - occupied Poland.

"German methods in occupied Poland since September have passed through two phases," the Air Minister said. "They tried first to terrorize the population by shooting individuals picked up at random from towns.

"In Konin, for instance, they decided to shoot 35 people and they collected 34 victims and then finding they were short one, went into a chemist's shop and seized the first person they found."

He said Germany then decided to "decimate the natural leaders

2 C. N. FREIGHT TRAINS DERAILED

Auxiliary Crews Clear Tracks in Quick Order and Schedules Maintained

London, Ont., Feb. 10 (CP)—Two Canadian National Railways freight trains were derailed about 12 miles east of London early today when a car of logs on one train sideswiped several cars on the other. Officials said that no one was injured.

The trains were No. 475, westbound Toronto to London, in charge of engineer Dunn and conductor West, of Toronto; and No. 492 eastbound Sarnia to Toronto, in charge of engineer J. Jarvis and conductor Charles Borthwick of Sarnia.

Officials said that only six cars on the two trains were derailed. The accident occurred about 1.30 a.m. and the west track was reported clear at 8 a.m. Auxiliary crews were still removing debris fro mthe east track and that line was expected to be cleared this afternoon.

Officials explained that a broken stake on a carload of logs on the westbound train caused the timber to shake loose, sideswiping the east freight as the two trains were passing.

Train schedules were disrupted by the mishap but with one line clear and with routings via Stratford, officials said that passenger train schedules would be maintained.

KING AND QUEEN VISIT CARDIFF

Crowds Greet Monarchs on Third Day of Western Tour

Cardiff, Wales, Feb. 10.— (CP)—Crowds enthusiastically acclaimed the King and Queen when they visited this Welsh port yesterday on the third day of their western tour.

Their Majesties, who Thursday inspected Merchant ships at Bristol, yesterday witnessed loading of coal on a ship in port by the use of the most-up-to-date machinery. They chatted with members of the crew and inspected the apparatus and armaments designed to guard the vessel against enemy attacks or mines.

Followed by a crowd of dockers, they later visited a plant for manufacture of shell casings.

When they appeared in George VI square, they were cheered repeatedly by a large crowd for almost 25 minutes after reviewing personnel of the city's passing defence organization, garbed in heavy rubber uniforms, the Sovereigns parted ways, the Queen proceeding to hospitals and the King to the Aviation School the most important in Britain.

Two water polo teams grouping officers and men of the school played a match in honour of the King in the school's indoor swimming pool, the largest of its type in Britain. This school trains Royal Air force navigators and instructors. The training flights are usually over water and the machines are armed so that they can attack enemy submaries if any are spotted.

Autographed Photos Of King Given to General McNaughton

(By Edwin Johnson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Feb. 10.—(CP Cable) —As a memento of his visit to Aldershot camp, January 24 the King has presented 2 autographed portraits of himself to Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton and to the First Division of the Canadian Active Service Force.

The portraits, a head and shoulder exposure, are the latest taken of the King. He is wearing the uniform including cap of a Field Marshal. At the bottom right hand corner of the mounting appears the Royal signature "George R. I. 24-1 40". Accompanying the gift was a personal note from His Majesty to the Canadian Commander.

If it is found impracticable to take the Division's picture with the troops when they leave for a more active theatre of war it will be sent to Canada for safe keeping. In such an event it is suggested a place of honour would be given it on the walls of the Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont.

It is also proposed to send to Ottawa the original of the King's message of welcome on December 17, to the first flight of Canadian troops. At Ottawa it would be placed with appropriate ceremony in the Archiver, along with other historic documents.

RUSSIAN-TURKISH FRONTIER BEING STRENGTHENED

Construction of Fortifications on Caucasian Frontier With Turkey Being Pushed

WORKERS DRAFTED

Several Hundred Thousand Laborers Build Roads to Facilitate Defence of Oil Fields

Istanbul, Feb. 10 (AP)—Soviet Russia was reported today pushing construction of fortifications on her Caucasian frontier with Turkey to defend the rich oil fields which supply fuel for her war machine.

Informed military sources said such information had reached the Turkish government. It was believed to have been gathered by Turkey's military intelligence service.

Acocrding to these reports, several hundred thousand workers have been drafted by the Red army to build military roads near the Russian-Turkish frontier and strengthen border defences.

They said Dr. Fritz Todt, credited with a part in the building of Germany's Westwall, had visited the Russian side of the line in an advisory capacity.

(Rumanian sources reported a few weeks ago Dr. Todt had inspected Russian works across the frontier from Cernauti, Rumania, which many military experts regard as the most likely point through which Allied forces might attempt to enter Poland).

DESTROYER SINKS 2 ENEMY SUBS ATTACKING SHIP

German Submarine Losses Reach Unofficial Total of 40 to Date

DESTROYER NOT NAMED

Superiority of British Planes Over Germans Claimed to be Very Marked

London, Feb. 10 (CP).—Torpedoing of the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverburn apparently cost Germany two submarines.

The admiralty announced late last night a single British destroyer had sunk two U-boats as they attempted to attack a convoy.

The announcement followed statements attributed to an officer of the destroyer, which escorted a rescue ship to a west English port with survivors of the 9,874-ton Beaverburn, sunk off southern Ireland, apparently Monday.

The Admiralty did not say when or where the fight occurred or identify the destroyer. It was disclosed, however, the 5,406-ton Scottish steamship Chagres, another member of the convoy, later was sunk by a mine.

At Least Forty U-boats Lost.

The report brought total German submarine losses to an unofficial total of at least 40, half or more of the number believed in operation at the start of the war.

British fighter planes shot down one German bomber yesterday and reported two others had been damaged severely. British sources said six ships were attacked, only one hit directly, and none sunk.

British sources contended their planes were markedly superior to the attackers, saying that since Jan. 1 ten German bombers had been shot down along the British coast without the loss of a single defending craft.

Commercial Failures In '39 Show Increase

The cumulative number of commercial failures for the first nine months of 1939 was 1,060, with defaulted liabilities of $11,571,298, as compared with 887 failures and liabilities totalling $10,114,742 in the same period of 1938. Failures in trade in the first nine months of 1939 numbered 520 compared with 502 in 1938, in manufacturing 158 compared with 142, service 142 compared with 76, agriculture 83 compared with 77, and construction 48 compared with 29.

Storm Demolishes Business Places In Albany, Ga.

Governor Rivers Orders National Guardsmen Out to Prevent Looting and to Assist in Rescue Work

POWER LINES DAMAGED

Injured Pour Into Hospital So Quickly Patients Had to 'e Laid on Floors—Light and Water Cut Off

Albany, Ga., Feb. 10 — (AP)—Between 12 and 15 persons were killed and several hundred injured by a tornado which smashed the business section of this southwest Georgia city today.

Chairman L. R. Ferrell of the Albany Red Cross chapter made the estimate of dead in a wire to national Red Cross headquarters, and told James R. Blair of the Americus Times-Recorder that "it is impossible to say" exactly how many died.

Blair said a railway express employee told him that about 85 per cent of the business buildings in Albany were either wrecked or badly damaged and "several hundred homes." Blair said all indications were death list would run considerably higher, with many victims in one of the smaller hotels.

Guards Called Out

Two companies of National guardsmen (militia) were ordered here by Governor E. D. Rivers. Heavy rain fololwed the winds, preventing fires, but making rescue work difficult.

Debris littered streets of the city whose population is 14,507. Communication and power lines were damaged.

W. B. Bryan, Manager of the Telephone Company, said the storm struck the business area near the postoffice.

He said several hotels and other business structures along or near Pine Avenue were "damaged or demolished."

Comes Out of Southwest

Roaring out of the southwest the tornado ripped through scores of negro shanties, smashed railroad properties around the station and unroofed the depot, and crushed the walls of nearly every business building along the main business street.

Managing editor W. M. Pryse of the Albany Herald said the storm roared out of the southwest "like a thousand freight trains."

"Every store front downtown is smashed and many of the roofs are caved in," he said.

Pryse said injured were being poured into the hospital at Albany so fact "they had to lay them out on the floors and try to get to the most urgent cases first."

Lights and water were cut off by the storm. Rain fell heavily. William Godley, mortician, said the body of one white woman was carried to his place and that a large death list appeared certain from the negro district.

WOULD AMEND CRIMINAL CODE FOR HEARINGS

If Legislature Abolishes Grand Juries, Ottawa Will be Asked to Amend Code

INDICTMENT HEARINGS

Toronto, Feb. 10—(CP)—When and if the Ontario Legislature passes a bill abolishing grand juries, the Federal Government will be asked to amend the Criminal Code to provide for an indictment hearing for a person accused of crime when the charge is laid by the Attorney-General or a person acting for him.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant laid two resolutions to this end on the table of the Legislature yesterday, saying the House would be asked to deal with them when the bill passed. The resolutions were tabled before Conservative Leader George Drew resumed debate on the Grand Jury Bill.

Germans Fail To Damage French Loudspeakers

Paris, Feb. 10 —(AP)— A "war of words" from French loudspeakers was believed today to have provoked German batteries into opening "markedly more active" artillery fire mentioned in last night's high command communique.

Today's communique said merely, "nothing to report."

Dispatches said the Germans failed to damage the loudspeakers entrenched behind pillboxes to uphold the French end of the word-battle.

After the thundering of shell fire died down, the propaganda fire was resumed, advices said.

Patrol Loses Fifteen Men.

A sharp encounter in which a French patrol lost ten men but inflicted more than fifteen losses on the Germans was reported in French military dispatches.

This engagement was described as part of increased activity on the western front, where both sides were said to have intensified scouting.

The French patrol penetrated the outskirts of Forbach, where the Germans have strengthened their line on French territory south of Saarbruecken, these sources said, and withdrew with information on enemy concentrations after fighting off a stronger German force.

A German patrol was said also to have attempted to raid French lines in the Nied River sector, but to have been repulsed, leaving several bodies on barbed wire.

Hear Address on Grenfell of Labrador

The Bible Class of Tabernacle United S.S. and friends to the number of thirty-two met last night in the ladies' parlour for a pot-luck luncheon. After luncheon, Mr. A. Burtt, in the absence of the President of the class, Mr. Gorsline, took charge. Mr. J. McClelland and Mr. G. C. Shorey moved a vote of thanks to the ladies for the excellent dinner. Mrs. Cornell sang and Mrs. Boneham gave a reading, both greatly appreciated.

The guest speaker was Rev. W. E. Mercer of Bayside United Church, who gave a fine inspirational address on happiness, pointing out some of the things that made men unhappy and illustrating from the Life of Dr. Grenfell of Labrador, that the secret of happiness was in seeking the happiness of others. Mr. G. F. Lent and Mr. R. Edmundson moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker. Rev. D. T. McClintock expressed his great appreciation of the visit of both Mr. and Mrs. Mercer.

Mrs. Goraline, Mrs. Irwin, Mrs. Bedal, and Mrs. McMillan had charge of the luncheon.

Distemper Epidemic Kills Many Dogs

If you own a dog it might be good policy to keep the animal at home these days, that is if you value the canine, according to a report given out by Thomas Thorne, city dog pound custodian today.

"It has been brought to my attention that a large number of dogs have died this year as the result of distemper. This disease is contagious and passes from one animal to the other when any body contact is made, so I would advise dog owners to keep their animals in close confinement or on leash, "until this epedemic is over," warned Mr. Thorne, as he added, that at least 100 dogs in Belleville had already died as the result of distemper."

Culminating a long period of service as an employee of the Canadian National Railways, Mr. W. J. Mr. Newton Thompson acted as chairman for the evening's program which consisted of short addresses by Mr. O. Duff, H. W. Froats, L. J. Train, A. H. Jones, A. B. Saunders, and F. Chapman, who all spoke in complimentary terms of their former associate. Mr. E. R. Logie, District Engineer of Toronto, made the presentation of a pipe and substantial purse to Mr. Tyers, while Mrs. Tyers was also remembered on the happy occasion being sent a lovely bouquet of Spring flowers.

FOXBORO FOXES HOLD GOAL LEAD IN SEMI-FINALS

Defeat Glen Ross 2-1 in Best and Fastest Game in Loop This Season

OFFICIALS PANNED

President, Secretary and Managers of Two Teams Perfectly Satisfied With Work

Stirling, Feb. 10.—(Special) — In one of the best displays of hockey shown in the Centre Hastings Rural Hockey League the fast skating Foxboro "Foxes" took a one goal lead in the two game series for second place honours and the right to meet the league leading Glen Ross "Riversides" for the loop championship. Fine hockey, good sportmanship and real entertainment were the features of the game with the only hitch coming from players on the losing team expressing dissatisfaction in the decision of the officials. The game was fast and clean with only five penalties served and all for minor infractions. Referees Hulin and Ackers handled the game entirely to the satisfaction of Secretary Art Duncan and also the two opposing managers "It's a mighty tough job to meet the approval of all from this angle but president Linn Fair and his executive have attempted to please all throughout the playing season by continually hiring and firing referees on demands from the clubs.

Last night patience were sorely tested and the two contesting teams were instructed to bring their own referees for the next and final game of the series unless other methods were adopted by the executive. Three of the best referees in the section have operated to the likes and the dislikes of players from every quarter, who seem ably to tell managers what they want and get it. Earl Wallace, veteran hockeyist of the Trent Valley League was the first to be tossed into discard and Hulin and Ackers appear to be next in line. Last night's work in the opinion of the League Secretary was without fault. They caught all sneak plays seen by anyone, in the rink.

The Game

Two well matched teams, either of which will give the leaders a real battle for the "Mug", displayed a mixture of over-anxiety and caution in the early stages of the game, which were registered as one of the fastest of the season. Acey Reid, rink superintendent, had worked long hours preparing a faultless sheet of ice. After twelve minutes Gerald Tummon gave the "Irish" the lead scoring from close in with Simms and J. Ray getting the assists. Speed gathered from both ends of the rink in the middle period, which was scoreless largely due to fine efforts of the opposing Goalies Gifford and N. Guay, who were really on their job. Two penalties were served in this period one to each team, Thompson and Ray each taking a two minute rest.

In less than a minute of the last period Noel Guay made a brilliant rush climaxed by a corner shot that beat Gifford to tie the score. Three minutes before the game ender Grant Wright clicked for the winning game giving the "Foxes" a slim one goal margin going into the final game of the series next Tuesday night with goals to count. Anything can happen and bets are few and far between on the outcome for the season's performance of these two teams are about equal Thompson, Brough and Faulkner each served minor penalties in the final period, which was amongst the fastest and cleanest on record.

Summary

1st period—
Zion Hill, Tummon (Simms and Ray) 12.20
2nd period
No score
3rd period—
Foxboro, Noel Guay 1.00
Foxboro, Grant Wright (Spencer) 19.40

Foxboro—Goal, Norm Guay; defence, Walt, Noel Guay; centre Wright, wings, Thompson, and Elder. Alternates Spencer, Gordon Gay, L .Gough, C. Dafoe, R. Halliwell and J. Guay.

Zion Hill—Goal, Gifford, defence, Dickey and Bedford; centre, Brough, wings, Ketcheson and Faulkner. Alternates Simms, Tummon, W. Clarke and Jack Ray.

. Referees Hulin and Ackers, Stirling.

The attraction to these games as indicated by the close score is the brand of hockey displayed by these promising enthusiastic players from all parts of Centre Hastings. But during the play-off game John Public is given the added attraction of free skating for all patrons of the game after the games are finished. The new idea is catching one or two local skaters who are suddenly becoming hockey fans.

Letters From the Troops

East Wellington Road

Aldershot, Eng., Jan. 17, 1940

My Dear Uncle Merick:

I thought I'd better drop a few lines and let you know I'm still alive. This is a great country if one should ask you. If it isn't foggy, why its either snowing or raining. The sun never gets up above the tops of the buildings at any time of the day. Its not near as nice as our own weather even though it does get quite cool over there sometimes. Our barracks are none too hot. They remind me some of my last winter's home. The fire-place sometimes gets smoking. These fireplaces aren't what they're cracked up to be either. We're getting stoves in tomorrow so will be a whole lot warmer from now on.

Have had a few day's leave in London, so I've seen the biggest city in the world. Won't I have a story to tell when I get back to Canada? I've met a nice little lady in London, and she is a cracker. When an English girl is pretty, why, she's really pretty, but when she's homely, why you just turn the other way. Well, Gwen is the pretty type, she shows me all around London when I'm there and comes to Aldershot to see me when I'm not. How's that for getting around? Can't understand some of them, though. They talk too Englishly to suit me.

We just get mail about every two weeks, that is Canadian mail. It has to come with a convoy. Don't know how often our return mail goes, about the same way, I suppose. I've written about a dozen or more letters since I've been here, but I've only received three myself. That is three from Canada. I got a letter from Phil Dodd's the other day and was sure glad to hear fr m him. A lot of the boys haven't had a letter from Canada at all yet—and are they burning up!

I had a beautiful trip over, was only sick five days out of the eight. I lost my voice for three days, but am doing better now.

Well tell Lee and Dorothy and everybody around the little news I've told you and it will save me a lot of writing. Don't get much time any more for writing, they keep drilling all the time.

Well I'll say goodbye for this time. Will write later.

The War This Week

By DON GILBERT
(Canadian Press Cable Editor)

Activity in the near east in the 23rd week of the war brought speculation on the possibility of a new front being opened up by spring. Turkey, ally of Great Britain and France, dismissed German technicians from the government service and put Turkish marines in charge of the Krupp shipyards near Istanbul. In Egypt the French and British near eastern commanders conferred and inspected some of the large forces at their disposal. A Greek cabinet minister flew to Egypt on an important mission.

Widespread Plot.

Turkey attributed her actions to the discovery of a widespread Nazi sabotage plot under which trains would be wrecked and strategic buildings blown up at a signal from Berlin. Another Turkish source put it more subtly, remarking simply: "Spring is coming". In Greece, whose defence also is guaranteed by the allies, Premier John Metaxas spoke of "the storm that is coming."

A council of war was held in Paris, Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier, Winston Churchill and General Gamelin, together with other cabinet ministers and the chiefs of staff of the services, reviewed the allied strategy. Later in the week the French parliament met in secret to discuss the prosecution of the war.

A further contingent of Canadian troops landed in Britain and joined the dominion's forces already in training at Aldershot. Canadians were among the large number of Britons enlisting at the Finnish Legation in London for service with the Finnish army against Russia.

Report Vigorously Denied.

Finland denied vigorously the claim of the Red army that its troops had captured eight forts in the Mannerheim Line of fortifications on the Karelian Isthmus and five elsewhere. The invaders used in increasing numbers troops dropped behind the Finnish lines by parachute and the Finns admitted that some of these had caused considerable damage. Most of the parachutists, however, were quickly rounded up and shot.

The interest of the United States in the settlement that will follow the war was indicated in two developments. First, it was announced that "conversations of an informal character" were in progress with neutral governments relating to "a sound economic system" and a world wide reduction of armaments". Secondly, President Roosevelt announced that Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, was leaving Washington to make a survey of conditions in Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain.

Half Dozen Boats Sunk.

In the war at sea, German raiders succeeded in sinking half a dozen large British freighters, including the 9,874-ton Beaverburn of Canadian Pacific Steamships. Altogether the Germans sank about 35,000 tons of British shipping, which an official in London described as neither a bad nor a good week as far as Britain was concerned.

Glancing back 25 years: Movement of the First Canadian Division from Salisbury Plain to Avonmouth was started Feb 7, 1915. The first units left the Bristol Channel port for France three days later. Allied troops launched big attacks on the western front to relieve pressure in the east.

Number One Hall Used for 50 Years Closed by Fire Committee and Council

After housing the Belleville Fire Department continually for a period of approximately fifty long and eventful years, the building known to Belleville residents as No. 1 Fire Hall will soon pass out of its present useful existence in that capacity.

Acting in accordance with the decision arrived at during the last meeting of the Fire Committee and ratified by Council, Alderman Kennedy recently notified Chief Lynch to vacate the lower fire hall by the 16th. of February and to house the force's entire fire equipment in No. 2 hall on upper Front Street, thereafter using only the one building for that purpose.

The building which is to house the Belleville Fire Department in the future was built approximately 75 years ago and for some years was used jointly as a city hall and also for housing the police force before being turned over to the fire department.

Staple Vegetable Quotations Advance Sharply on Market

APPLES HIGHER

A distinct shortage of vegetables the first in many years was reported today by vendors on the city market. Parsnips, turnips, beets, carrots and onions are said to be scarce in practically all sections of the district.

As a result prices today are practically one hundred per cent over those of a year ago. Parsnips today, reached an all time high, selling at one dollar the bushel, with other vegetables quoted at double the price they sold for a year ago.

Vendors contacted this morning were more or less at a loss to explain the shortage. "Vegetables sold well during the early part of the season with a lot of people putting in large stocks for winter use. The war may have had something to do with it, locally", one farmer said.

"However, the usual influx from other parts of the province has been missing thus far", he added, "and that might account for part of the shortage here. Crops were good and some excellent quality was seen after the harvest."

Turnips and beets likewise skyrocketed to seventy-five and eighty cents the bushel. Onions remained steady at $1.25 for sixty pounds.

Potatoes Lower

Potato quotations, however, showed a decrease over former prices, seventy-five pound baglots dropping to one dollar each, the lowest price recorded during the current winter season. There appeared to be no lack of the vegetable and quality was good. Good quality winter cabbage sold as low as three heads for five cents with good quality stock offered at five and ten cents the head. Carrots moved slowly at seventy cents the bushel.

Egg prices showed no change. Grade "A" selects of first quality sold at twenty-five cents the dozen with slightly inferior quality offered at twenty-three cents. Mediums were quoted at twenty-one cents. Butter was plentiful pound rolls selling at thirty cents each with two-pound lots offered at fifty-five and sixty cents. Saurkraut sold at ten cents the quart.

Slim Chicken Display

The chicken offering was the slimmest displayed in months. Good weighty birds of June and July vintage sold at from $1.10 to $1.40 each according to size. Yearlings were offered at one dollar each while the few fowl displayed were marked anywhere from sixty cents to seventy-five cents each. A few ducks were offered at one dollar each.

Pork and beef quarters were plentiful but prices were steady at early quotations. Pork hinds were offered at sixteen cents the pound and fronts at fourteen cents. Beef sold at ten and twelve cents the pound for fronts and hinds respectively.

Northern Spys headed a variable apple display noting a slight increase over last week's prices Bushel lots sold at $1.40 each a fifteen cent rise. Starks, Delicious sold at $1.25 for ring-packed hampers with domestic qualities offered at ninety cents the bushel. Russets, Tolman Sweets and a few Greenings were quoted at one dollar the bushel.

Fresh whitefish attracted lovers of this food selling at twenty cents the pound. Mudcats were pletniful and caught the popular fancy at fifteen cents the pound while fresh pike was quoted at ten cents.

Yesterday he was a promising young citizen of his community. Today he is in the army—loaned to the Empire for a few months, or years, to do a vital task. Will he be trained to carry on in civil life when peace returns again? Will he be able to earn a living and climb quickly to success?

It's up to you! Your contribution will help give him the start he needs. The Canadian Legion asks Canadians to contribute $500,000 now. These are the tasks for which this money is urgently needed.

1. Education of Service Forces in the Pursuits of Peace. The Canadian Legion War Services, in collaboration with the Canadian Association for Adult Education, is making it possible for members of the Canadian Forces to continue their educational studies. Our men will be able to carry on their studies in agriculture, technical subjects, various trades, bookkeeping, stenography, etc. Advanced courses leading to matriculation and university degrees will also be available.

Canadian universities and departments of education are cooperating actively. The assistance of British and French educationists is assured.

2. Personal Services to our Men. Through Legion representatives among the forces, and Legion branches throughout Canada, problems of a personal or business nature will be investigated and corrected, thus relieving our men of much worry.

3. Entertainment and Recreational Services. The establishment of leave hostels, assistance in training soldiers' concert parties, and help in the organization of sports activities will be undertaken where necessary by Legion men in the field. The Legion will also assist the I.O.D.E. in placing libraries of selected books at various places, as well as libraries of motion pictures.

Every effort will be made to keep alive the interests of the men in the activities they left on enlistment.

HELP WIN THE WAR

Will you help to give our boys on active service a leg up the ladder of success? Every dollar you give is an investment in Canadian manhood. Give generously to this great new cause. Send or take your contribution to the nearest Legion branch.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR'S ILLNESS

Concern has been felt throughout the Dominion of Canada over the condition of His Excellency the Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, who has been gravely ill since a fall in Government House a few days ago. There have been emergency operations performed to relieve pressure due to injury to the head sustained when he fell.

Canada's Governor - General has been painstaking in the extreme in the performance of his viceregal duties. He has given devoted service to the Dominion in a way which has at times caused him weariness and long hours of labor. He has travelled the Dominion in a way which has made him perhaps the greatest and most alert traveller in modern Canadian history. Everyone recalls his long journey through the Sub-Arctic area on a tour of the newer sections of Canada. He caught the spirit of the pioneer, still found in Canadian life.

Canada has been particularly blessed in the present incumbent of the office at Rideau Hall. He is a man of keen mind and wide knowledge of mankind, who made his way in literature and in public liffe and has served his King and Empire in many spheres. His alert, sympathetic mind was just the need felt in Canada and he has succeeded in reading the heart and spirit of the people. He has unstintingly given himself to every cause that will benefit the people of this country and has helped to build up the physical welfare and the social and the national life of the Dominion.

Gifted in understanding, Lord Tweedsmuir has been able to grasp the principles of Empire in its modern development and has been able to impart that understanding to the people of the Empire. He has seen the Empire as a whole and has seen the Dominions in their life-relation to that principle.

The accident which has caused his illness is deeply regretted, especially as His Excellency nears the close of his period of service to Canada as His Majesty's representative. Canada would have wished that these days should not be marred with serious illness of the man they have admired and loved ever since his coming to the Dominion. The war has added burdens enough to the Governor-General without the extreme trial of so serious an illness. His Excellency in these latter days has been doing a yeoman service for the Empire and for Canada.

That his recovery and return to his strength will be rapid is the prayer of the people of Canada.

THE WAR IN FINLAND

British planes are in Finland, it was announced in the British House this week.

French aid, it is said, has been instrumental in the shipment of planes from Italy to the aid of the Finnish fighters.

British aid has been of value to the Finns. The British Prime Minister says the Finnish success is the admiration of the world.

Word comes from Finland that the Russians may drop machine gunners and guns by parachutes behind the Finnish lines to take toll on the Finnish communications and cause what interruption they can in an effort to weaken the lines of defence.

These are two of the events of this week. Russian planes which have been so extensively used, have been given a bad mauling by the Finnish defence artillery and the Finnish fliers. Russian strength in the air has always been thought to be powerful but in spite of the number of planes, the Soviet forces have been unable to achieve what might have been expected of them.

Russian defeats have exploded some of the ideas held as to the might of the Russians. They have stuck to their development of the plane and parachute but it seems that they have not built up a coordinated war service. Transportation has failed the army. There is predominance of air planes but planes cannot work alone.

The arrival of British planes in Finland is taken as a good indication of the strength of the Royal Air Force because Britain has been able to send planes to the republic, besides building up the air force in the war with Germany.

LEY TALKS TO THE GERMANS

First the Nazi Germans said that Britain is determined to annihilate Germany, which is a lie.

Now the leader Robert Ley, one of the bitterest of the Nazis and an avowed devotee of Adolf Hitler, says that the war aim of the Germans is to annihilate England.

This latter explains why the Germans accused Britons of planning the annihilation of Germany—so that they might announce this as their battle-cry before the benighted German people who know nothing but what Ley, Goebbels, and Hitler tell them through their dominated newspapers and their broadcasts made to Nazi order and measure.

Robert Ley's statement is one of those wild enemy outbursts calculated to rouse by use of the motive of primitive fear the German people to greater sacrifices for Hitler and his band.

Ley doubtless does not believe what he says. The rest of the world sees very clearly the way of the descent of Adolf Hitler and his servants—it is written in the fate of things. Such evil as Hitler and his group have built up on the degradation of their nation and the cruelties practised on seized and conquered states cannot be victorious. It is written in the stars against Hitler. The soul of the nations of the world demands something better than a Hitlerized world. And the soul of the world will produce or bring about that triumph of right over selfish ambition, love of domination and worship of material power and brute strength. Every principle of justice, right, progress, love and human sympathy are in the fight to end Hitlerism and Nazism.

Ley's declaration may sound well to Germans whom he and other Nazis have under their thumb with the aid of Himmler of Gestapo fame, but observers overywhere have predicted the fall of Hitler and his policy. Let Ley tell that to his people.

THIRD CONTINGENT REACHES BRITAIN

Canada's Third Contingent is now in Britain.

Another great convoy has successfully passed over the ocean lanes of the Atlantic, guarded by the navy. More precious than material resources were the cargoes of men from the Land of the Maple who had set out for the Old Land to defend their King and Empire.

Naturally there is a feeling of relief that the troopships have arrived in port, somewhere in Great Britain.

So goes on the movement of men and materials to support the Motherland in the fight of civilization against the wickedness of the Nazis. "Wickedness" is a very apt word for it was the very word used by the British Prime Minister in speaking of the Nazi killings of fishermen, which he termed "not war but murder."

The Canadians are soldiers in this great crusade of right and justice among nations against the powers of Nazi darkness.

LENT

Lenten season has begun and thoughts and actions more restrained than usual are now the regular practice.

Lent is the expression of a religious principle at work in life. It is the innate thought in the minds of all men that the way of sacrifice is an essential part of the true life, and that analysis of one's relations to his neighbors, to the church, and to society are of great value in appraisal of life as it is and as it should be.

Many people are observing this season, perhaps more than in other years because there is a great burden weighing on them, the overhanging shadow of the war. The war has brought to the fore the realization of this great principle of sacrifice and of the supremacy of the spiritual over the merely material.

A Star Sets

Regina has joined the ranks of one-newspaper towns with suspension of the Star, a daily published there since 1928. The publishers say this decision was forced upon them by steadily-mounting costs of production, in the form of higher taxes and increased cost of raw materials. Taxes, they pointed out, federal, provincial and municipal, had reached a point "beyond any comparison with those prevailing ten years ago."

Getting out a newspaper is a costly business nowadays, and the record of casualties in the past couple of decades reminds us how many gallant fellows have succumbed to the economic strain and stress. Some have a ghostly survival in hyphenated names; others, many others, have sunk without a trace. Most Canadian towns of 10,000 or so used to maintain two newspapers, sometimes three or four, when wages were low and little money had to be spent on news services. The Great War changed the picture and heads fell thick and fast. Expensive cable services, larger papers, heavier payrolls and larger bills for supplies forced dozens to the wall. The Star, founded just at the end of post-war "good times," shows that these forces continue.

The brighter side of the picture is in the fact that the newspapers which now serve Canada are economically sound, for the most part, and infinitely more efficient in news coverage than were the papers of the nineteen-hundreds. They spend far more money on news and services and features and the smallest daily cover the world in every issue.

Women in Beverage Rooms

Bob Davis, the well-known writer in the New York Sun has been taken to task by a woman correspondent because he suggested in a recent article that women and girls who patronize bars or beverage rooms are prone to tarry too long and drink too much. In a brilliant pen-picture of a bar-room scene as fine a piece of descriptive writing as we have read for many a day but which is too long to reproduce, Mr. Davis describes what he saw at 5 a'clock in the "cocktail lounge" of a New York hotel. Twenty ladies were present, their dainty hands clasping various forms of drinks, and the thought occurred to him that he would like to see those ladies' faces thirty years hence. He mused to himself that the great stage director, Time, would so alter those faces that the spectator might imagine himself gazing upon one of those Hogarth pictures in which an atmosphere of squalor and degradation had surrendered to all the evils that beset mankind.

In Ontario we have grown accustomed to seeing girls and women in beverage rooms, but it cannot be said that the prospect is a pleasing one. Husband and wife may drop in for a social glass; boy or girl friend may do the same, but there are too many girls and women who linger for an hour or two, either willingly or at the instigation of a male "friend" who plies them with liquor either through excess of generosity or from a sense of devilment to see their companions get "squiffy." And there are many girls and women who from sheer bravado want to demonstrate that they can "take their likker."

Men may be party to those things, yet in their inner hearts there is no man who does not feel a sense of revulsion at a woman in a maudlin state; who is not quite clear as to where she is or what she looks like or what may happen to her. — St. Thomas Times Journal.

Correcting Advanced Cases of Flat Feet

A story, and it is true, is that of a recruit who walked forty miles through the bush to enlist only to be rejected because of flat feet. And the feet really were flat, because when he knelt down it could be seen that the whole sole of his feet were black from walking on the armory floor—not a single patch of white skin at the arch of the foot. I examined a recruit whose feet were so flat that the arches rested on the ground and yet the day following the examination he won second place to Goulding, then world's champion walker, in a matched race.

Why were these men with such flat feet able to walk long distances without pain in the arches?

It was because the muscles and ligaments of the feet were flexible or pliable, just as with those of a ballet dancer.

It is when the feet become "rigidly" flat that pain is caused by walking or being on the feet. It is in these cases that plaster casts are made of the feet from which arch supports are made which fit the feet properly.

There are, however, cases of flat foot in which surgery is necessary to give relief from pain and give the patient "serviceable" feet.

There are cases where these rigid or static flat feet cause deformities of the legs, particularly a curve outwards just above the ankle with a turning outward of the toes, and a drawing upward of the outer muscles of the leg and the big tendon at back of leg which is attached to the heel bone.

Dr. A. Pavlik, Stuttgart, describes three different types of operation to correct these various deformities which have reached a stage where they cannot be corrected by exercise, arch supports, or other physical measures. He shows that "it is necessary to select that type of surgical method which on the one hand reconstructs the arch of the foot, and the other hand, counteracts the curvature of the lower part of the leg, which is the cause of the collapse of the arch of the foot and the partial dislocation in the joints of the foot".

The thought then is that when properly fitted arch supports, exercises, and other methods fail to prevent rigid flat feet, orthopedic surgeons can, in many cases, obtain satisfactory results by operation.

Usable feet mean much to health, happiness and business.

Franciscan Nuns Tell of Hitler's Visit During Polish Invasion

New York, Feb. 10—(AP)—Two United States nuns of the Franciscan Order, who were in a convent 16 miles from Warsaw when the Germans invaded Poland last September, said on their return here that Adolf Hitler had visited the convent and from a church spire had viewed the results of bombardment.

The nuns, Sister Bogumila and Sister Innocencia, were in Poland 17 months. They said they returned to the United States because their passports would expire in March.

Sister Bogumila said there were seven other United States nuns at the convent, established and operated with American funds, when the drive on Poland started.

The nuns made a United States flag out of pieces of cloth and painted white stars on the blue field. This they hung, with signs proclaiming the nationality of the convent, on the walls.

The German staff established headquarters at the convention, but the nuns were not molested, Sister Bogumila said.

Hitler was taken up into the steeple, she said, because it was one of the highest structures in the vicinity and Warsaw could plainly be seen.

During Hitler's visit to the convent church none of the nuns was allowed in the church, Sister Bogumila said. But she knew he had stayed about half an hour. Both she and Sister Innocencia were hesitant about talking to reporters, saying they feared the Nazis might "take revenge" upon their sisters in Poland.

"At the convent we took care of the injured as much as we could," Sister Bogumila said. "Our church was partly damaged by Polish guns because we were in the line of the defence fire by the Poles."

"No words can describe the bombardment," Sister Bogumila said. "It was hellish. Dear God, they are all good martyrs, those Polish people."

She said she had read the report of Cardinal Hlond, of Poland, to the Vatican, describing anti-religious activities of the Nazis, but thought that "most of those things hpapened in Prussian Poland and in the Danzig territory."

THE KIPPER KITES

The British services have the happy knack of affectionately nicknaming a unit that does a hard task gallantly, and is now appropriately calling a section of the Royal Air Force Coastal Command the "Kipper Kites".

This command assists the navy in doing a big job. It throws defensive screens over wide areas of the ocean and maintains ceaseless patrols day after day over the North Sea. It has now to defend the crews of fishing trawlers being machine-gunned after their vessels are sunk by aircraft of the German Luftwaffe. Because of this work, the navy calls the R.A.F. doing it, the Kipper Kites.—Winnipeg Free Press.

The Greatest Thing In Life

By ARTHUR L. BURKE

A wondrous power invades this life below,
Inspired in breast of man by God above,
In early days or late we come to know
The greatest thing in life is simply love.

Love frowns upon deceit in any form,
Walks not with those who would from truth depart,
Without its aid we cannot breast the storm
Or soothe the anguish of an empty heart.

Love gives an uplit to the mind of man,
It brings desire, a reaching forth to see
What things worthwhile can be attained,
And when attained, enjoys unselfishly.

Love fills the heart with acts of noble birth,
Lends added charm to character and mien,
Rejoices in a brother's happiness and worth,
And lets his faults, if any, pass unseen.

Love gives assurance for the days to come,
A shining light that keeps us from the shoal,
A compass true, that brings us safely home
When wind and waves, around us surge and roll.

Love draws us to the Architect Divine,
It holds, refines and lifts our eyes above,
It guides our feet along the proper line,

Kill Off Buffalo as Range Closed

Wainwright, Alta.—(CP)— The slaughter of buffalo at Wainwright Park recalls the Canadian government's successful effort 30 years ago to prevent the shaggy "Monarch of the Plains" from becoming extinct like the dodo bird and the carrier pigeon.

The Dominion government's move to conserve the species was made in 1907 with the purchase of 700 purebred buffalo from Michael Pablo, a Montana halfbreed who owned the only herd in existence.

Prairie pioneers reported buffalo were so thick on the western plains during the early 19th century that herds would take days to pass a given point, but wild buffalo had disappeared by 1875. Wholesale slaughter by construction crews, fires set by bootleggers and ruthless killing to starve the Indians into submission had left only a few of the animals and these were owned privately.

In 1907 when Pablo lost his range in Montana, he asked the Canadian government for free range land but a federal official realizing it probably was the last chance of preserving what was the most characteristic native animal of the continent, urged the herd's purchase by the government.

A tract of land 160 square miles near Wainwright, 225 miles east of Edmonton near the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary was set apart as a preserve for the nation's new pets. Fencing of so large an area prevented completion of an enclosure that year and first arrivals of buffalo from Pablo were placed at Elk Island Park, 25 miles east of Edmonton. In 1909 the main body of the herd was moved to Wainwright. The new stamping ground was ideal for the animals and they flourished.

From the original 700, the herd had increased to 21,000 by 1921. As the park contained only enough grazing acreage for about 4,500, it was decided to kill off the older animals. The first major slaughter was in 1923 when 1,800 were shot. Annual slaughters continued and by 1938 almost 12,000 had been killed, the meat being sold to packing firms and the hides being used for robes and coats for western Canada police forces.

But the slaughter of old animals was not enough to keep the herd small. Between 1924 and 1928 nearly 6,000 were shipped to Wood buffalo range near Fort Fitzgerald on the Alberta-Northwest Territories boundary.

When the Dominion government ordered the park cleared last fall, there were 2,905 buffalo in the park in addition to 1,800 elk, 500 deer, 125 moose and 35 yak. Slaughter of the buffalo ended Dec. 30. Immediately after the new year park officials began to shoot the other animals and the meat is being distributed to Indian reservations.

Decision of the government to close Wainwright Park will not affect conservation of buffalo. There are more than 7,000 at Wood buffalo range, 1,000 at Elk Island Park and hundreds of others at zoos throughout the world.

Not Quite 'Unknown'

President Wilson used to find pleasure in relating how he once had his special car sidetracked at Hannibal, Mo., so he could make a quiet pilgrimage to the monument erected on the bluff, to Mark Twain. Unknown to the natives he asked one of them if he remember Tom Sawyer.

"Never heard of him," the Missourian made answer.

"Do you recollect Huckleberry Finn?" asked the President.

"Finn? Finn?" mused the native. "There was a family of Finns down the road apiece, but I don't think there was a Huckleberry among 'em."

"Do you happen to recall Pudd'n-head Wilson?"

COST OF NEW MARKERS

War's pinch is forcing what seem pretty trifling economies upon people in Europe. Germany saves a little cloth by limiting men's trousers to one hip pocket, England a little wood by decreeing that British broom handles from now on must be square.

In this country a professor of aeronautical engineering at Michigan University calculates that his state's new auto license plates, 30 percent. larger than the old ones, will add nearly $1,000 000 to Michigan motorists' gasoline bills in 1940. Even the old plates, he says, increased the air resistance of the average car enough to burn up $2.50 worth of fuel in a year. Without waiting for war, American genius might save a sight of gasoline by devising streamlined license tags for our streamlined automobiles.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Two nations, one belligerent and one neutral, yesterday took strong measures to deal with German influence within their borders.

At a secret session of the French Chamber of Deputies the activities of German agents in France was discussed. Premier Daladier outlined the extent of those activities and the steps proposed by the government.

At the opposite corner of Europe Turkey confiscated an important German-owned factory and dismissed and expelled scores of German technicians from key posts in Turksh industries.

Thus Nazi Germany's undercover organization outside the Reich gradually is being exposed and crippled. No doubt the steps taken by France and Turkey are prompted by some imminent danger but their long-range effect is to advance still further the process of restricting Germany's offensive power to the strictly military field.

Germany must fight in the open or not fight at all. If the Nazis cherished any hope of striking at the Allies through sabotage either in France and the British Empire or in countries more closely associated with them or by promoting revolution and disturbances they are being forced to abandon it.

The Turkish move is significant because of the long-standing close relationship between German and Turkish economy and because of the efforts put forth by Germany to counter the effects of the recent mutual assistance pacts signed by Turkey with the western powers.

The expulsion of German technicians ruptures an arrangement which goes back prior to 1914 under which Turkey relied to a large extent on German experts both for military and industrial leadership.

Germany's noter foreign trouble - shooter, Franz von Papen, was sent to Turkey as ambassador in an attempt to avoid the sort of thing which happened today and, perhaps, to make the maximum use of the German technicians there but he failed.

400 Skaters Attend Annual Party Held By Y. P. Unions

Stirling — Representing United Church Young People's Unions from all parts of the Belleville Presbytery and numbering nearly four hundred the largest crowd ever to skate on the Stirling rink attended the annual skating party of the Belleville Presbytery Young People's Unions. So great was the number of skaters that skating was interrupted several times as workmen cleared the ice of snow.

Giving a fine display of fellowship and co-operation in all their work the various groups within the Belleville Presbytery have created a reputation for themselves in gaining real results for several years. The annual skating party idea introduced recently is proving one of the most successful social events in the life of the United Church Young People and each year show mounting interest. Travelling from all parts of the County of Hastings skaters swarmed to the Stirling Arena where favorable weather increased the attendance over any previous year. Excellent music for skating sounded continuously over the amplifying system as the largest crowd of skaters ever seen on the Stirling rink swayed in rhythmic unison in one large circle like a vast crowd in motion of a revolving floor. Every available place in the rink suitable for a dressing room was used for changing from boots and shoes to skates and skaters clambered over the boards rather than wait at the crowded entrances to the ice surface.

Church Filled to the Doors

Throughout the afternoon and evening a large and efficient luncheon committee composed of members of the local organization worked ceaselessly in preparing luncheon for the hungry skaters to be served at the conclusion of skating in the church parlours at St. Paul's United Church. With the auditorium filled completely, Rev. W. J. Walker welcomed the large gathering and invited them downstairs for luncheon. Here accommodation for the crowd was difficult to arrange and every available place occupied. Donald Campbell of Marsh Hill, popular young President of the Belleville Presbytery Young People's Union briefly addressed the gathering and introduced several members of the executive committee of the central body who had worked energetically in the performance of their duties. The roll call of the several district Young People's Unions as recorded by the secretary revealed almost one hundred per cent representation. A hearty vote of appreciation extended to St. Paul's Y.P.U. for their hospitality and fine work in the project was formally accepted by the local President, Mr. Don Williams. Lively community singing served to promote the desired feeling of fellowship among the largest group of young people ever assembled in Stirling. The evening thoroughly enjoyed by all climaxed with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, February 11

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent auguries for progress and prosperity, both in spiritual and material affairs. In the former there should be outstanding achievements, while in the latter industry, enterprise and proper precaution against entanglements and deception should attract promotion and other forms of preferment from superiors. Social and romantic affairs also thrive and give much pleasure.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of decided progress and prosperity, with rewards for industry, initiative and careful attention to obligations. Be alert to sinister attack or entanglements. In social, sentimental and cultural associations there should also be gratification.

A child born on this day may be versatile, literary, artistic, energetic and industrious, and at the same time gentle, amiable and so soft-hearted it may be duped by craft and duplicity.

For Monday, February 12

MONDAY'S astrological forecast continues the benignant auguries of Sunday, where diligence, enterprise and fine constructive ability and determined efforts win the preferment and support of those in power and prestige. This promise may meet surprising fulfillments in the form of gifts, bequests of other substantial tokens of esteem and good will. High goals are indicated.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which they may reap rich rewards for past performances, where hard work, energy and enterpise are recognized by superiors and those in authority. There may be gifts, legacies or other substantial rewards of merit and endeavor. Social and emotional aspects of progress and pleasure also loom large. Seek high goals.

A child born on this day may be efficient ambitious and dependable, with much integrity and nobility of heart and purpose. It may find happy rewards in its material and personal objectives.

The romantic leads of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," now at the Belle, are the brilliant Maureen O'Hara and Edmund O'Brien, who with 100 other principals support Charles Laughton starred in the mammoth production.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is Life a Dance?

There are certain young people nowadays who seem to think so.

A girl accepts a good-looking partner, whirls about with him for a year or two, then relaxes her interest as she sees somebody approaching who is even better-looking, even more magnetic, and who has the air of being about to cut in.

A few months later, after a couple of divorces, four young dancers—shall I call them? —have changed partners. Nobody has suffered. Nobody has sacrificed. Everybody is exhilarated. This is the second movement of the modern dance.

But can this really be marriage? you will ask me. Because in such a scheme of things, the most important part of marriage seems to be left out: What about love? Where does that come in? For love isn't a gay, careless, on-and-off affairs. It cuts deep.

The truth is that sooner or later, love has to be taken into account. The dance halts, the music pauses, something has happened. Love has seized two of the dancers. And from the moment that they have been caught up into the heaven of their own particular joy, they have abandoned forever the frivolous and meaningless dance of those ignorant of love.

There is the case of Vivian, a girl I know personally. Vivian married. But marriage meant nothing in particular to her or to her rich young husband. They were a handsome pair, with no responsibilities and no children. They simply joined in the dance.

After a year or two, they fell apart. Oh yes, there was another man. And another girl. A change of partners. That was all.

But Vivian's was an extreme case. In a year or two more, she went through another divorce. And she had her third marriage.

This time, it was different. But nobody knew. To her acquaintances, even to many of her friends, what had happened was that Vivian had a third partner. It was beginning to be a little hard to keep track of her changes of name and connections. But nobody minded.

Vivian couldn't have told that at least she was married in the real sense. The people she knew would not have understood, wouldn't have believed. She couldn't have explained that at last she knew love. To her, her husband was her universe. To him, she was a marvellous young divinity. Both felt that the years they had spent apart from each other were wasted. Both looked ahead to an eternity of love. It was, I am sure, a perfect marriage.

Vivian's husband was killed in a motor-accident.

At twenty-eight, she is the most desolate woman I know, the most hopelessly lonely. Her friends do not undertsand her grief, as they did not understand her happiness. To them, she is a girl who is for the moment without a dancing partner Too bad, they think, but not really serious. The world is full of partners. A girl with Vivian's attractions and with a little fortune of her own has merely to choose.

They are a small group of course, numerically, these strangers to love, these dancers on the surface of life. Because they are young and moneyed and for the most part good-looking, they are thought fortunate. But can there be any supreme good fortune that leaves love out of account? You and I know better.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Weather Serves as Conversational Self-Starter

I've never been one to scorn using the weather as a starter to get the conversational motor going. Some people shy away from taking advantage of this conversational topic, but I think there's often a good deal of wisdom in its use.

For example, beginning a conversation after an introduction. You must say something to the stranger. You must establish some point of contact. You feel around for a subject. Ah—there's always the weather. It may not be a brilliant subject, but a casual remark about it will at least put your conversational car in first gear. What happens after that depends on how skilful a driver you are.

If you're a bit shy about meeting people, if you're self-conscious in trying to think of something to say in that lull that is apt to descend after an introduction, don't let yourself become tongue-tied by thinking you have to say something very amusing or something very profound to start the conversation. The point is to get it started, and at once. If you're a master of entertaining small talk, you probably won't need the weather as a conversation-starter. But it's always there if you do need it!

Don't settle down complacently on the subject of the weather—that's dull. Let that obvious subject lead you quickly and alertly to try another. Perhaps something interesting you have been doing "these sunny days", or planning to do "when it stops raining". This enthusiasm of yours may lead to a responsive enthusiasm in your companion—and you're on your way, driving skilfully along the conversational road.

Many great friendships have had their humble beginnings in a casual comment about the weather!

Retains Name

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My husband died a year ago. My friends tell me that now my cards should read Mrs. Mary Smith. I maintain that they should read Mrs. William Smith. Please tell me who is right?

M.

You are most definitely right. A widow uses exactly the same form of name that she used when her husband was living. She is still Mrs. William Smith.

MILK DISH FREEZES TO DOG'S EAR

Milwaukee.— Sleepy, a springer spaniel puppy, learned a lesson in cold weather eating technique recently. His owner, unaware that the temperature had dropped to 15 below zero, placed the dog's dish of milk outdoors. Sleepy lapped up the milk. His long, shaggy ears got into the wet dish. When she started to walk away, the dish came along, frozen to one ear. Shrill yip brought his owner to the rescue.

Putting the Curse On Parental "Ought"

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THERE IS a word which may be very naughty for parents to use. Sometimes it is morally worse than any other symbol of profanity. Many characters have been ruined by it; by it homes have been wrecked, hearts have been broken, children schooled in crime. On its account good has been hated loved ones have been despised, and children of the best parents made the worst in town.

The more conscientious parents are, the more inclined they are to use this word. It is the choice profanity of saints, and some of us not so good also employ it.

OUGHT is the word. It is used in many modes, with SHOULD as the most common synonym.

Often a Curse

The Founder of Christianity warned us that we shall give an account of every idle word we use. This word is not only almost always idle; it is an encumbrance, frequently a curse.

We use the world when we feel most self-righteous, when we try to make our children feel least so. Rarely do we utter it for any purpose than to make ourselves feel better; and we say it in a scolding tone.

But when we are reasonable, we know very well it does not move the child to do as the word suggests. Almost always when we say ought or should to the child, he is least ready to comply. Generally it renders the hearer less co-operative or makes him like us less; makes him feel irritable or depressed. When you and I use it in speaking to our children, we rarely expect it to bring the result which its utterance indicates.

Confesses His Guilt

To illustrate, I caught myself using the word on the way to Sunday school with one of my boys when he was about eight year old. I said " You should not read the comic strip while the automobile is running. It is hard on your eyes." Naturally, he kept on reading. I felt a little disgusted with him that he did. Yet, I knew very well before I made the remark that he would; and he doubtless was much irritated by his father's words. He also knew that he would keep on reading since I had not uttered a command or afforded him sufficient urge to quit reading. Other members of the family group also were vexed. But he had been allowed to read the comics before in the car on the way to Sunday school.

Why did I say what I did? We had a guest with us, a child expert who had asked the lad how he read while the car was going. That remark, particularly, pricked my conscience. Here I was, a child expert, and my child was exercising very bad eye hygiene. It was about the most natural thing for me to do, yet the most stupid.

Have you ever done such a thing? You know as well as I do that ought is a naughty word; and we also know that it will slip out when we are not watching. Yet, I am sure I have used this word less often since I labelled it profanity. Twenty-five years from now I hope almost to have abolished ought and should, in reference to others, from my vocabularly. Of course, I may be optimistic.

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Should the child under six be allowed to get up as soon as he awakens in the morning?

A—As a rule, no. He can be taught to sleep to any reasonable; regular time in the morning if, when he gets on his feet, he always receives instant pain.

Q—Would you spank a child to make him drink milk or eat carrots or other vegetables?

A.—I would not, nor to make him eat any other food.

Whetting Lenten Appetites

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

DURING LENT let's get acquainted with cheese, pastes such as macaroni and spaghetti; eggs and fish as main course dishes. The recipes given today are from the files of famous chefs, and we offer them in the hope that many of the ideas will appeal to you right now.

Baked Spaghetti and Oysters make a delicious combination. Mix canned spaghetti with 12 chopped raw oysters, a dash of cayenne, one-half teaspoon of garlic salt. Place in casserole, top with bread crumbs dotted with butter and sprinkled with grated Parmesan cheese and fresh black pepper. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven. When ready to serve, garnish with parsley sprig.

Shrimp Creole is easily prepared. Cook a chopped onion and tomatoes in hot lard slowly for 10 minutes. Add boiled, medium-sized shrimps and small amount of flour mixed with cold water for a slight thickening. Season with salt and chili powder to taste. Cook for 10 to 15 minutes. Serve with rice.

Ring of Plenty is the name of our next dish, maybe because there are always plenty of requests for more! We make it with two cups of grated yellow cheese, six chopped pimientos, two cups cream (whipped), salt, pepper, cayenne, teaspoon mustard, one and one-half tablespoons gelatin and one-fourth cup cold water. Fold into the cream with cheese. Pour into a slightly-greased ring mould. Turn out and fill centre with vegetable salad.

Now for some fish dishes, favorite recipes of some famous opera singers. First, Baked Stuffed Bluefish a la Lotte Lehmann. Rub fish with salt inside and out. Make the stuffing with three cups of soft bread crumbs, one small minced onion cooked in three tablespoons butter until soft. Season with salt and pepper. Pack into body cavity. Sew up fish. Bake in hot oven 20 minutes to the pound.

Lauritz Melchoir likes smelts done in a tasty sauce. Place well-seasoned smelts in an oiled baking dish. Cook four chopped mushrooms, one small clove, minced garlic, two tablespoons green pepper and a small pinch of thyme in one and one-half cups tomato sauce for three minutes. Pour sauce over fish—bake, basting twice. Serve with pan liquor over smelts.

Herbert Jannsen contributes a recipe for whiting. Cook two large minced onions, one clove garlic (sliced), one green pepper (sliced) in one-half cup oil until soft. Cook two cups strained tomato with two cloves, one bay leaf, one tablespoon sugar for two minutes Add onion mixture, simmer ten minutes. Cut two pounds whiting into serving pieces and place in oiled baking dish. Pour sauce over and bake.

All recipes for four servings.

White in Brief

By ALICE ALDEN

MADELEINE CARROLL never fails to do well by herself, as this recent picture again proves. Her pretty face and figure justify the brief playsuit; others of us will leave to tots (including the wistful-eyed Carolyn Lee), or will top with a matching skirt, or beach coat. It's vanity, not modesty, which accounts for the knee or slightly-below trend in play togs; most of us need a little coverage on the tennis court and on the sands. One fashion pointer all of us can take from this twin pose, though, is that white is a leading resort choice from morning until after midnight. Frequently, it's set off with patriotic red and blue, if in nothing more than nail lacquer and sun glasses. And it's about the loveliest possible contrast for a golden tan.

Dishes of the Season

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

MUSHROOMS with Brazil Nut Stuffing certainly is a dish appropriate for the season. Make it with one and one-fourth pounds mushrooms, one-fourth cup butter, one chopped onion, one cup soft bread crumbs, one cup chopped or ground Brazil nuts, one teasoon salt, pepper, one tablespoon tomato catsup, one tablespoon lemon juice, three strips bacon, one-half cup cream. Wash mushrooms, remove stems and chop fine. Cook onion and mushroom stem in butter about five minutes. Add crumbs, nuts and seasonings. Stuff mushroom caps with this mixture. Garnish with strips of bacon. Arrange on oven-proof platter, pour cream around them and bake in 400 degrees F. oven for 25 minutes.

There are many variations of stuffed peppers, and here is another to add to the ever-growing collection. For six medium-sized peppers use three average-sized ears of cooked corn or one and one-half cups canned corn, three medium-sized potatoes, cooked and diced, one tablespoon each butter and flour, teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one-eighth teaspoon celery salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one cup evacorated milk, one-half cup crushed bread crumbs, one one-third cup grated American cheese. Wash peppers, cut off tops and remove seeds. Parboil ten minutes. Mix together corn and potatoes. Melt butter in double boiler, add flour and seasonings. Blend thoroughly. Add evaporated milk gradually, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Add to corn and potatoes and blend. Fill peppers. Combine bread crumbs and grated cheese. Sprinkle over tops of stuffed peppers and bake in 350 degeres F. oven ten minutes or until crumbs are brown.

Delicious Tuna and Vegetable Pie is made with three tablespoons each butter and flour, one and one-half cups milk, one and one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one-third cup diced celery, one-half cup diced onions, one-third cup diced cooked carrots, one-third cup cooked peas, one-third cup coarsely-chopped sweet pickles, a seven-ounce jar or can tuna fish (coarsely flaked), and flaky pastry. Melt two tablespoons of the butter in a saucepan, stir in flour, add milk and cook until thickened and smooth, stirring constantly. Add salt and pepper. Saute celery and onions in remaining butter until lightly browned. Add carrots, peas and pickles. Place alternate layers of the vegetable mixture, tuna fish and sauce in buttered baking dish. Cover with pastry rolled one-eighth inch thick, moistening rim with water to make crust adhere. Trim, press down crust and prick with fork. Bake in 450 degrees F. oven for 15 minutes, then reduce to 350 degrees F. and bake 15 minutes longer.

Cream of Spinach Soup
Toast Strips
Ham Sandwiches Pickles
Baked Apples Cookies
Coffee or Tea

THIS MENU may be served as a luncheon or supper. It would be excellent to serve to the children (young or old) and their friends after an afternoon or evening of winter sports. When you make the sandwiches, cream the butter to be spread on the bread, and add a pinch of dry mustard to it. The mustard in the butter gives a really delicious flavor.

Cream of Spinach Soup—Ingredients: one pound spinach, wash well and cook without water, put through strainer. Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one quart milk, seasonings. Melt butter, add flour and mix smooth, then gradually add milk, stirring constantly until all is smooth and slightly thickened. Season with one teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper or paprika; add spinach, boil up and serve very hot with toast strips or crisp crackers. It is an excellent idea to make a cream soup in the double boiler.

Peanut Macaroons —Ingredients: one cup chopped or ground peanuts, two-thirds cup sugar, one tablespoon flour, pinch of salt, whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Mix as in order given, drop on buttered baking sheet and bake in moderate oven.

Making Most Of Machine Age

By ELEANOR ROSS

THE WISE housewife gets the utmost out of mechanical servants. For instance, she uses the washer for something more than the week's laundry.

She makes a practice of regularly tossing into the washer the smaller bathmats which catch the dust and grime from the open windows, and bath and talcum powders. We've seen many a handsome bathroom soiled because of a soiled bathmat.

Then there's that important matter of draperies. Do you see to it that these go into the washer tub periodically? Tubbing is so economical that a homemaker is amply repaid even for switching to washable fabrics for her windows. Bedspreads, scatter rugs, slip-covers, blankets, comfortables, pillows—one and all can go regularly into the revivifying suds.

The homemaker who moves most easily through the succession of weeks is the one who never lets great tasks pile up ahead of her, and the washer is ideal for soothing her path. One special job this week, another next week, and the week after that, month in and month out; she turns one tough assignment after the other over to her washer.

The Staff of Life

Bread and similar grain products form the largest single item of food in every part of the world, and have come to be regarded as the staff of life.

Now grains and particularly wheat, are basically very well balanced foods. They contain a number of the vitamins in convenient form. But sometimes the staff isn't the right one for us to lean on. We residents of North America are likely to eat our grains mostly in the form of white bread made from white flour that has had what we know as the germ of the wheat, removed in the milling process. About all that is left of the wheat in a great deal of white flour is starch.

Our grandfathers had no such habit. They took their wheat to the mill, had it ground and carried it back home—the whole wheat ground up. Then it was found that by removing some of the parts of the grain, a beautiful white flour that in turn, made white, fluffy bread, and would keep better, could be obtained, and use of this became common. It was not until a few years ago that it was discovered that this part of the wheat that discolored the flour was the element that contained potent vitamins.

I became particularly interested in this fact when the Dionne Quintuplets got old enough to have bread in their diet. I learned that some so-called whole wheat or brown breads were so adulterated that they didn't contain enough of the vitamins. Then I found that there is a kind of white bread embodying the wheat germ in which most of the vitamins and the minerals are contained.

Of course, vitamins and minerals are the food components we must be most careful to have in our children's food for other food components are widely available and these are not. I know that certain writers are claiming the authority to say that too many vitamins are not beneficial, but their authority is questionable. There may be people who suffer from an overdose of vitamins but I don't think I've ever seen one. On the other hand, I've seen plenty of people suffering from a lack of them.

Years ago, before we knew anything about vitamins as such, we did know that whole grains had a great value. My father, who was a pioneer doctor in this country, gave me a good prescription for families threatened with dietary troubles in the winter. That was to keep a pot of wheat simmering on the back of the stove and to make porridge and gruel, in fact, to have it on any combination of food they could. I have seen this simple dish work wonders in an undernourished family.

In the early days I used to run into quite a lot of scurvy up here. Family diets in winter had little variety; they often consisted mostly of salt pork, potatoes and white bread. If they had left the skins on the spuds the results wouldn't have been so bad, but they didn't. As a natural consequence there were outbreaks of scurvy. Besides potatoes and pork, the people ate a lot of white bread.

I remember one family in which there were 22 children. In the Autumn, the father, a woodsman, would lay in a whole winter's supply of provisions—salt pork, some potatoes and forty bags of wheat flour. The father was considered a good provider in the neighborhood. The father showed me his store of flour with great pride. Yet his children were not healthy, and the family had continual cases of sickenesses. Studying their diet, it was not difficult to understand why. There were no foods in their natural state in it. Most of the vitamins were absent. I gave him my father's wheat precription, and explained to him why it was needed.

In following winters his grain went almost twice as far, and his family was certainly twice as healthy.

Fashion Flashes

STILL AROUND is that graceful fabric, silk jersey. An afternoon frock with pleated skirt is in black with an extra wide girdle of royal blue, shirred and boned. A small, tailored matching blue bow marks the throat.

A nice pal is the two-piece frock, with jacket-like top. Pale blue wool crepe is used for a dress of this type with self shirring at the curved hip pockets, and at the bustline of the fitted jacket top.

Flowers bloom on the new hats. A neat little toque is of grey net with sprigs of mauve, white and pink hyacinth, covered with a grayish-pink veil.

Together again are chiffons trimmed with fur, always a lovely combination. Apricot colored chiffon has a band of sable-dyed kolinsky at the edge of the short sleeves and edging the peg-top pockets.

Enjoy your leisure in a house-gown of mauve satin, straight and slim with the bodice slit to the waist in back. A sprig of lilac and pink roses are thrust through the girdle.

Very soon now you'll be faring forth in a new pair of Spring shoes. A good looking black patent has crossed straps of elasticized gabardine. Heels are high, toes are slightly open.

Comedy Presentation Wins Cup in Bay of Quinte Drama Festival

"Why I Am a Bachelor" Directed by Nellie Merry in First Place

MRS. REED, JUDGE

Bernice Saunders, Tom Hyland Receive Awards for Best Performances

With entries limited to the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School the annual Bay of Quinte Drama Festival was held last evening in the Collegiate Auditorium, the winning play being "Why I am a Bachelor," directed by Miss Nellie P. Merry. Trophies for the best acting were awarded Miss Bernice Saunders and Mr. Tom Hyland, both of whom took part in "A Marriage Has Been Arranged," for which Miss Joan Maraskas was director. Mrs. G. B. Reed of Kingston, very capably carried out the duties of adjudicator and in her summary at the conclusion of the program pointed out that a very high standard had been maintained by the four plays presented in the festival.

A large audience greeted the young actors and the evening's entertainment was one to satisfy the most critical. The selection of plays resulted in a wide range of dramatic appeal with comedy predominating, and the comedy was ndled with the light and skilful ouch that is usually so difficult for the youthful amateur to attain. With genuine talent, splendid direction and the advantages of well managed technical facilities the plays maintained good balance of performance throughout.

The Collegiate Band, conducted by Mr. Alfred Cooper, instructor of instrumental music at the school, added to the evening's success by the numbers it contributed at the beginning of the program and between acts. Jim Graham, representing the Literary Society, welcomed the audience and announced the members of the cast of each play, in turn.

At the conclusion of the final play Mrs. Reed came to the platform and reviewed the merits of the various performances, giving valuable constructive criticism where necessary, and announcing the winners of the festival awards.

"THE BRIDE"

The play by Gertrude Jennings was directed by Mary Forster. The scene is laid in the bedroom of the bride's home one hour before her marriage.

The Bride .... Miraim Drew

Her Sister .... Joyce Putnam
Miss Sparrow .Kathleen Morrison
Madam .... Lenore Vermilyea
The Maid ..... Meribeth Stobie

cribed as a delightful play in which ne cast completely entered into the spirit of gaiety, essential to its success. More distinction of characterization might have been given by the major characters. Audibility was good as was the team work, and the grouping was natural. The pace could have been improved at the beginning. The climax was extremely good. The atmosphere was good and the properties well chosen, the costumes and make up splendid. To three minor characters went special praise for their work. The interpretation of Miss Sparrow was excellent, the variations of voice and expression being remarkable; Alice, the maid, never slipped out of character even when in the background, and Madame, a short and difficult role, was carried along with vivacity.

"The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," a play by W. W. Jacobs, directed by Joan Maraskas. The scene is laid in a country inn somewhere in England. The cast: Hurst—Ralph Atyeo; Sommers — Bill Boynton; Dr. Leek—Vernon Cameron; Malcolm—Ron Herman; Beldon—Eugene Lang; George—Tom Hyland; Renfold—J. Kroch.

Mrs. Reed found as the chief fault of this play that the characters did not stand out enough, they hadn't been thought out sufficiently. Otherwise the audibility was good, movement good and the grouping extremely interesting. The team work was especially commended. The atmosphere created by the scene costume and make up was excellent. The adjudicator did not give individual criticism preferring to treat the play as a whole, so impressed was she with the team work of the group.

"A Marriage Has Been Arranged," by Alfred Sutro, directed by Joan Maraskas. The conservatory of 300 Grosvenor Square, London. Hour, about midnight. Mr. Harrison Crockstead — Tom Hyland; Lady Aline de Vaux — Bernice Saunders.

A difficult play, the adjudicator said it was very, very well done. The characterizations made the audience feel that here were two people meeting a situation in their lives. The audibility was good, with a good deal of change, the gestures very restful and very suitable. There was a little tendency to move needlessly. The interpretation of the extremely brittle and artificial young lady was very well done. The actors played to each other well. Mrs. Reed praised the atmosphere, scene, make up and costumes.

"Why I Am a Bachelor," by Conrad Seeler, directed by Nellie Merry; an illustrated lecture. Lecturer —Frank Morton; Henrietta—Jean Archibald; Algernon—Bill Doyle.

The final play was a great delight to the audience and the adjudicator had nothing but praise for the manner in which it was presented. Audibility, variation, atmosphere, pace and interpretation were good. The team work was extremely neat, the movement natural and without any doubt the play merits the Festival cup.

Miss Merry, director of the winning play, the members of its cast, and the winners of individual awards were called to the platform and were presented with their awards by Mrs. Reed.

King and Queen Quite Anxious About Tweedsmuir

London, Feb. 10 (CP Cable)—The King and Queen are keeping in the closest touch with the condition of Lord Tweedsmuir. And that is true of the entire United Kingdom.

Arrangements have been made to supply their Majesties with regular progress reports from Canada. It is understood the King has sent a message to Lady Tweedsmuir expressing his sympathy and hope for his Excellency's early recovery.

Reflecting the public's concern over the accident suffered by the Governor General, who is beloved for his literature and work on behalf of the Empire, the press is publishing on its front pages in all editions the bulletins on his condition.

Discussing Lord Tweedsmuir's term as Governor General of Canada, the London correspondent of the Yorkshire Post said his Excellency inspired in the Dominion a quickened interest in letters.

"Throughout his term his pen has seldom been idle," the writer recalled.

The correspondent also praised Lady Tweedsmuir for starting a system of travelling libraries and for fostering the love of books in Canada's remote districts.

ELDERLY WOMAN STRUCK DOWN AS BANK IS ROBBED

Two Bandits Secure $2,000 in Hamilton Today but Licence of Car Taken

CARRIED REVOLVERS

Three Customers in Bank Ordered to Lie Down on the Floor

Hamilton, Feb. 10 (CP) — Two bandits, armed with nickel-plated revolvers, entered the Royal Bank branch at Locke and Main Streets shortly after it opened this morning, and took $2,000 in cash. The thugs struck down an elderly woman when ordering the three customers in the lobby to the floor. The license number of their car was obtained by G. A. Stephenson, accountant, as they sped south on Locke Street.

Glancing up from his desk in his office, I. D. Eastman, manager of the bank, saw the side of man's face as the two armed men covered the other three bank employees, Mr. Stephenson, W. D. Saunders, teller, and Miss Eileen Cooper, stenographer

Ordered Back in Seat

He rose from his seat to give the alarm but was immediately noticed by one of the men who flourished a gun at him and ordered him back into his seat.

"The two of them, both with nickel-plated revolvers, entered the bank and immediately ordered the three customers who were there to get down on the floor," said Eastman. "One man was tall and the other short, and one of the men smashed down an elderly lady who was slow in obeying their commands.

"They walked right in with revolvers drawn and demanded cash. I was in my office and I just saw the side of one fellow's face and he got the drop on me and prevented me from moving from where I was sitting."

Eastman immediately began to check up on the amount of cash stolen which was tentatively estimated at about $2,000.

ECONOMIC SANITY AND PEACE AIMS OF DISCUSSIONS

U.S. Conversations With Neutrals Aim at Formula for After-War Period

3 MOVES UNDER WAY

Washington, Feb. 10 (AP)—Peace and economic sanity in the post-war period were emphasized by State Secretary Cordell Hull today as the objectives of discussions now under way between the United States and other neutral nations and of the assignment on which Under-secretary Sumner Welles will visit Rome, Berlin, Paris and London.

Hull said that for some time the United States had been doing everything possible to keep alive basic ideas, formulas and programs relating to a sound and stable period of international relations after the war is ended.

The keystones of that policy, he explained, are:

1. The halting and curtailment of armaments.

2. The adoption by all nations of sound and liberal commercial policies.

Hull Says Objectives Essential.

It is necessary for the world to achieve those objectives, Hull declared, if there is to be economic sanity in the post-war period rather than economic autarchy and totalitarianism.

When peace does come, Hull declared, it is hoped that there will be even commitments to the basic prineven commitmentsto the basic principles vitally necessary for a peaceful world.

Before giving his views Hull conferred with William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, and it was understood the general European situation had been the subject of their conference.

The government had three moves under way to help find a basis for peace.

1. Informal conversations went on with neutral countries based "on the evident desire of all neutral nations for the eventual restoration of world peace on a sound and lasting basis for all nations."

2. Sumner Welles, State Undersecretary, prepared for a trip to Italy, France, Germany and Great Britain "for the purpose of advising President Roosevelt and the Secertary of State as to present conditions in Europe."

3. Myron C. Taylor prepared to leave for Vatican City as the personal representative of the President, to coordinate peace study and eventual moves with the Pope.

Diplomatic Corps Interested

Wonder was aroused in Congress by President Roosevelt's announcement yesterday of Welles' trip and State Secretary Cordell Hull's disclosure that informal conversations had begun with neutrals in regard "to a sound international economic system" and "world-wide reductions of armaments." Hull said the conversations, which could be extended to belligerents "insofar as they involve those two common problems of future peace," did not embrace matters involving present war conditions.

Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, observed that it looked as if league of neutrals might be in the offing. But Democratic leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky declared he had not been informed that the State Department had any such objective.

PILOT OFFICER LOSES HIS WAY

Leaves Camp Borden but Lands South of Picton Due to Heavy Storm

Trenton Feb. 10 (Special) — Completely lost thousands of feet above the clouds and in a blinding snow storm, an R.C.A.F. Pilot Officer from Camp Borden narrowly escaped plunging into the icy waters of Lake Ontario, a few miles south of Picton late yesterday, when he pancaked his Harvard trainer machine within a few feet of the shore line. The pilot escaped uninjured and brought his machine to earth with the minimum of damage to the undercarriage.

According to an unconfirmed report from the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, the pilot, whose name was withheld, was on a reconnaissance flight from Camp Borden, but after climbing several thousand feet above the cloud line he ran into a blinding snow storm and lost all sense of direction. Heading southward in hopes of landing at Toronto the pilot flew for many hours before settling down near the lake shore south of Picton, where he narrowly escaped diving his machine into the cold waters of Lake Ontario. In landing the pilot did not use the retractable landing gears, depending upon pancaking the machine with the least possible damage.

Germany's Export Trade now a Trickle

London, Feb. 10 —(CP—Cable)— Germany's export trade to non-European countries has dwindled to a small trickle, officials of the Ministry of Economic Warfare declared today.

The Allied blockade of Germany's outward bound trade has cost the Reich hundreds of thousands of dollars in foreign currency since it went into full operation Jan. 1. In the long run it may prove to be a decisive factor in winning the war.

A reply will be sent to Washington early next week to the United State's note protesting the general policy of export blockade. It will be represented to Washington that the Allies consider the blockade vitally important to their war effort, but will emphasize that it is being applied with a minimum of inconvenience to neutral powers.

STAYS 15 ROUNDS

Louis Landed Cleaner, Sharper Blows and Godoy's Face Badly Cut

By WHITNEY MARTIN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Feb. 10 (AP). — The fight world today held a morning-after head, and through it buzzed the name of Arturo Godoy, the strange interlude in the life of Joe Louis.

For fifteen mauling, bruising rounds last night the hot tamale from Chile stood up to the Brown Bomber, and when the announcer intoned "the winner, and still world champion . . .," a thunder of boos swept from the Madison Square Garden rafters.

It was that close in the eyes of many of the 15,675 fans who came expecting another efficient Louis' painting job and left with vague misgivings.

They couldn't figure out whether the Bomber was no longer the same Bomber who wrecked the John Henry Lewises and the Max Schmelings and the Tony Galentoes, or whether the clowning, grimacing, bobbing and clutching Godoy was more than a little better than they figured.

Return Meeting Sure.

This they did know, that a return meeting in the open air next summer is as certain as death. Arturo can't punch a lick, but he punched his way right out of the Garden into the open air.

Only the gallery thought the rock-ribbed, iron-jawed Chilean was the victor. Tommy Shortell, one of the judges, gave Godoy the fight with ten rounds to five for Louis. Referee Arthur Donovan gave Louis ten and Godoy five, the same as The Associated Press sheet, and the other judge, George Lecron, gave Louis ten, Godoy four, and called one even.

Louis Sharper Hitter.

Sharper, more punishing blows proved the margin by which the Bomber retained his title. He was up against a style that baffled him, and left him puzzled and frustrated as he tried to find a spot for his famed dynamite fists on a crouching, bobbing foe who came out for the first round squatting like a Russian dancer, dove for his opponent's thighs, then crept upward like ivy until he could bury his square chin in the hollow of Louis' neck and whale away.

Louis, little relishing the inside work, did his best to stay clear, but his straight left wasn't enough to keep the courageous Chilean away. Even Joe's uppercuts, landing soddenly on Godoy's battle-scarred face, failed to slow Godoy more than momentarily.

In fact, Joe's week-end punches bounced off him like rain off a tin roof, and he was forever swarming, swarming. In several rounds, he carried Louis against the ropes and silently challenged him to a head-to-head slugging bee from which he seldom came off second best.

Louis Never Ruffled.

Time after time, the Garden was a bedlam as the unorthodox Chilean bulled the sloe-eyed champion about often making him blink with looping lefts or rights which, had they the potency of a Galento punch, would have spelled disaster. They could not ruffle Louis' calm, however, and he left the ring unmarked. Godoy's eyes and lips were puffed, and one eye peered over a slight cut.

Godoy appeared to tire midway in the fight, but he got his second wind quickly, and in the closing rounds he appeared strong. In fact, he provided a clownish interlude in the fourteenth, coming out of his corner gorilla fashion, stooped over, arms drooped to the floor.

Champion Had Margin.

All in all, Louis won, and in our opinion, won by a clear margin, but it was Godoy's night to howl, which he did literally when he realized he had stayed fifteen rounds with the dark destiny and had carried the fight to his opponent over the route.

It was Louis' ninth title defence and the second time he was carried the limit. Tommy Farr was the other survivor.

The show drew a gate of only $88,523.29, another disappointment for the Bomber. His previous Garden appearances each topped the $100,000 mark.

'PETES' CLINCH GROUP HONORS, BEAT FLYERS 8-1

Teams, However, Will Meet for Championship of Group in Three Game Series

PLAY HERE MONDAY

Driscoll in Nets for Birdmen Not to Blame for Large Score

Crowned with an outbreak of fisticuffs in the latter stages, the Peterboro "Petes" rung down their Intermediate O.H.A. curtain with an 8 to 1 win over the Air Force "Flyers" in Peterboro last night. The decision cinched first place for the homesters, while the Flyers still have one remaining group game to play, when they meet the Belleville Redmen in the final league match at the Hume Arena on Monday night.

The Petes were too fast for the Flyers last night and gained a two-goal margin in the initial frame as Jim Ellis beat Driscoll, the Flyers' elevated goalie coming up from the "B" ranks, with a hard high drive from close in to open the scoring. The Petes added three more counters in the middle session and an additional trio in the last stanza to fatten their scoring averages.

Play was exceedingly fast throughout and despite the fact the Petes mounted the score the game proved exciting to some 900 fans who took in the pastime and shouted with approving glee, when fisticuffs broke out between Ellis and Lemieux in the final period. A general melee of players entered the brawl, which Referee Bennett soon quelled, giving the chief offenders a rest in which to cool off.

McNab scored the Flyers' lone tally early in the third period on a pass from Lemieux. Starr and Coughlin lead the Petes in the attack.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Some actual startling facts were revealed at the annual meeting of the Belleville Anglers' Association, especially when Fred Croft, chairman of the fishing contests held annually by the association, announced the various winners for 1939. Of the seven prizes awarded, finny denizens taken from the waters of the Bay of Quinte ran off with four of the major prizes, bass, pickerel and maskinonge getting the awards. These facts prove that it is unnecessary to travel many miles in pursuit of good angling; we have as good fishing facilities at our front door as any place in the province. This statement can be substantiated by the fact that the 'lunge caught by Frank Aikins (but which was really hooked by ten-year-old Tommy Aikins) was the largest maskinonge reported landed in Ontario last season. This finny beauty weighed 42 pounds when officially weighed. Now that commercial fishing has been limited in the Bay of Quinte, better angling for game fish can be expected annually. The report submitted by Dr. Van Blaksiee, chairman of the restocking committee, was most satisfying. Actually many millions of fry and fingerlings were placed in local waters through the efforts of the Belleville Angling Association.

Undoubtedly the busiest organization in Belleville today is the Quinte Skating Club, whose members' ice-skating ability and prowess are spreading widely throughout Eastern Ontario. Although the Quinte Skating Club members are busied these days and nights also, preparing for their own annual ice kaleidoscope at the Hume Arena next Thursday night, their skaters are very much in demand elsewhere throughout Eastern Ontario. The Peterboro' Lions Club is planning a mammoth ice carnival and are seeking talent from the Quinte Club. Secretary B. C. Sisler informs us the local fancy skaters are already scheduled to appear in Trenton, Napanee and Gananoque, as feature attractions, all of which speaks exceedingly high for the efforts of Belleville's outstanding winter Club. Besides doubles and quartettes, the Quinte Skating Club has several feature solo artists in Mike Ridley, who skated so splendidly with Miss Shirley Halsted here recently, Miss Judy Scott and Miss Ardel Smith are other outstanding individual soloists with the Quinte Skating Club.

The Trenton Sun scribe says the Air Force hockey team is far from satisfied with the attention afforded by Belleville fans. "Recently only 15 paid admissions to an Air Force game," he says. No doubt he is referring to the Flyers' "B" team, which never should have been permitted into the Hume Arena in the first place. The Flyer "Bees" might have made money for the Trenton rink at that, but the fact that only 15, (if these figures are true), paid admission to see the Flyer "Bees" play is no reflection upon Belleville fans, but we would think it is quite a let-down on the part of the Air Force personnel for ignoring their own hockey efforts. If the Trenton scribe wants to see just how Belleville fans re-act to the Air Force puck attractions let him take in one of the Peterboro-Flyer play-offs next week. It might be interesting to note that no less than four O.H.A. clubs operated in Belleville this winter, absolutely too many for a small city to adequately support.

There have been rather bad feelings crept into all Peterboro-Air Force games this season, and last night when the Petes gave the "Flyers" a sound 8-1 trouncing a real old-time ice battle ensued. When the boys tangled here last week the fans thought they were treated to an added attraction, but out in Peterboro last night the feud ensued with unadulterated bedlam with no quarter asked or received as the players really entered into the spirit of fisticuffs. Just what will happen in the group playoff remains to be seen and to miss a game would be nothing short of folly to red-blooded Canadian hockey fans. Neither team will forget the past and there will still remain those nursed grudges. The Petes have completed their group schedule with seven wins and one defeat, their only reverse being at the hands of the Air Force here on Jan. 18th, when the Flyers won 2-1. On the seasons play the Petes have had 26 goals scored against them, in comparison to 31 scored against the Flyers, which proves both squads have a strong defence. The group playoffs commence next week and we advise the fans to come early and enjoy the fun.

Do you remember when Canada retained the world amateur hockey championship ten years ago tonight when Toronto "Canadas" defeated a German team at Berlin 6-1. It was the final match of the Canadians' 30-game European tour. They were defeated 1-0 by Austria four days earlier in an exhibition match played in pouring rain.

Besides being a sporting recreation, archery is a hobby and a craft, Inspector Frank Gardner, of the Provincial Police here, explained to use last night during a practice shoot of the Belleville Archery Club at the Armouries. Since organizing and electing officers earlier this week several citizens have enquired as to the fundamentals of archery, with the result that membership tickets are being offered to interested persons. Archery is an ancient and honored craft and a splendid recreation in both summer and winter. When the weather permits, the Archery Club intends to erect targets at the Exhibition Park and further advance the game. Russ Smith or Bill Vaisil will gladly forward any information needed to interested persons.

Is Joe Louis slowing up? Last night Arturo Godoy, a practical unknown heavyweight from Chile, stayed 15 rounds with the champion and even carried the fight to the Brown Bomber, whose bombing failed to impress last night. With the exception of Tommy Farr, Godoy is the only challenger to stay 15 rounds with the champion, since he took over the big job of the heavyweight ranks. Like all contenders, however, 'Clinging-vine" Godoy does not seem to posess a stinging K.O. punch and until a man comes along who can hit like Dempsey of 1919, Louis will remain champ., despite the fact Louis failed to tag his man last night.

Keefer and Walker Score Seven of Ten Goals Obtained by Team

CROWDING VARSITY

(By The Canadian Press)

University of Toronto players will have their eyes on Bob Keefer and Howie Walker in tonight's International Intercollegiate Hockey League game against McGill University.

The game at Toronto will have important bearing on the outcome of this year's race for the college hockey title and Keefer and Walker can be the deciding factor in the match if the Blues don't watch them.

University of Toronto has set the pace so far this season in the league of which McGill always has been the champion. But the Redmen are keeping right up to Toronto and last night turned back Queen's University 10-4.

The victory meant undisputed possession of second place for McGill and left the team only a game away from the leaders. Both Keefer and Walker went on the rampage. Keefer scored all of McGill's three first-period goals and another in the second frame. Walker got three goals.

Enough to Win

The play of that pair alone was enough to win but Gordie Young got in a couple of goals and Queen's twice-defeated by the University of Toronto, couldn't do very much about it.

Walter Johnson, McGill netminder, backed up his team with an outstanding performance. He turned back attack after attack by the Tricolor though holes were found in his armor by Norval Williamson who counted twice and Mel Williamson and Bobby Neilson who beat him once each.

Queen's first goal by Neilson came in the second period after Keefer had slammed in three for McGill in the opener and young had added two more at the start of the second frame.

GOODIES DEFEAT ST. KITTS 7 TO 1

Tiremen Score 13 Consecutive Wins Without a Loss and Head for Title

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton furnished one of the chief features of play in last night's Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" puckstering by shellacking Port Colborne Sailors 11-1. Toronto Goodyears skated in with another by downing St. Catharines 7-1 for the league leaders 13th consecutive triumph.

Success of the Hamiltonians left Port Colborne in a second-place tie with St. Catharines each having 34 points compared to 48 for Toronto and 26 for Hamilton holders of fourth place.

Goals by McLeod, Tonn and Miocinovich after McKelvie had scored the ports lone marker gave Hamilton a 3-1 edge ending the first period. Miocinovich and Tonn added one apiece in the second session and Brunell two, Tonn and Miocinovich, Barlow and McLeod completed the Port Colborne route by scoring in the last frame.

O'Flaherty, Bowman and King gave Toronto a 3-0 margin in the first period at St. Catharines. Mocha got one back for the home club in the second before Sutcliffe and Drummond made the score 5-1. O'Flaherty completed the hat-trick with a brace of counters in the last session.

NEGRO SPRINTER BREAKS RECORD FOR 50-YD. DASH

Barney Ewell, Penn State Sophmore, Runs Distance in Five Seconds Flat

FENSKE WINS

Negro sprinter.. ;edf:ylht' gpo

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—(AP)— Three up on the once invincible Glenn Cunningham in their mile dueling, Chuck Fenske found his latest victory overshadowed today by a young negro sprinter's world record performance.

Fenske showed his heels to Cunningham last night for the third straight time, but it was Norwood (Barney) Ewell, a Penn State sophomore, who stole the show at the third annual Penn A.C. meet.

Ewell was clocked by three timers in an even five seconds as he flashed over the board track to win the 50-yard dash. The performance clipped a fifth of a second off the 26-year-old record of Joe Loomis of Chicago, whose mark Ewell equalled here a year ago. Eulace Peacock, former Temple University star, finished second.

Cunningham made a valiant bid for his first major victory of the season and pushed Fenske to a new "Pennac mile" record of 4:13.5, but the old Kansas Master couldn't overcome Fenske's homestretch kick.

Chicago Hawks Defeat Wings To Break Detroit's Win Streak And Put Team Close to Leafs

Rookies Carse and Chad Score All Three Goals for the Black Hawks

GOODMAN STARS

Goalie Brought Up From Minors Scores Third Shutout in Big Time

(By Robert Clarke Canadian Press Staff Writer).

The hockey hit of the week, so far as the National League is concerned, is the Freshman Hop as demonstrated by Chicago Black Hawks.

Fused with a sprinkling of veterans, the rookies learning their steps under professional Paul Thompson are doing a better than passing job in their attempts to have other teams in the N.H.L. dance to their tune.

From a team that started the season looking as if it was going nowhere in particular, the Chicago club gradually has forced its way into prominence with such rookies as Phil Hergesheimer, Doug Bentley, Paul Goodman, Johnny Chad and Bob Carse having much to do with the success.

Goodman, brought up just before the turn of the year to replace goalie Mike Karakas, continued his recent great play last night as the Hawks turned in a 3-0 victory over Detroit Red Wings in the only scheduled game of the night. It made shutout No. 3 this season for the Hawks, all of them turned in by the first-year netminder.

Rookies Get Markers

Chad got the first one, and the winner, near the middle mark of the second period on a play in which Bob Carse and Les Cunningham figured. Bill Carse made certain of the Hawk victory scoring in the first minute of the last period and adding another in the 15th minute.

Play in the last period was enlivened by a fist fight which produced major penalties for Jack Stewart, Mush March, George Allen and Eddie wares.

The victory consolidated Chicago's hold on fourth place, sending the club four points ahead of the Wings and only four points off the total of Toronto Maple Leafs. It was also the fourth game in succession, that the Hawks have gone unbeaten.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The experts may tell you differently, but Joe Louis was lucky to win last night . . . any time a guy who has been built up as a super-man, a one-punch killed and all that can't stop a second rater like Arturo Godoy in 15 heats, it is time to think about the next heavyweight champion of the world. . . .Look up this column on September 21, 1939. He is no more the same Joe Louis . . and anybody who tells you he is, is trying to kid somebody.

The Durham (N.C.) high cagers who can't lose for winning, now have rolled up 55 straight. They haven't bitten the dust since the opener in 1937. . . . Hymie Caplin, accused of swiping lightweight Lew Jenkins out of Frank Bachman's stable before the door was locked, has paid Bachman $250, and everything is lovely.

Today's guest star

Jay Ellsworth, Springfield, (Mo.) daily events: "Want a four-minute mile right quick? Just rig up a dummy of Josef Stalin, and let it circle the track ahead of Taisto Maki, like the automatic hare in the Greyhound races."

Billy Conn is getting no heavier rapidly, but Pittsburghers still think they can fatten him up enough for Louis. They say the Irish seldom take on much heft until they're 25, which is three years away for Sweet William . . . Prof. Artie McGovern, who'll condition the Dodgers, says if they're all as fat as Jimmy Ripple, he'll jern the hold-out brigade. . . . Old Primo Carnera is a co-star in a film called "the Four Scarlet roses", now being made in Rome.

Argument,
Some say he is the real McCoy,
While others call him "Golden Boy".

Godoy's Gloves Touched Canvas 3 Times in 14th

New York, Feb. 10—(AP)—There were no official knockdowns in the Joe Louis-Arturo Godoy heavyweight title bout last night—or were there?

Boxing rules state that when a man's gloves touch the canvas, he is technically "down".

Godoy's gloves touched the canvas three times in the 14th round as he waddled and crouched around the ring like a monkey in a zoo. But, since these three occasions came during a loud outburst of laughter at the burlesque, no one paid much attention to it. The knock-down counting referee at ringside did not stand up to start a count and the whole thing passed by with virtually no notice.

Still, the New York boxing rules state that when a man is "down" three times in one round, the referee can stop the fight.

It certainly would have started something if Referee Arthur Donovan, who on one occasion even brushed off Godoy's gloves because they were in touch with the canvas, had halted the fight then.

Pro Puck Personalities

BRYAN HEXTALL
Rangers.

Bryan Hextall

Frequently Lester Patrick's system of building his Ranger teams that stress all - round strength is criticized as submerging individual ability, and an excellent example of this is Bryan Hextall, who plays right wing on a line with Dutch Hiller and Phil Watson. Last season, his second complete one in the N.H.L., Hextall was the highest scoring right wing in the league and bids fair to repeat the stunt this winter, and yet outside of the scoring summaries his name is rarely mentioned. Two seasons ago, he got 17 goals, last year he sank 20, and this season has seen that figure upped a few more. Scoring goals has been a habit with this young man (he'll be 27 this July) for some time. His pro career began near the end of the 1933-34 season with Vancouver Lions in the Northwestern League, and two seasons later he topped the league in goals scored with 27. Rangers purchased him from the Lions and farmed him to Philadelphia Ramblers, where he promptly proceeded to again top the goal-getters, this time of the Int.-Am. League, of course; with 29 goals. Before starting to manufacture goals in pro company, Hextall played amateur with Winnipeg Monarchs and Portage La Prairie. Born at Grenfell, Sask. Like all Ranger right wings, he shoots from the left side.

DOUG YOUNG
Canadiens

Doug Young

Last in alphabetical listings of National league players, but hardly that by any other rating is Doug Young, reliable defenceman with Montreal's staggering Canadiens. Doug had spent eight seasons in the uniform of Detroit Red Wings until just before the start of the present season when Jack Adams sold him to his minor league farm team as part of the Wings' "rejuvenation" plan. The burly blue liner thought he deserved better treatment than that, refused to play in the Int.-American league, was declared a free agent and signed with Canadiens. During his career Young has been one of the best all-round defencemen, steady on the defensive, a good rusher, and a willing team worker. During his stay with the Wings he captained the two great Stanley cup teams of 1935-36 and '36-'37. Before entering the N.H.L. he served four years of minor league apprenticeship, first with Kitchener Millionaires, then with Marquette, and the last two seasons at Cleveland. Draws comparatively few penalties for a defence player—59 minutes in his second Detroit season being the most he has served in a season. Complete mathematical totals until the beginning of this winter's battling stood at 32 goals, 36 assists for 68 points, and 278 minutes served in penalties. Born at Gleichen, Alberta, 31 years ago.

TOMORROW: Bryan Hextall, Rangers.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE OLD MAID"

"The Old Maid," co-starring Bette Davis and Miriam Hopkins, will have its first local showing at the Capitol next. Filmed by Warner Bros., it has been hailed by preview audiences as the outstanding dramatic event of the year—a rare combination of brilliant talents in the fields of acting, writing and directing.

One feminine star — especially if she be that triple Academy winner, Bette Davis—might be considered sufficient for a photoplay, no matter how great. But in "The Old Maid" there are two. Besides Bette Davis there is the lovely and highly capable Miriam Hopkins, who has starred in many a topnotch production on her own account. The girls have equally important parts. This is the first time, since they reached stardom, that either has ever shared acting honors or top billing honors with another player of her own sex.

"The Old Maid", was written first as a novel by Edith Wharton, often called the "aristocrat of American writers." Then, four years ago. Zoe Akins, the brilliant dramatist, transformed the book into a stage play which not only had a long run in New York but won the Pulitzer Prize for that year, the highest award that can be bestowed upon a dramatic production.

With Miss Davis and Miss Hopkins in the picturization of "The Old Maid" are such players as George Brent, Jane Bryan, Donald Crisp, Louise Fazenda, James Stephenson, Jerome Cowan, William Lundigan, Cecilia Loftus, Janet Shaw, DeWolf Hopper and Rand Brooks. The director was Edmund Goulding, whose latest previous triumph was Bette Davis's sensational "Dark Victory."

The story deals with two cousins, Charlotte and Delia Lovell, who live in the same old house in aristocratic Philadelphia in the period between 1861, when the Civil War broke out, and the 1880's. Despite the luxury and wealth with which they are surrounded, they hate and envy each other for twenty-odd years. Then the daughter of "the sour old maid" — this young girl played brilliantly by Jane Bryan—is able to bring mutual understanding to them as their gray hairs and lined faces tell they have entered middle age.

The picture is a tense, gripping drama, with a charmingly picturesque period background. Houses, furniture, equipages, costumes, all were revived with authenticity and beauty, it is declared.

Little need be said of the acting ability of either Bette Davis or Miriam Hopkins. Each has a top place among the feminine players of the screen. And each, previewers agree, in "The Old Maid" surpasses anything she has previously done.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Little Accident" and

"Man From Montreal"

Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Edgar Kennedy, Florence Rice and Richard Carlson in the laugh-crammed hit "Little Accident" and Richard Arlen and Andy Devine in the new adventure hit of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, "The Man from Montreal" are now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, and for solid entertainment for the whole family's enjoyment it is a program heartily recommended to all.

"Miracle on Main Street"

Every once in a while a picture comes along which tells in simple terms the moving drama of a love powerful enough to change the world for a man and a woman disillusioned by the sordidness of their unhappy pasts....a picture which brings to the screen a message of happiness and hope.

Drama founded upon life itself, "Miracle on Main Street" is a powerful poignant story, filled with gripping realism and universal entertainment. A heart-warming symphony of human emotion—a magnificent woman's picture, crammed with romance and drama you will rave about for months. A select program of short subjects will precede the presentation of "Miracle on Main Street" each performance.

AT THE BELLE

"Hunchback of Notre Dame"

From the magic haunts of Hollywood, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" now on the Belle Theatre screen emerges upon the theatregoing world with a challenge to the bigness of all films that have gone before. (

A year in preparation, three full months in the filming, "The Hunchback" taxed the resources of the motion picture industry in its quest for principals, extras, make-up men, wardrobe experts, camera and sound technicians, and other specialty workers who were required for the achievement.

Played against a vast canvas of spectacular settings colored with the rich pageantry of medieval Paris human passions of the great Victor Hugo's novel are depicted in a mounting series of crisis.

Many of the individual sequences are acclaimed as especially noteworthy; the trial of poet Gringoire before the beggars in the sinister and eerie Court of Miracles; the trial of the gypsy girl, Esmeralda, before the stern and unfeeling judges; Quasimodo's frenzied ride on the great bells in the cathedral tower; the stirring attack on Notre Dame by the mob of beggars; the public flogging of the luckless hunchback; "Quasimodo's startling rescue of the gypsy girl from the hangman; and his terrible revenge upon the cause of her martyrdom Count Frollo.

These scenes, filmed in the huge reproductions of the Notre Dame cathedral of the Sainte Chapelle the Palais de Justice and the other spacious settings created for the picture, mark "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" as a completely powerful interpretation of the great French classic.

As the millions of readers of the novel will recall, the plot concerns events during the struggle between the populace and the nobles in the reign of King Louis XI, with the deformed and pitiable Quasimodo, the deaf bell-ringer of Notre Dame, as the story's chief protagonist. When the gypsy girl has a romantic interlude with a soldier, at a festival, the jealous King's High Justice Frollo, mortally stabs the man, and has the girl arrested for the murder and condemned to death. As she is about to be hanged in front of the cathedral, Quasimodo, who has fallen in love with her snatches her from the noose and takes her into the cathedral, where she is safe under the right sanctuary.

Holding off the clamoring mobs who are besieging the cathedral, Quasimodo also has to grapple with Frollo who tries to seize the girl. This climactic action is rated about the most powerful sequence the screen has ever presented.

Donald Duck, Returns

A funny Walt Disney Donald Duck cartoon "Officer Duck", and the popular Paramount British newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

BROTHERS FATED TO BE SEPARATED

Ridgway, Pa., Feb. 10 (AP) — Addison Shadd of St. Marys, Pa., attempted for many years to locate his two brothers but not until he disappeared were they found. The Shadd children became separated 50 years ago. Addison has been missing since purchasing a ticket last November to return home from a visit in Hancock, N.Y. Relatives report they haven't found a trace of him but their search disclosed one brother, James, living in Windsor, N.Y., and another, Frank, at Binghampton, N.Y.

They Come Dumber

By E. P. O'BRYAN

Gracie knew as much about horses and race tracks as an Eskimo knows about the price of seats at a fight in Madison Square Garden. In fact she asks in the taxi on the way to the race track how the horses know which way to run and do they have to be told when to start.

Gracie was down to San Diego to see the sights and Jake kind of liked her looks when he saw her in the hotel lobby. Of course he didn't know she was so dumb or maybe he wouldn't have asked her to go to the races with him. Jake got a program and showed Gracie how each horse was rated but she didn't get any of it.

"Look," she says, "you mean to tell me Flytrap's the name of a horse—that one down at the end of the list?"

"Sure," Jake says. "Why not? I've heard of worse names than that."

"But why do they have him down at the end of the list? You said he was twenty-to-one. What does that mean?"

"Simply this," Jake says. "He's so good they won't put him up at the head of the list. They start him 'way down at the end so's all the other horses will have a chance."

"How unfair!" Gracie says. I don't call that sportsmanship."

"Nor me, either," Big-Mouth says. "If I was doing it I would give him a half hour's start, and then maybe he'd have a chance."

When Big-Mouth went down to lay a little bet on Tippytoes in the second race, Gracie asked to go along. When they came back Gracie was full of eagerness. "It looks terribly easy," she says. "Is that all you do, pay in your money like that and get some back?"

"If you only got some of it back," Jake sighed, "it wouldn't be so bad. The h—l of it is, most of the time you don't get any back."

"How much would you win—if you do win?" Gracie asks.

"But you only bet ten, didn't you?"

"Uh-huh. He'll pay four to one."

Gracie was bubbling over with enthusiasm. She had fifty dollars in her purse, she said, that she could afford to bet.

"You keep it in your purse," Jake says. "Lay off these horses. For anybody that don't know no more about a horses than you do, you better not even open that purse. Somebody might sell you the track. I know some slickers around here that would take fifty for the track and be glad to sell it."

Gracie said, "Well, I wouldn't want their old track anyway. I would want a track that was straight—not one that just goes round and round."

"Well, this one's anything but straight," Jack says. "I ought to know if anybody does. I've got slickered on it more times than you've got fingers and toes."

By the time the horses were going to the post for the last race, Jake and Big-Mouth had lost ninety-six bucks between them, including all the profits from the second race. "Here," Jake says to Gracie, "go down and bet this sawbuck on anything, and don't tell me which one. Don't stand there looking foolish. Go make a bet on some horse—any horses. Just give it to the man at the window and tell him which horses you like."

"I don't want to know," Jake warns her. "I want to be surprised."

The last race finally got under way, and which nag do you suppose gallops home two lengths to the good? Flytrap.

"Now that just goes to show you what a horse picker I am," Jake says. "Last week—" but just then Gracie lets out a scream and looks like she wants to go somewhere, but don't know where. She didn't say anything. She ust handed Jake the little green ticket. It was a $60 mutuel on Flytrap, the winner!

"Oh, Jake." Gracie finally manages to say. "That's the one! I bet your ten and my fifty on him. If you hadn't told me he was such a good horse and all—"

But just then Jake's eyes popped out of his head and a second later he passed out completely. I saw then what he had seen. The price had just gone up on the automatic announcer—$86.40.

Gracie doesn't yet know why the man paid her two thousand, five hundred and ninety-two dollars, though if Jake has tried once to explain he's tried a thousand times.

Produce Unchanged

Toronto, Feb. 10. Unchanged prices marked dealings on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Slightly improved demand was reported for eggs, while butter maintained a quiet pace.

The egg market held a steady tone which has been in evidence throughout most of this week. The fair volume of receipts that met all requirements cleared well as trading picked up. Prices in both sections closed yesterday unchanged.

Better inquiry appeared for butter and the odd sale was still going to outside points, but, in spite of this, trading on the market here continued to lean to the quiet side. Ontario creamery solids sold at the previous day's prices.

Bacon Board Analyses Exporting Cost

In the story of the exporting of Canadian bacon there has been one chapter omitted. It has not been left out intentionally but nevertheless there has been very little said about the cost of exporting. The producer has never had definite information placed before him that would enable him to relate the price paid for bacon in England to the price of hogs in Canada.

There are many expenses involved in the exporting of bacon that are of a standard nature such as buying, killing, cutting, curing, packaging, freight rates, and etc.

The bacon board have made a very complete analysis of the cost of exporting and it is the object of the writer to deal with the various phases of exporting and pass on the information.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of February 9 are as follows:

of the national movement."

Camp Conditions Appalling

"There have, indeed, been cases of actual torture," he declared. "Conditions in concentration camps are appalling. Religion is systematically persecuted."

He said Great Britain and France were fighting to end such conditions.

Of the fighting forces, Sir Kingsley said: "We need not doubt the capacity of our fighting services—powerful and intrepid forces which are growing stronger every day."

He said British fliers had "shot down many more enemy aircraft than we have lost.

Finest Airmen in R.A.F.

"The Air Force contains in its ranks the finest airmen in the world, Sir Kingsley went on. "As an example of the difficulty of making men talk of their feats, after a fierce engagement the other day a pilot wrote simply in his log —'Fire and bombing practice, Heligoland'.

"As to results in actual combat, it is not surprising—at any rate to us—that that part of our Air Force which has been engaged in pitched battles with the enemy has shot down many more enemy aircraft than they have lost."

The toll the airmen took, he added, was often heavier than official reports could reveal, since many enemy machines damaged in fights were later found not to have reached Germany.

The first half of January, Sir Kingsley said, provided the most severe flying weather ever known, but there was no halt in the vital work of the coastal command and training went on practically without interruption.

British Machines Superior

The Air Secretary said that the war had demonstrated the superiority of many British machines, adding that the nation could not rest on what it had achieved, but must go on every day perfecting present types and introducing others with even higher speed, longer range and better armament.

"The war is being fought in the design departments and on the drawing board as well as in factories and in the air," he added.

During the year, Sir Kingsley said, Great Britain had doubled the numerical output of aircraft and many new factories will shortly be coming into production. Furthermore, there are many extensions of present factories and subcontracting is again to be very considerably extended. All this, he added, would require much more labor.

All Britons Now in Struggle

In conclusion, Sir Kingsley declared that all Britons were now in the struggle and must in every direction intensify their efforts.

"Throughout our history our resolution and determination have been strengthened by the difficulties we had to encounter. It will be the same in this great struggle. Let us, therefore, go forward with determintaion, endurance and confidence until victory is won."

FINNISH LINES REMAIN INTACT

Wave after wave of Soviet infantrymen pushed against the Finns in the Summa sector, military observers said, in a desperate effort to break the thus far impregnable Mannerheim fortifications.

Despite losses which the Finns placed in the thousands, the Russians were attempting to batter down resistance by sheer weight of numbers.

(The Russian communique said repeated Finnish attempts to "recover lost positions in the Karelian Isthmus were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy. Soviet airplanes successfully bombed military objectives.")

Artillery Fire Reported

Artillery fire was reported thruout the Isthmus front. Russian wounded were left on the field, Finnish advices from the front said, due to an apparent breakdown in the Soviet transportation system that made difficult the removal of casualties to hospitals.

In the far north, the Russians were reported hurled back in an attempt to take Hoyhenjaervi south of the Petsamo district, and Finnish patrols broke through enemy lines at Salmijaervi, nickel mining district and where the International Nickel Company of Canada has rich properties.

Considerable controversy has been heard in Belleville this winter regarding the relative strength of the Belleville juniors in comparison to that of the Air Force and the Redmen. Today Coach Toots Holway announced that the Flyers had agreed to meet the local juniors in an exhibition game to be played at the Hume Arena on Monday night. Originally this gamt was scheduled as the final game of the district Intermediate O.H.A. group between the Air Force and the Belleville Redmen.

However, the local junior team is to be bolstered slightly as "Speedy" St. Louis agreed to play part of the game and coach the Quintes as playing-coach versus the Air Force, Holway remaining at the helm of the Flyers. Both the Belleville juniors and the Flyers will be at full strength and the seasons most interesting game is assured, as the local kids are anxious to make an impression before they launch upon the junior O.H.A. playdowns. The Quintes have not been defeated in seven games played this season.

The juniors have a goodly following of patrons, who contend the local kids can hold their own with either the Flyers or the Redmen and Monday night's game is being taken most seriously by the fons from both camps. One of the scrappiest games of the season is assured in this grudge game.

Announcement at London

Bristol, England, Feb. 10 (CP-Cable)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air, today announced that a further contract worth 6,000,000 pounds ($26,700,000) had been placed in Canada "for production of aircraft of the latest type."

The minister said he was glad to say that not only was the government employing on a considerable scale Canadian aircraft firms in the production of different types of aircraft for the Royal Air Force, but the group organization, which had been established as a result of the 1938 mission to Canada, had now been widely extended and entrusted with this further order.

The six firms that make up Canadian Associated Aircraft, with headquarters in Montreal, are Ottawa Car and Aircraft Limited, Canadian Car and Foundry Company of Fort William, Fleet Aircraft of Fort Erie, Ont., National Steel Car Company of Toronto, De Havilland Company of Toronto and Fairchild Company of Montreal.

Type of Aircraft

The type of aircraft to be manufactured in this new order is believed to be the powerful Hampden bomber and possibly later the companies will produce the four-motored Sterling bomber, said to be the most modern in the world.

Manufacturing plants are being established at St. Hubert Airport, near Montreal, and at Malton Airport, near Toronto, to handle the order the British government places with the company. The six companies in the aircraft manufacturing pool will manufacture various parts and the planes will be assembled in the Montreal and Toronto plants.

CRITICISM BASED ON 'HALF TRUTHS'

Although the company had been criticized as "inefficient" in charges before public investigations into the contract, he said, it has "been producing parts for several weeks past and will begin delivery of the completed guns in April, 1940—at least six months ahead of the time specified in the contract."

Production Speeded Up

Declaring the magazines have already been tested and found satisfactory, Mr. Mackenzie said the company "has speeded up the rate of production so that not 1,000 guns, as required by the contract, but 2,000 guns, will be produced in the first 12-month period."

Puthermore, the company had received "within the past few weeks" orders from the British war office for 2,500 spare barrels. These would be produced without interfering with the production schedule of completed guns.

Two Inquiries Made

Two inquiries has been made into the Bren gun contract, the first by a Royal Commission which found there was no evidence of corruption on the part of the Defence Minister or any member of his department; and the second by the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons which failed to make a report.

Opposition members in the committee objected to reporting, he said, on the grounds the committee did not have sufficient evidence. The Royal Commission reported in its findings, however, "that all documents had been produced and that all the facts had been brought out before the commission."

Mr. Mackenzie said: "Only one conclusion is possible" in regard to the failure of the House Committee to report: "That the opposition members did not wish to make a report, unless they could make a report condemning the government. After nine months of inquiry they had not succeeded in finding any evidence to justify such a report."

Question of Preparedness

Replying to Conservative charges of "lack of preparedness" at the outbreak of the war, Mr. Mackenzie compared the state of defence last September with conditions prevailing in 1935 at conclusion of the Bennett administration which had faced several crises, including the Manchurian and Ethiopian wars, which brought the world "to the very brink of war."

In 1935 the air force had "no modern service planes, no bombs and no service ammunition. The navy had only two modern vessels. The magazines and shore equipment of the navy were in a very dilapidated state. The militia was completely lacking in modern weapons and mechanical equipment. Our fortification works were not only inadequate but the guns that we had were almost unserviceable."

Attention to Air Force

The newly-formed Liberal government turned its first attention in regard to defence to the air force. Previously, all planes required had been purchased in Great Britain but the entire capacity of the British aircraft industry at that time was required for the Royal Air Force.

Purchase of planes in the United States was undesirable because the neutrality policy of that country might "cut off this source of supply when most needed, in time of war."

The Government, despite the lack of plants, trained engineers and skilled workmen, decided to sponsor an aircraft industry in Canada, dismissing allegations of political favoritism in connection with the building up of the industry as "sheer nonsense."

Expensive Delays

Expensive delays were encountered when it was found the first plans and specifications sent out by the British Government proved unsuitable and, later, when modifications were made in the design of the accepted plane.

"The cost of this development program has undoubtedly been great. If we were simply to divide that cost by the number of aircraft produced, the cost per plane would indeed be excessive. But we have much more to show for our expenditure than a relatively small number of aircraft. We have created an industry. We have 5,000 skilled aircraft workers in Canada.

"We brought the British Air Ministry to Canada with an educational order of $10,000,000. Today, Canada is the Empire's aviation centre."

When war broke out, the Former Defence Minister said, Canada had "approximately 300 aircraft and another 100 under construction and well on the way toward completion." A majority of these had since been completed.

Highest Defence Efficiency

"With the knowledge we have of the presence in the Atlantic of raiding enemy vessels, who can doubt that if Canada had been defenceless the enemy would have attacked?" he asked. "The highest acme of defence efficiency is that the enemy shall be deterred from attacking at all.'

Canada had the benefit of that efficiency.

Referring to charges the army was improperly clad during the early months of the war, Mr. Mackenzie said the Defence Department had found it impossible to provide for clothing and boots before 1939 because of expenditures on aircraft, naval vessels, guns, ammunition and fortification works which had received priority. In addition, Canada had the manufacturing capacity to turn out boots and clothing on short notice.

LABOR MINISTER, NORMAN McLARTY

"This is Mr. King, the man who established the Department of Labor, the man who has done more than any other Canadian on behalf of labor." he submitted. "This is the man he charged with betrayal. When Mr. King betrays labor, it will be when the breath has passed from his body.

Dr. Manion Criticized

"If Dr. Manion can persuade the people of this country that Mr. King has now or ever betrayed labor, he deserves to head the brain trust of which he talks."

Mr. McLarty had particular criticism for Dr. Manion's declaration that he will form a National Government of the "best brains" in the Dominion if the Conservatives are given office March 26.

"We in the administration have selected the ablest brains we could find, and let me say that in any appointments made the question was never raised as to what a man's politics were. There was not one single political appointment on the various war boards."

He defended the Prime Minister's action in calling for an immediate dissolution and an election at the recent brief session of parliament.

The convention chose George Wood, Liberal member in the parliament just dissolved, to contest the riding against Sylvanus Apps, National Hockey League star, who was named Conservative candidate last Spring.

WOULD AMEND CRIMINAL CODE

Col. Drew contended that the resolutions did not meet his objection in that the intent of them was not clear and that it was not known what the Federal Parliament would do with them.

Chief argument by Col. Drew against the abolition of the grand jury has been that with special power vested in the attorney-general or his officials to take a man to an assize court without preliminary hearing by a magistrate, there would be no intervening action between accusation and trial.

Indictment Hearings

Mr. Conant said the resolutions would result in providing for indictment hearings before a county or district judge before an accused person could be placed on trial.

Second reading debate on the bill was adjourned suddenly yesterday as House tempers became too nettled to permit much progress to be made. Arthur Roebuck, (Ind. Lib. Toronto - Bellwoods) said he couldn't see why debate should be adjourned because of the bad temper of the members.

Drew Opposes Hasty Decision

His chief argument was not against abolition of grand juries, but against hasty decision on the bill, said Col. Drew. He opposed doing away "with the minimum protection an accused person should have in criminal cases."

There was danger in giving to the attorney-general discretion as to whom might be accused and brought to trial, placing the onus on Mr. Conant for the recent arrest of W. B. Coatts, Toronto insurance man, who was honorably discharged when the charges of conspiracy were withdrawn.

"We must have no political trials," he said. "We cannot place men's freedom in the hands of the elected executive."

Mr. Conant also tabled a letter from the Upper Canada Law Society denying that it had concurred in recommendations in the Barlow report on Justice Administration, for the abolition of grand juries.

Minimum Protection for Accused Person

His argument was not for the retention of grand juries, but against a hasty decision on the Bill said Col. Drew. He was opposed to doing away with "the minimum protection an accused person should have in criminal cases." He asked why the Law Society letter had not been tabled with the Barlow report. All the facts had not been given.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, protested that Col. Drew was not discussing the bill. In any case Coatts and those charged with him had been arrested on ordinary magistrate's warrants.

John Glass (Lib. Toronto - St. Andrews) protested the charges referred to by Col. Drew were still before the courts and could not be discussed in the legislature. Attorney-General Conant agreed and the Speaker upheld the objection. The Conservative Leader then attempted to outline what he called "strange procedure" before the charges were laid. "That is all part of the same matter," said Mr. Conant.

Minor Uproar Begins

"I don't know what the Attorney-General has to hide," snapped back Col. Drew. "He has raised objections which are specious excuses because of his obvious failure to do his duty."

Liberal members objected to this charge and a minor uproar started.

"The facts which have been shown have demonstrated quite clearly that this House should not extend to him (Mr. Conant) any discretion in the exercise of his duty," persisted Col. Drew. "He has done nothing to justify such discretion being given him."

The Legislature was showing a tendency towards laws as severe in their application as those of Nazi Germany, said Col. Drew. The Attorney-General asked for powers to be exercised in his own discretion and that was all Nazi leaders sought.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said that Col. Drew was reflecting on the laws in other provinces, after which the proposed statute was modelled, though it didn't go as far.

T. B. Testing of All Milch Cows In Hastings May be Done This Year

Hope that the long-delayed testing of all milch cows in Hastings County for tuberculosis, would take place in the early summer, was expressed today by Dr. O. J. Reed, veterinary inspector for this district.

County testing is subject to the approval of 66 2-3 per cent of breeders embodied in a petition presented to the Department of Agriculture, Dr. Reed said. The Hastings County petition was signed by over eighty per cent of farmers, and was gazetted in 1938. Since that time however, nothing of a serious nature has been attempted in this county to conduct the test.

Prince Edward County has been a restricted area for a number of years, Dr. Reed said, the first test in that locality occurring in 1927. Since that time, however, tests have been applied for and received. Northumberland County is now undergoing the test, and will, in all likelihood, become a restricted area shortly.

The entire area between the Quebec border and the Rideau Canal has been tested, and government officers are now working from the western part of the province in an easterly direction, he added.

Present conditions while not actually preventing sales between Hastings and Prince Edward County breeders, call for cattle involved in selling or trading transactions between breeders of the two counties, to be tested by a government veterinary before delivery can be made, that is providing the cattle originate in Hastings County. Prince Edward County cattle can be admitted here without the formality of a test.

mentioned referred to signs of awakening consciousness. This might be shown, for instance, in movement of the limbs.

Exact meaning of the figures given for temperature, pulse, respiration and blood pressure might vary with the individual. Temperature of 101 compared with a normal of 98 to 99. Pulse of 80 compared with a normal of 70 to 80. Respiration at 30 was up. Blood pressure at 90 was on the low side.

All Quiet at Hospital

While the stricken Governor-General maintained his progress, all was quiet about the nine-storey Neurological Institute whose fifth floor held the anxious interest of all Canadians. Downstairs there was the ordinary coming and going of doctors and nurses and hospital staff.

Only messenger boys bringing cablegrams, telegrams and letters of inquiry and sympathy from all over the world indicated the presence of the distinguished patient.

Lady Tweedsmuir spent the night on the same floor as her husband but this morning she left the Institute accompanied by her son, Hon. Alastair.

Montreal, Feb. 10 (CP). — Lord Tweedsmuir showed a slight improvement during the night, it was announced at eight a.m. today following the operation performed upon him in the Neurological Institute last night.

Word of continuation of progress by the still critically-ill Governor-General, who suffered concussion when he hit his head in a fall at Government House in Ottawa last Tuesday, was given out from the special train which brought the patient to Montreal yesterday.

It was stated that a signed bulletin from his Excellency's doctors would be issued later.

Skilled neuro-surgeons watched over Lord Tweedsmuir today as Canadians the length and breadth of the dominion awaited official word on the condition of their governor-general.

Subjected to two operations and a 116-mile train journey yesterday, his Excellency, suffering from a concussion, was, according to latest official reports, "slightly but definitely improved." His condition, however, still remained critical.

At the capital yesterday morning he underwent an emergency trepanning operation to relieve intracranial pressure that followed a concussion received Tuesday when he suffered a fainting spell in Government House.

Statement Issued

Again last night, shortly after his arrival, the 64-year-old Governor General underwent an operation, described in an official bulletin as a "sub-temporal decompressive operation." The "slight but definite improvement" was noted by his physicians after the second operation.

The official bulletin, announced at 11.05 p.m. by Sir Shuldam Redfern, Lord Tweedsmuir's personal secretary, said:

"His Excellency had a sub-temporal decompressive operation this evening at the Montreal Neurological Institute. The operation was performed by Doctors Wilder Penfield and William Cone. There has resulted a slight but definite improvement but his condition must be considered critical."

Operation Takes Three Hours

For three hours Lord Tweedsmuir was in the operating room of the Institute recognized as one of the finest on the continent.

The three-car special train that brought His Excellency here pulled up outside Bonaventure Station shortly after 5.20 o'clock last night and less than 30 minutes later, wrapped in blankets to guard against near zero temperature, the patient had been carried to his fifth floor room. The train left for Ottawa at 3.03 p.m.

Special accommodation for Lady Tweedsmuir who, with Their Excellencies' son the Hon. Alastair Buchan and a number of attendants, accompanied Lord Tweedsmuir from Ottawa, was arranged at the Institute. Rooms also were set aside for Drs. Penfield and Cone who will remain on call day and night.

RUSSIAN-TURKISH FRONTIER BEING

Their discharge from the war and navy ministries, following Turkish confiscation Thursday of German-owned Krupp shipyards, was ascribed to exposure of a Nazi plot for sabotage and terrorism in the Near East.

A Soviet warning to mariners that minefields have been laid off Russia's Black Sea ports was repeated by Consular authorities with notice that it is now obligatory to take on Russian pilots inside Russian waters.

Turkish military authorities have said any alleged attack on Russia's oil fields, among the most productive in the world, would be accompanied by combined fleet action, especially against the big oil port of Batum.

CHAPTER 23

HELP FROM THE SKIES

Several hundred yards from the road, Cameron suddenly stopped and listened.

"What is it?" Claire whispered, alarm showing in her face.

"It sounds like a small stream," he said with mock fright. "Let's find it and have breakfast."

They followed the sound and soon came to a beautiful little glade, which made an ideal picnic site. Cameron leaned down and scooped up a handful of the clear, sparkling water, tasted it and pronounced it good.

"You know in the excitement last night," he said, "I forgot to fill this army canteen and I've been dying for a drink for hours."

"You have that little bottle of cognac Frau Weber gave you."

"That's just for emergencies; it's not to drink to moisten our throats."

Bill filled his canteen and offered Claire the first drink. The icy cold water tasted good, and she didn't realize that she, too, had been thirsty for a long time.

"Let's see what we have in the way of lunch," she suggested. In the paper bag Frau Weber had given her were a dozen slices of dark bread and several cakes of chocolate.

"Look out for splinters," Cameron joked as Claire bit into a piece of bread. "It's made from finely ground up wood pulp, you know."

The girl nodded. Lili had told her of some of the substitutes Germany had been using for months before the war.

"It's at least filling," Claire said, "although I won't guarantee its nourishing qualities. I don't see how the people exist on this sort of thing. No wonder Frau Weber and Lili are as thin as rails."

"It can't go on for very long," Cameron agreed. "Unless they get food supplies from some place, the whole nation is going to collapse physically. They ruined Poland, and what the Germans didn't destroy the Poles did."

"How about Russia?" Claire asked.

"They have none too much food themselves. Thousands of people in Russia almost starve to death every year, through crop failure and poor management. Properly organized, they should raise enough wheat for all Europe, but they've never had enough for themselves."

After they had breakfasted meagerly to conserve their supplies, they retraced their steps to the path and Clair soon led Bill into the clearing where Rene had set his plane down in the dark.

"He must be a wizard to get in and out of a place like this in the dark," Cameron exclaimed.

"We did hit pretty hard," Claire confessed. But there was a flash of light just before we landed."

"I hope if he comes again, it will be by daylight, even if the risk is greater. It would be awful for him to crack up here—then we all would be in the soup." He fished about in the pockets of his German uniform for a cigarette, but failing to find any picked up a twig from the ground and put it in his mouth.

Suddenly it dawned on him what Claire had said.

"You said you saw a flash of light before you landed?" he demanded.

She nodded. "Yes, but I didn't see any light after I left the plane."

"Well, Rene may have some friends around here after all. The light might have been a landing signal."

With little hope that Rene Martin would come flying in in broad daylight, the two of them explored the edges of the clearing and finally came to a small hut, well concealed in a heavy clump of underbrush.

After making sure it was unoccupied, Cameron finally forced the door open and stepped inside. It was one small room, and showed signs of having been occupied recently.

There was a small oil stove, and rumaging around on a shelf he found a partially filled tin of imitation coffee.

"It's only ersatz," he said, "but when we heat some water, it may not taste bad. At least it will be warm and my system is crying for something hot after our night in the open."

Taking a pan, he went off toward the creek and returned a short time later with it filled to the brim. Meanwhile Claire solved the intricacies of the oil stove. It was lighted and a can of soup she had found was heating in another pan.

Using their reserve supply of bread sparingly, they made a fairly good meal, and both felt much refreshed afterward. After cleaning up, Cameron insisted that Claire lie down and rest while he stood guard outside.

The girl fell into a stuporlike coma almost as soon as she dropped on the built-in bunk. Her watch pointed to four o'clock when she awakened, completely rested. She started up guiltily, and after heating the water again and preparing another meal of hot soup and imitation coffee, she stepped outside.

She had a sudden fright when she didn't immediately see Bill but when she called softly, he appeared almost at once from a clump of bushes nearby.

"There have been dozens of planes flying over during the day," he told her. "I kept hoping every minute that one might drop down here and prove to be Rene's, and then I realized how silly that was. If he comes, he'll come alone."

Claire stood watch outside while he ate, and then made him lie down on the bunk she had so recently vacated. Despite his protests that he wasn't tired, he was asleep in less than a minute, and he didn't even stir when she leaned down and touched his lips lightly with her own.

The girl, careful not to expose herself to any one who might stray into the clearing, sat beside a tree and gazed up into the sky. Help, if it came, must come from there.

As she watched, she mused over her situation. Just a few short days ago, she had been aboard the St. Croix, expecting to sail for home and the safety of neutral waters. Now, less than two weeks later, she and Bill were hiding in a clump of trees no more than 30 miles from Berlin, both of them fugitives who must surely face a firing squad if they were caught, branded as spies of Adolf Hitler's enemies.

Happiness lay before them—if they could again reach France — and safety. When they sailed for America, instead of occupying widely separated cabins, they would sail as Mr. and Mrs. William A. Cameron.

It was something Claire felt was well worth all she had been thru', and she breathed frequent and fervent prayers that some guardian angel would guide Rene safely through the perils of a flight over enemy country and to the tiny clearing where they waited.

Dusk came almost before she realized it, and with approaching darkness her hopes arose. She saw a lone plane, poised high in the heavens, its wings gleaming like gold in the fading rays of the setting sun, and she had a sudden feeling that it was Rene. It must be!

She leaped to her feet, ran to the hut and shook Cameron. He awakened gasping, his arms flailing, and she had to dodge to avoid being struck.

"What—what is it?" he demanded, as he finally realized it was Claire who had aroused him from the first sound sleep he had had in several days.

"I—I think it's Rene!" she cried. "I saw a plane high in the West, and I had a feeling . . ."

"Let's hope it is," he said, rubbing his eyes. "But the air has been full of planes all day. It's probably just another one heading for home."

Nevertheless, he went with her outside, and followed her arm as she pointed out the plane, now much lower, and sweeping in a wide circle. As they watched it, it disappeared from sight over the tops of the trees and Cameron uttered an expression of disgust. Whether it was exasperation at having been awakened prematurely, or disappointment Claire didn't know, but as he turned away, she continued to search the darkekning sky with her eyes.

Suddenly she shouted.

"There it is, Bill! There it is!"

She pointed to the plane, now approaching from the east, and losing altitude so rapidly that it seemed to fairly skim the tops of the trees as it swept over the clearing. She waved frantically, and then the plane again vanished over the trees, but a minute later it came back, dropping down with the suddenness of a bird shot on the wing. Claire and Cameron were racing across the field toward it as it skipped and bumped along the ground and finally came to a stop in a cloud of dust.

By the time they were twenty yards away, the ship had turned, heading in the opposite direction. Now the motor was idling.

Before they reached it, they saw the dark figure of a man climb over the edge of the cockpit, toss something back into the plane, and then run across the field in the direction they had come.

They were panting when they came to the side of the plane, and in the dimness they could scarcely recognize the flyer who was grinning down at them, his goggles pushed up onto his helmet.

"Rene!" Claires screamed. "You've come!"

"Get in—hurry!" he commanded. "We haven't a minute to lose!"

CHAPTER 24

CATERPILLAR CLUB MEMBER

Rene Martin, again in his Nazi flying uniform, tossed down two parachutes to Claire and Bill, and while they helped each other adjust the straps, snatched the opportunity for a cigarette.

Soon the girl was climbing into the rear cockpit, Cameron helping her, and then he crawled up and took the second seat beside her. During this time Rene was keeping up a running fire of conversation.

"Afraid I wasn't going to make it this time," he said. "A plane picked me up shortly after I passed the line—I crossed in broad daylight, but I wanted to get here before dark if I could. Too risky trying to land among all these trees without some light."

"You mean you were followed?" Cameron exclaimed.

"Yes. Another Messerschmidt ship like this one I have. Apparently, he'd been hanging around waiting for me—there must be a leak somewhere in Paris. I had a time getting away from him, and he almost clipped me before I did lose him. A tracer bullet whizzed past my ear so closely I could almost feel it. I finally lost him over the mountains."

"Hope he's not still hanging around," Claire said nervously, as she adjusted her safety belt.

"All right, folks, here we go!" Rene cried, and speeded up his motor for the take-off. "That fellow may still be around somewhere. Anyway, I'm going very high. Better chance to dodge in the clouds."

There was a breath-taking moment as the ship skimmed over the ground and it appeared that they surely wouldn't clear the tops of the trees surrounding the clearing, but at the last second Rene pulled back sharply on the stick and the plane soared upward with room to soare.

It was cold and Claire huddled down in the cockpit, protecting her face as much as possible from the rush of air as Rene climbed higher and higher. Then for some time the movement of the ship was gentle, even. She couldn't hear Rene and Bill talking because she had no earphones but she knew they were talking.

Suddenly Rene put the ship, which had been cruising along at about 8,000 feet, into a sharp climb.

"Nazis!" he exclaimed. "Not one this time—a dozen. My pal went out and got his friends!"

"They're after us?" Cameron asked.

"Yes. Be sure your safety belts are secure. I may have to do some acrobatics. If we have to bail out, I'll give the signal."

Cameron couldn't see that anything could be gained by shouting the information Rene had just given him into the ear of the girl at his side, but she sensed something was wrong when he reached over and examined the fastenings of her safety belt.

"Anything wrong?" she screamed.

He shook his head, but she knew he wasn't telling the truth. His face beneath his helmet and goggles was too grim. Nervously she clasped the bag containing the remnants of the food Frau Weber had given them and to which she had clung as she climbed into the plane.

"What is it, any enemy planes?" she shrieked, her lips almost touching Bill Cameron's ear.

"Yes!" he shouted back. "But don't be afraid!"

His hand reached for hers and grasped it firmly. His palm was warm against the back of her cold hand, and a pleasant feeling of comfort went through her.

She looked up at him and smiled, and her lips formed the words: "I love you, Bill." He smiled back at her, suddenly leaned forward and kissed her lips.

Meanwhile, the plane was streaking toward France at better than 200 miles an hour. How Rene had spotted the enemy planes neither Cameron nor Claire could imagine. It was completely dark now, and the stars were like a spangled ceiling above them. High in the air —they were more than 12,000 feet— it was as clear as crystal, and getting steadily colder.

Cameron heard Rene's voice suddenly through the phone, and there was a note of elation as he told him he had outdistanced the fleet that had tried to intercept him.

"We're not out of the woods yet, though," he added. "They'll probably have another gang waiting for us along the line. All we can do is trust to luck."

Rene dropped the plane down to about 8,000 feet and leveled it off. It was too cold at the higher altitude. Ice had begun to form on the tips of his wings, and he dared take no chances on slowing his speed.

For an hour they raced along without incident, Bill and Claire rejoicing at every mile they put behind them for each mile brought them that much closer to safety.

It was more comfortable at the lower altitude, but Claire still shivered.

"We're two hundred and twenty-five miles toward Paris," Rene called into his mouthpiece, and Camerone smiled as he answered, "Good work Rene!"

For ten minutes more they shot through the air, and then Rene suddenly started into a steep climb.

"Just as I expected," he shouted. "They're after us again!"

"How do you know?" Cameron shouted back.

"Can't you hear them?" Rene called.

Cameron strained his ears, removing his earphonese, but he could hear nothing. He decided that Martin must be possessed of a sixth sense, which he had read somewhere every good flier must have.

Even Claire was aware of the danger, however, a few minutes later. Rene had climbed higher and higher until her ears ached, and then she heard a faint rat-a-tat-tat.

"Machine guns!" she screamed at Cameron, and he leaned toward her and nodded.

"If we have to go overboard, remember the count-ten business!" he shouted. "Be sure to clear the ship before you pull your 'chute cord."

Claire nodded that she understood. Both of them could hear the ominous rattle of the machine guns now. Although they couldn't see the Nazi planes, they knew they were there. Tracer bullets streaked like comets through the air, bracketing their plane.

Rene put his ship into a dive. Cameron could tell this by the singing of the wind against the struts. Suddenly Bill, who was leaning forward against the front of the passenger cockpit, started to unbuckle his safety belt.

"Rene's hit!" he shouted at Claire. "I'm climbing over and taking control. When I signal, go over the side. Good luck and God bless you!"

Claire reached out her numbed hands to hold him back, but he already was out of reach. She fumbled with her safety belt and finally got the snaps open.

The plane had been diving out of control, but quickly now it righted itself. Leaning forward, Claire saw by the dim light from the instrument board that Bill had taken the stick.

Instinctively he ducked as a burst of machine gun bullets swept the ship. He was tugging at Rene and had him half out of his seat while his feet braced the stick on an even keel.

Claire saw that he had the wounded Frenchman in his arms, and then he signalled her. It was unmistakable, his gesture. His thumb went up and then over the side, and she knew the plane must have been struck in a vital spot.

Taking a deep breath, the girl climbed onto the seat and poised for a moment on the edge of the plane. Breathing a prayer, she let go and automatically began to count as she hurtled down, down. She had counted twenty before she realized why she was counting, and then she tugged at the ring of the parachute which was on her breast.

She knew she was falling. It was a terrible feeling, like a nightmare in which she seemed to be tumbling off the edge of the world. Then there was a violent wrench, and she felt as if her shoulders were pulled out of joint. But blessed relief! She had stopped falling! She was floating in the air, and dimly above her she could see the white inner side of the parachute billowing out, catching the air!

A vagrant thought flashed thru' her mind as she floated between the heavens and the earth. She now was a member of the Caterpillar Club.

A PAINTER'S ERROR

Portland, Ore., — As James Jones Jr., puts it, the house looks as if it were standing in its underwear. A house painted put on one coat and Mrs. Jones telephoned the landlady it was going to be "awfully nice." The owner denied employing the painted. The workman, discovering he had the wrong address, vanished in confusion.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Advent of Spring! Spring, beginning now in the South, marches northward at the rate of 13 miles a day, faster in the interior and more slowly near the coast. Generally the growing season does not begin until the daily temperature averages above 42 degrees. But there are some plants that rush the season. Skunk cabbage showing flowers before leaves, appears in favored places as early as January but generally in February, and decays in April and May. It is there that the bee finds his first honey. Other early flowers, but following the skunk cabbage, are trailing arbutus, hepatica, and yellow violet. Among the earliest birds are the red-winged blackbird and the bluebird.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR

Governor-General of Canada 1935-1940

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Envoys of Other Countries Pay Tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir

(By the Canadian Press)

Canadians from the Atlantic to the Pacific joined with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and representatives of other countries today in paying tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir.

Soon after the Governor-General's death at Montreal last night, Mr. Mackenzie King spoke over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, recalling that Lord Tweedsmuir "knew the Canadian people as few, if any, Governors-General knew them before," and that the Canadian people "learned to know him and to hold him in unsurpassed affection."

"To his great task Lord Tweedsmuir brought wisdom, experence, the grace of words and a generosity of heart which found expression in a wide human sympathy and understanding," the Prime Minister said.

Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner to Canada, said Great Britain "joins with Canada in mourning the loss of a most distinguished citizen of Empire and a very human man who, in good health or bad, disdained to spare his strength in the exercise of his official duties, and who, in his personal relationships, endeared himself to all who had the privilege to know him."

Long Be Mourned.

James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister, spoke of the Governor - General's "outstanding qualities of mind and character" and said he "will long be mourned by all English-speaking peoples."

Chief Justice Sir Lyman P. Duff of the Supreme Court of Canada, before he took over temporarily the duties of Governor-General, said that "we shall remember the self-forgetfulness with which he lavished his talents and his energies in helping forward every good cause."

Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Conservative leader, speaking first in English and then in French from Fort William, told the C.B.C. audience that Lord Tweedsmuir "had endeared himself to Canadians of all classes, creeds and political beliefs". "Apart from his official life in Canada," Dr. Manion said, "his Excellency will live in history as John Buchan, the author, who through his historical works as well as his

27 ARRESTED IN RAID

Toronto, Feb. 12 (CP). — Police raided a Rhodes avenue residence early today and arrested 27 men on gambling charges. Ten sets of dice and two dice cups were seized, police said.

Paul and George Vogel were charged with keeping a common gaming house. The twenty-five others were charged as "found ins".

SIDEROADS BLOCKED

Cornwall, Ont., Feb. 12— (CP) — Sideroads throughout this district are blocked today following a 10-inch weekend snowfall. All Provincial and County roads are passable, it was reported. Several automobiles were ditched Sunday by heavy drifts and icy pavement but no serious accidents were reported.

USE MIRRORS TO BREAK JAIL

Monticello, Ky., Feb. 12—(AP)—They're breaking jail by use of mirrors now. Newt Hurt, jailer, reported six prisoners escaped from Wayne County jail by using a mirror to guide their efforts in removing a bolt from their cell door.

FIRST TO DIE IN OFFICE

Toronto, Feb. 12 —(CP)— Lord Tweedsmuir was the first Canadian Governor-General to die in office in nearly 100 years.

Two others who died in office were Baron Sydenham, thrown by a horse, in 1841, and the Duke of Richmond, bitten by a tame fox in 182[illegible]).

AGE AND EMPIRE HAVE SUFFERED VERY GREAT LOSS

British Press and Public Pay Unstinted Praise to Lord Tweedsmuir

'NEVER ONCE FAILED'

Number of Names Prominently Mentioned as Successor to Lord Tweedsmuir

By SAM ROBERTSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 12 (CP Cable)—The age and the Empire have suffered a heavy loss.

These editorial words in The Daily Telegraph in commenting on the passing of Lord Tweedsmuir summed up a sorrow that was international. Tributes were paid him as a man with a fine sense of duty to the Empire and the public, as a man of letters and, perhaps most important, as a man.

News of his death was given to the King and Queen when Their Majesties arose. A palace official said the King and Queen had followed the course of Lord Tweedsmuir's illness "with the keenest anxiety."

It was considered probable that many weeks would pass before a successor to the important post in the senior Dominion will be named. It likely will be after the Canadian election.

Consideration of Successor

While it was known that Lord Tweedsmuir's health would not permit his to consider serving a second term at Rideau Hall, no serious consideration had been given to the selection of his successor.

However, some general consideration had been given the matter in London as well as in Ottawa and among the names more prominently heard here were those of the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Elgin, the Earl of Athlone and the Marquess of Aberdeen. The Duke of Devonshire and Lord Aberdeen are sons and Lord Elgin a grandson of former Governor-General.

The words chosen by men and newspapers in paying tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir showed they felt a real sense of personal loss.

In far-away Australia Prime Minister R. G. Menzies said th's "great writer and great administrator was an almost unique combination in history and vice-regality."

"There was no doubt he brought the most unusual talents to the service of the people of Canada," Mr. Menzies added.

"A Real Friend" Lost

The chief councillor of the little Oxfordshire village of Elsfield said "we have all lost a real friend." Elsfield Manor has been the Tweedsmuir family home since just after the last war. Most of the villagers knew the Governor-General personally, for he loved the country and roamed the moors studying

I. R. A. MEMBERS RIOT AND RAID BELFAST ARMORY

Bottles, Stones and Bricks Hurled in an Hour of Street Fighting

100 RIFLES STOLEN

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Feb. 12—(AP)—Resentment of the Irish Republican army over the hanging of two convicted terrorist members for a fatal bombing in England resulted over the week-end in rioting and a raid on an armory.

About 2,000 I. R. A. sympathizers clashed with police and hurled bottles, stones and bricks in an hour of street fighting yesterday. Scores were hurt and 20 arrested.

Despite a ban on demonstrations the I. R. A. sympathizers attempted to hold a meeting in the Falls Road area of Belfast, and police charged them.

Police Break Up Meeting

Police also broke up a meeting in the Nationalist area of the city of Armagh. Copies of a government proclamation forbidding meetings to discuss the execution of two Irishmen in Birmingham last week for a bombing murder were torn down in several parts of Armagh County.

Car Drops 12 Feet to Harbor and Turns Over but Does Not Sink

Welland, Ont., Feb. 12—(CP)—F. W. (Dinty) Moore of Port Colborne, Second Vice-President of the Ontario Hockey Association, escaped with slight concussion and bruises today when the automobile he was driving failed to make a turn on a Port Colborne pier and plunged 12 feet to the ice-bound harbor.

The accident occurred at the government elevator and the ice did not give way. The car overturned after striking the ice and the driver was taken to hospital for observation.

RUSSIA CLAIMS CAPTURE OF 16 DEFENCE POSTS

Apparently Claim is in Addition to Those Made Last Thursday

FINNS DENY STORY

Apparently this claim was in addition to that of last Thursday reporting seizure of 13 forts in the Mannerheim Line, since it was included in the report of military operations for yesterday. (The earlier report had drawn a Finnish denial.)

The communique, issued from Leningrad, major base of the Finnish campaign, told of artillery duelling on the Isthmus, or Mannerheim line and combat between infantry units "which resulted in the enemy being repu'sed and Soviet advance units capturing 16 defensive fortifications, including eight iron and concrete artillery forts."

PROROGATION OF HOUSE EXPECTED ON FEBRUARY 23

Legislature Will Sit Only Long Enough Today to Pass Resolution of Condolence in Death of Lord Tweedsmuir

BUDGET ON TUESDAY

Toronto, Feb. 12—(CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn held out hopes today for prorogation of the Ontario Legislature by Feb. 23, despite a day's de'ay in business out of respect to Lord Tweedsmuir.

The House was to sit long enough today to pass a resolution of condolence in the death of the Governer-General. Tomorrow, the Premier said, he expects to bring down the budget in his capacity as Provincial Treasurer.

The Premier said, however, that he could not be certain of the House's procedure during time of mourning for the Governor-General until advice is received from Ottawa.

The Premier plans to cut his budget address shorter than usual, since no new taxes are planned. It probably will take between 45 minutes and an hour.

Immediately After Service Wednesday Body Will be Taken to Scotland for Interment

Ottawa, Feb. 12.— (CP)—While preparations went forward for a state funeral for the Governor-General, Lady Tweedsmuir quietly came back to Ottawa today from Montreal where he spent anxious hours at Lord Tweedsmuir's bedside until death claimed His Excellency.

Lady Tweedsmuir arrived in the capital by special train at 10.20 a.m. E.S.T. and was met at the station by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. He expressed his sorrow at the death of the Governor-General last night.

Her Excellency showed the effects of her grief and the long vigil but bore up well and made the trip from the station to Rideau Hall in one of the staff cars that met the special three-car train.

It was the same train that last Friday bore the Governor-General to Montreal for treatment in the Neurological Institute as he fought to recover from a concussion suffered last Tuesday in a fall at Government House.

There was no advance notice of the exact time of the sad homecoming. Hon. Alastair Buchan accompanied his mother.

As an ambulance, ordered as a precautionary step, drew up to the depot a few small knots of people appeared but Royal Canadian Mounted Police guarded the approach to the station platform and kept onlookers at a distance.

The State funeral service for the 64-year-old Governor-General whose death saddened the Empire and the Dominion that loved him as an adopted son, will be held Wednesday afternoon in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

At the office of the Prime Minister it later was announced that it had been decided to place the preparation of details of the State funeral in the hands of a committee of Senior Civil Servants headed by Dr. E. H. Coleman, Under Secretary of State.

All details will be submitted to Lady Tweedsmuir for final authorization before being adopted.

The make-up of this committee is primarily the same as that which last summer dealt with details of the Royal visit.

It was understood here the body of His Excellency would be cremated and the ashes taken to the United Kingdom for interment.

One of the Greatest Armies Ever Transported by Sea Joins Allies' Forces in the Near East

TENT CITY PREPARED

New Zealanders and Australians, All Volunteers—Anthony Eden Welcomes Troops With Message From His Majesty

Suez, Egypt, Feb. 12 (CP).—One of the greatest armies ever transported by sea landed here today from New Zealand and Australia to join the allies' forces in the near east.

A tent city at the edge of the desert was partly prepared for the husky troops, welcomed at the end of their 10,000-mile voyage by Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden with a message from the King.

The New Zealanders and Australians were all volunteers, many of them sons of troops that crossed the seas to fight in the last war.

A Reuters dispatch passed for transmission from Suez said the great armada of transports and British warships were anchored "as far as the eye could see".

How many additional troops arrived was not disclosed.

Health Is Excellent.

Health of the troops was reported excellent. They were said to be in high spirits.

The Australians are under command of Lieut.-General Sir Thomas Blamey, Chief of Staff of the Australian Imperial Force in 1919. Commanding the New Zealand force is Major General B. C. Freyberg.

Mr. Eden conveyed this message from the King:

Venoms From Two Poisonous Snakes Effective in Relieving Cancer Pain

Venice, Fla., Feb. 12 — (AP)—Two physicians reported today a combination o fvenoms from two poisonous snakes has been found effective in relieving intense pain from cancer and arthritis and stopping spasms of epilepsy.

Cases showing beneficial results from injections of minute quantities of the killing poisons into humans were described in papers prepared for presentation today at the International College of Surgeons assembly.

Dr. Eugene Maier, laboratory director for the Florida medical centre here, reported "promising results" with a mixture of venoms from the rare coral snake and the common cotton mouth water moccasin.

Venom from the tiny coral snake, found only occasionally in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and some parts of the southwest, never has been used before. Moccasin venom has been used mainly as an agent to help stop bleeding.

Go Ten Days Without Pain

Dr. Maier told of a cancer victim who had reached the point where narcotics no longer were effective in stopping pain. After a series of injections of a venom preparation, the patient was able to go as long as 10 days without pain and without drug relief of any kind, he said.

A Texas man, who suffered from epilepsy for 20 years, had his violent spasms stopped by injections of venom, Maier asserted.

The coral snake's poison is just as deadly, although of much less volume, as the venom of the cobra which has been used in recent years as a substitute for narcotics in relief of pain.

Venoms of the cobra and coral snake attack the nervous system primarily, while the mocassin's poison acts equally on the nervous system and the blood system.

MARAUDERS FAIL TO GAIN ENTRANCE

Marauders failed in an attempt to gain entrance to the Canadian Pacific Railway freight sheds in Belleville early today. While patrolling his warehouse beat shortly before 6.30 a.m. today P. C. Ellis observed foot prints in the freshly fallen snow leading from John St. in the direction of the C. P. R. freight sheds.

Police investigations then disclosed that a hole had been hacked in the sliding door on the north side of the building, but the intended robbers had failed to locate the sliding bolt that secured the door. A window on the south side of the building was also broken. Constable Ellis notified C.P.R. freight officials and a subsequent check-up revealed no entrance had been effected.

FAMILY INJURED IN CAR ACCIDENT

Laurence Dupuis, Wife and Son, of Hamilton, in Local Hospital With Lacerations and Back Injuries

A member of the 48th Highlanders, his wife and seven-months old baby narrowly escaped serious injury and are in the Belleville General Hospital as the result of a motor accident, during which the motor car in which they were riding sideswiped a truck near Shannonville early Sunday morning.

The motoring party was enroute to Ottawa, the automobile being driven by Laurence Dupuis, of the Highlander Regiment, Toronto. Dupuis was proceeding easterly, when his motor skidded and sideswiped a west bound truck, driven by W. K. Edgar of this city. The Dupuis family was admitted to the Belleville Hospital. Mrs. Dupuis suffering from head lacerations and back injuries, while Mr. Dupuis sustained facial lacerations as the result of flying glass. Seven-months old Morland Dupuis also was shaken up, as was Mr. Edgar. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and later preferred a charge of failing to produce a driver's licence against Dupuis.

Sleet and Snow Make Driving Quite Heavy

Following Saturday evening's heavy fall of sleet and snow, local motorists experienced two entirely different highway conditions to contend with over the week-end. Ice and sleet covered the streets and highways of the district early Saturday evening and a few motorists came to grief as their autos slid off the road into the ditch but in the city no serious damage resulted.

The heavy snowfall which resulted as the weather took a turn for the colder made the going heavy in the rural districts and sideroads were drifting badly yesterday afternoon as the stiff wind piled it high into drifts.

Police Blotter

As His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., was indisposed today, suffering from a slight head cold, there was no session of police court held in Belleville. All cases listed for trial were postponed until Friday.

No arrests were necessary in the city over the week end and only nine transients sought shelter from the raging storm and blizzard that swept through Eastern Ontario. Six transients signed the register on Saturday night and three last night.

Snow-covered streets resulted in two minor motor accidents, that resulted in fender damage only.

Since the "infantry" won a more or less decisive victory in the battle of the schoolhouse here last week, forces of both sides have been resting on their arms, and awaiting the decision of trustee board.

The "war" started, it is said, when twenty-six-year old Howard Shelton, schoolmaster in a Faraday Township school section, issued an edict whereby pupils of the school would appear fifteen minutes earlier in the morning, and be dismissed fifteen minutes prior to the usual time in the afternoon.

Open hostilities broke out the next morning when two pupils appeared at school at the regular time. In attempting to remonstrate with the pupils, the schoolteacher was met with a barrage of ink-bottles and text books, followed by an "infantry" charge in which he was attacked with rulers and his own pointer.

The school was closed following the outbreak, and has remained that way since.

On Saturday night the Board of Trustees met to consider a course of action, but owing to the absence of Public School Inspector J. B. Deyell, of the North Hastings Inspectorate, through other duties, Chairman Harvie Bierwith, refrained from taking any action until the inspector was consulted.

In the meantime Schoolmaster Howard Shelton has refused to return to his duties until the two alleged pupil ringleaders have been permanently expelled from the school, the school is still closed, and a temporarily triumphant pupil army is enjoying an unexpected but none the less welcome enforced holiday.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The calling of 200,000 more men to the army in Rumania indicates a new outbreak of jitters in the Balkans. Apparently something has happened to make an extension of the war to the southeastern corner of Europe in the Spring look more probable.

Although Rumania's fears are inspired to some extent by the demands of Great Britain and France for a curtailment of shipments of oil and other products to Germany and perhaps a suspicion the Allies would like to strike at Germany by the back way, the recent move appears to spring more from fear of Germany.

Some time ago Germany is reported to have suggested Rumania discharge several hundred thousand men from the army so that they might be gainfully employed in the oil and other industries, the products of which Germany needs. Instead of complying with the German request King Carol's government takes the opposite course.

It is also reported Germany made a non-committal reply to a Rumanian request for a territorial guarantee in exchange for a reduction in the Rumanian army.

In considering the situation in the Balkans it is important to remember that the actions of governments which become known to the public tell only half the story. In Rumania particularly and in other Balkan states as well are large minorities more or less hostile to the governments under which they live.

The outside world knows little of their thoughts, aspirations and sympathies and little of the power and influence they may exert in the event of a break in the present precarious peace. Russian and German agents are no doubt working on the forces which may overthrow governments from as well as seeking to influence the governments themselves.

Stirling (Special)—Attended by neighbors, friends fraternal brethren of Stirling I.O.O.F. No. 239 and Wellmen L.O.L. members of Rawdon Township Council and many relatives, the funeral of late Elgin Jackman, prominent Stirling resident, took place at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, on Saturday, February 10th. Deceased who was in his seventieth year, passed away on Wednesday in Belleville General Hospital. Born on the Sixth Concession of Rawdon Township, he was the son John Jackman and Alzina Hubble. He followed the occupation of farmer until fourteen years ago when after retiring he moved to Stirling, where he has resided since.

He was a prominent member of Stirling I.O.O.F. No. 239 and also associated with Wellman's L.O.L. He was a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Facing life with an honest and cheerful outlook his being was forever an inspiration of good to all with whom he had contact. A sincere tribute to the esteem in which he was held throughout the district was evidenced by the numbers who failed to gain entrance to the crowded church, where service was conducted. Following a brief service at the home, the cortege proceeded to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with the Stirling I.O.O.F. in attendance. Rev. W. H. V. Walker conducted the service assisted by Rev. James E. Beckel of Rawdon United Church Circuit. Basing his thoughts on scriptural passages read from the Book of Revelations by Rev. Beckel. Rev. W. H. V. Walker's address to the bereaved was one of comfort. During the service Arthur Duncan rendered a vocal solo "No Night there."

Climaxing an earthly life throughout which thoughtfulness for others was the keynote a prominent citizen was borne to his last resting place, followed by a host of friends, who in the days to follow will often reflect upon his deeds and constructive effort for the well being of the entire community.

Surviving are his sorrowing widow formerly Deborah McGee, his mother, Mrs. Alzina Jackman of Stirling, two daughters, Mrs. E. C. Pollock of Seymour Township and Mrs. Stanley Irvine, Sidney Township and one son Mr. Percy Jackman Rawdon Township. One sister, Mrs. Charles Dracup of Rawdon Township. There are also four grandchildren. Interment was made in the Stirling Cemetery.

O. S. D. CARNIVAL IS POSTPONED

Inclement weather forced the postponement of the annual fancy dress ice carnival, to have been held in connection with the Winter Sports Carnival at the Ontario School for the Deaf, on Saturday. The heavy snows which fell covered the O.S.D. rink to such depths that the Carnival was postponed until this week. The sports parade saw splendid competition on Friday when ideal winter weather prevailed.

YOUTH CONGRESS PLANS PARADE

President's Wife Asks for No Demonstration During Her Address

Washington, Feb. 12 — (AP)— Cheers, yells and stomping which greeted demands for a continued policy of neutrality by the United States prompted leaders of the American Youth Congress to propose today a youth demonstration on the April 6 anniversary of the United States' entry into the last war.

The delegates were silent when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the United States President, assured them that "I don't think for a minute that the President would do one thing that he thought would bring us into war, because he knows what war is like."

But they leaped to their feet in an ovation for Ravni Patel, a member of the National Congress of India, when he declared that many youths who otherwise follow the President "also say quite frankly that they will not follow even Franklin Delano Roosevelt into a war."

They applauded without waiting for an English translation when Jose Luis Perez of the Brotherhood of Cuban youth said in Spanish:

"America does not want to enter this war."

Approves President

Still smarting under the fatherly rebuke which the President gave them on the White House lawn on Saturday, they whooped approval of replies to Mr. Roosevelt's remark that a youth organization's resolution against loans to Finland was "twaddle."

The President's wife, asking that no one either clap or hiss until she had finished, answered written questions—The first from her second cousin, Archibald Roosevelt, Jr., a member of a Republican branch of the family.

To his inquiry whether the Congress should pass a resolution favoring Finland, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"No, I don't think you should go on record for anything you don't believe in." To Archibald, she added: "I also have sympathy for Finland."

One of young Roosevelt's colleagues, Stephen McArthur, Jr., young Democrat of Kearney, N.J., was ejected from the meeting for the second time in three days when he attempted to introduce the Finnish resolution.

FIRE DESTROYS MILLING PLANT

Damage Caused by Spontaneous Combustion Estimated at $30,000

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 12—(CP)— Fire destroyed the plant of the Woods Milling Company here today with damage estimated at $30,000. Firemen, who battled the blaze for four hours, said they believed spontaneous combustion was the cause.

The fire in the 50-year-old frame building was discovered by Robert Parker shortly after dawn. The tin-covered roof was said by firemen to have kept the flames confined to the building and prevented them from spreading to nearby dwellings. Office records were saved.

Visit of Lord Tweedsmuir To Air Base is Recalled

Governor-General Inspected Air Station Near Trenton Last Autumn, Chatted Informally and Graciously With Little Groups of Officers—Brief Memorial Service Held at Bridge Street Church at Close of Sunday Evening Service

A large passenger plane, the sunlight reflecting a silver fire from its fuselage, circled over the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force one day last Autumn. Shortly after it glided to a perfect landing, a slight figure descended from its runway, walked with a slightly hesitating gait to where the officer commanding and his staff stood stiffly at attention and cordially shook hands. He was Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada.

Dressed in a suit of tweeds, and grey hat, the distinguished visitor, inspected a special guard of honor, drawn up near one of the hangars. His critical eye took in all the details of the guard. Following the inspection he congratulated officers and was immediately whisked away to other parts of the base where he concluded his inspection.

It was the late Governor-General's only visit to this immediate section of the vast Dominion in which he was the representative of His Majesty King George.

Was Guest of Commanding Officer

After his inspection of the base, he was the guest of the officer commanding and his staff in the officers mess, where his gracious bearing and brilliant conversation marked him for the outstanding man he was. He chatted informally with little groups of officers, showing a keen interest in their work and a sincere curiosity as to the workings, personnel and of the base as a whole.

An hour later, with the cheers of the base personnel ringing in his ears, Lord Tweedsmuir embarked in the silver plane and with a cheery wave of his hand disappeared from view. The plane circled the base twice in a parting gesture of salute and faded from view over the eastern horizon.

Flags at Half-Staff

Today, despite the fact that the late Governor-General had never officially visited this city, Belleville went into mourning at the loss of a beloved Governor-General. Flags of the city fluttered at half-staff when early morning workers strode down snow-covered streets to various occupations.

The intense interest shown in the condition of Lord Tweedsmuir prior to his death ,by the man on the street was evidenced yesterday when large crowds examined newspaper bulletin boards seeking news of his condition. His death, published last night in the Ontario Intelligencer bulletins evoked sincere expressions of regret from passers-by.

Brief Memorial Service Held

In Bridge Street United Church, the news was received by the Rev. Dr. Semple, minister, during the evening service. Tribute to the late Governor-General was paid at a brief memorial service held following the regular evening service.

Dr. Semple spoke of the noble life of the late Governor-General and of the position he occupied in the church. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church. Reference was also made to the fact that at the centennial of the founding of Victoria University, Lord Tweedsmuir was honored with the degree of Doctor of Divinity by the United Church of Canada. At the close the congregation sang the hymn "For All the Saints" and there was prayer for the family of the deceased Governor-General.

His Stories Widely Read

Lord Tweedsmuir will be best remembered as John Buchan by the greater majority of residents of this city and district for his brilliant literary genius. In the Corby Library, are many of his outstanding works and "John Buchan" as the author's name is inscribed on them, is a household world in many homes of this city.

Many, too, will remember him and his gracious lady, for the part they played in the reception in Ottawa to Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth on the occasion of the Royal visit last May.

Generally, Belleville mourns, with all her native sincerity, the loss of a beloved man who during his more or less brief official tenure in Canada had endeared himself to the people in all the far-flung sections of the vast Dominion over which he held office.

LIEUT. J. BUCHAN BECOMES SECOND

his modest billet to snatch a brief nap and as usual left word to be called at any moment that news arrived from Canada.

When the message from the London bureau of The Canadian Press was delivered to him he was stunned with grief. It had been a day of hope for him and only this morning he had told this correspondent:

"I think now my father will pull through all right."

Slept Very Little

Lieut. Buchan has been sleeping very little lately and had been in constant touch with Ottawa by telephone and cable. He acted as a source of information for his brothers, sister and other relatives in Britain. Early today, despite his great grief, he stayed at the end of a phone for a long period, relaying the news to his relatives.

Yesterday, Canada's soldiers of the past and present, attending church service here, knelt in special prayer for Canada's Governor-General.

Lieut. Buchan's sorrow was too great for him to discuss this morning his plans, but the suggestion he might use the trans-Atlantic air service to get to Canada was ruled out because of its uncertainty at this time of the year.

Broke Down at Phone

When he accepted several calls from English newspapers, he attempted to answer their questions but found that he couldn't and broke down. Lieut. Buchan, an intelligence officer on the staff of the First Canadian Division, accompanied Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Active Service Force as A. D. C. only a few days ago to meet the further contingent of Canadians.

HON. McQUESTEN PLEDGES SUPPORT TO 3 CANDIDATES

Liberal Nominees in Federal Campaign Assisted by Minister of Highways

MANY NOMINATIONS

Another cabinet minister in Ontario's Liberal administration was pledged today to support Liberal candidates in the federal election campaign ,despite Premier Mitchell Hepburn's resolution in the legislature last month criticizing the Dominion government's war effort as "so little".

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Provincial Minister of Highways ,told a nomination meeting at Hamilton Saturday night that he would work on behalf of the three Liberal nominees in his home county of Wentworth. Mr. McQuesten seconded the premier's resolution in the House.

"What about Mitch?" someone in the audience asked, referring to Mr. Hepburn."

"He is one fellow who is able to explain for himself and I do not intend to do it for him," Mr. McQuesten replied.

Mr. McQuesten has said that no member will be obligated to refrain from supporting federal Liberals merely because of the legislature vote. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon sent a message of support on Friday night to the Brant Liberal nominating convention.

Speaks at Convention

Mr. McQuesten spoke at a convention which chose Ellis Corman as candidate in Wentworth, by a majority of 362 to 62 over Thomas Marshall. Mr. Corman will be opposed by F. E. Lennard, Conservative member of the recently dissolved parliament, who was endorsed by the party's riding association Saturday on a platform of national government.

Wilson H. Mills was named Liberal candidate in Elgin to seek the seat he held in the last parliament. Premier Hepburn, who represents Elgin in the legislature, did not appear at the meeting or send a message.

Miss Agnes Macphail, who has represented Grey and later Grey-Bruce since 1921, was nominated at Walkerton Saturday to contest the riding again for the United Farmers of Ontario-Labor party. Other candidates in the riding are Walter Harris, Liberal, and Carl Knechtel, Conservative.

Others Nominated

Other Liberals nominated Saturday were: Grey North, W. P. Telford, Sr.; Algoma West, George E. Nixon; Welland, A. B. Damude; Peterborough West, J. J. Duffus; Lanark, Bert H. Soper; Renfrew North, R. M. Warren; Essex East, Paul Martin.

Conservatives nominated included Halton, George C. Atkins; York North, Capt. the Rev. George Dix; Toronto-Eglinton, R. L. Baker.

Alderman Roy Aindow was named Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidate in Hamilton East. The C.C.F. council previously had planned to have him run in Wentworth.

Complying with the new regulations for the pasteurization of milk which takes effect in Bancroft on March 1st., the Bancroft Dairy owned and operated by J. L. Churcher and Sons, has purchased a modern pasteurizing plant of new design in which stainless steel equipment is featured throughout.

The plant is now being installed and will be put in operation as quickly as possible. Supplying the dairy will be the fine herd of purebred Ayrshire cattle, in the breeding of which, Mr. Churcher, who incidentally is the warden of Hastings County, has gained prominence during the past few years.

For Tuesday, February 13

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY in which new projects are paramount, with the mind and creative abilities high pitched for ambitious projects is forecast. While these may be endorsed by superiors and employers, there is some danger of overdoing. There may be a change of plans or surroundings, but refrain from moves that are too radical.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for change in plans and place. There will be sudden urges to put over ambitious projects, with employers aiding and abetting. But do not attempt to go too far with such initiative and enterprise.

A child born on this day may possess fine creative talents and originality. In its high enterprise early training to avoid overdoing is admonished.

ARCTIC JOURNEY OF TWEEDSMUIR IS RECALLED

Canadian Press Writer Tells of Incidents in Summer of 1937

'EASY TO WORK WITH'

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 12—(CP Cable)— The death of Lord Tweedsmuir shocked Fleet Street's old timers who knew him as a working colleague and recalled to this correspondent a happy nine-weeks' tour with the Governor-General through Western Canada and beyond the Arctic Circle in the Northwest Territories.

Many London newspapermen remembered the days when Lord Tweedsmuir commuted daily to his office, working on the train both ways, taking a cigarette for lunch, and driving himself so hard as to ruin his digestion at a comparatively early age. They marvelled at how one man could do so much work in such a short time.

In the summer of 1937 I was privileged to accompany Lord Tweedsmuir's party on a northwestern tour down the mighty Mackenzie River waterway system to Aklavik and north by air to Tuktoyaktuk on the shore of the Beaufort Sea.

Worked Assiduously

Lord Tweedsmuir worked assiduously all the time finishing the index to his biography of the Emperor Augustus—a work which earned praise from literary and historical men but roused some adverse criticism on the grounds the time was not right for praising a dictator.

While we travelled on trains and ships, Lord Tweedsmuir's health remained good but when we started to fly he suffered intensely from indigestion owing to irregular meals.

His condition sometimes alarmed me but he told me once: "You need not be afraid I am going to die. I have been going on like this for years."

We flew from Aklavik to Edmonton and when we reached the Alberta capital the Governor-General was so weak he had to take to his bed for several days.

Experience on Shore of Glacial Lake

With rare courage he pulled himself together and continued his westward trip through Tweedsmuir Park and the Pacific Coast.

I remember a picnic when he flew into the high mountainous country of Tweedsmuir Park and lunched on the shore of a glacial lake. I extended a hand to help the Governor-General across a gap between the beach and the pontoon of a seaplane on which he was standing. But he leaped it like a mountain goat.

He glanced with amazement at the towering, snow-capped mountains and said to me: "By jove, guy, I have travelled a tremendous part of the world and I have never seen scenery to equal this."

Help to Newspapermen

I recall that at Hagensborg, B.C., on his 62nd birthday Lord Tweedsmuir was so ill he could hardly stand, yet he made one of the finest speeches of his tour. He was in such pain he had no idea what he had said and asked his Secretary, A. S. (later Sir Shuldham) Redfern, if it was "all right."

From a newspaperman's viewpoint Lord Tweedsmuir was extraordinarily easy to work with. Here's an illustration:

There is an unwritten law that one may not interview the King or his personal representative. I wanted the Governor-General's opinion of the country through which he had passed and told him so.

"We'll cook something up," he said.

The day before we reached Ottawa on the way home he gave me a long interview. I asked him how he would suggest that I get around the interview ban and he said: "Write it as if it was a discussion in which the whole group of us took part."

Snow-Filled Highways Make Travel Difficult

Old Man Winter whose "goose" is apparently far from being cooked, returned to the wars over the weekend, and added substantially with a liberal supply of white "feathers," to the heavy mantle of snow that had already covered the countryside.

Not content with this alone, he sent a driving wind from the north on Sunday morning that effectively filled or refilled township roads and crossroads, making them impassable, until today at least.

Farmers, residing off the travelled highways, were forced to shovel their way out of snow-dritfed lanes. Highways at points were drifted nearly full, but although travel was defined by travellers as exceedingly "tough going" no actual holdup was experienced.

County road systems were reported by officials today as being open, but just "passable." Snowplows, both county and township worked all day yesterday, in an effort to reestablish highway communication with the northern parts of the county. Travellers were warned today that although practically all main arteries of the county system are open, extreme care in driving should be exercised.

The highway to Picton is open, but sideroads and township south of the Prince Edward County town, and in other parts of the country are filled and practically impassable. Plows are working, however, and the roads are expected to be clear by night.

No Broadcasting Of Political Speeches Until After Wednesday

Ottawa, Feb. 12—(CP)—All political parties in Canada have agreed to suspension of broadcasts of election speeches over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Gladstone Murray, General Manager of the C.B.C. said today.

This suspension until after the funeral of Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir is in respect to His Excellency who died in Montreal last night.

Mr. Murray said he was unable to say at this time whether the suspension would be extended to take in the full week of mourning.

Under the suspension the Prime Minister will forego a broadcast which was tentatively scheduled for Wednesday night. Agriculture Minister Gardiner will not make a brief broadcast he had scheduled for Regina today and Conservative Leader Manion will postpone a national broadcast scheduled for tonight.

At party headquarters here it was said the time given up during the suspension will be taken up at a later date.

Survey Being Made Of Skilled Labor Only

Voluntary registration of skilled mechanical labor now being undertaken by the Department of Labor through the medium of its Employment Service bureaus, applies only to skilled workmen, Employment Office Superintendent, W. D. Ross stated today.

"Apparently there has been a slight misunderstanding on the part of local unemployed, for we have been swamped with applications for registration", he said.

Registration forms have now been sent out to township and other municipality clerks throughout the counties of Hastings and Northumberland, and skilled mechanics are urged to fill in one of these forms. Registration is not compulsory, and applies to men at present employed as well as those out of work. Members of families of these mechanics can apply for registration forms in the event that the mechanics are prevented from securing them personally by their duties.

WHAT IS THIS LEGION DRIVE?

and why should I give?

Canadian Legion War Services sponsor a great, new cause—a service to the men of Canada who are fighting for us in our Army, Navy, and Air Force. To provide funds for this imperative work, a campaign to raise $500,000 is now under way: If you wonder, "Why should I give?" we suggest you read these questions and answers:

Q. What is the Legion raising this money for?

A. To provide funds for carrying on educational and personal service work with Canadians who have enlisted in the fighting forces.

Q. What do you mean by Educational Service?

A. Men who have enlisted are civilians in khaki who have a serious job to do. In doing that job, they should not develop the mental attitude "we are not coming back," but rather should continually think in terms of "when I go home," that they may be prepared to resume civilian life where they left off. In the hope of encouraging that outlook, it is felt that wherever possible, educational facilities and vocational training while they are on active service should be made available, to occupy their leisure and constantly remind them of the necessity of preparing for the future.

Q. And what are Personal Services to the Troops?

A. This means advice, guidance and actual personal services to men who are far from home and worried or bothered about some problem of a domestic or business nature. Legion War Services can perform an invaluable service to thousands of Canadians through their coast-to-coast organization with 1100 branches in cities, towns and villages throughout Canada. As the war develops, questions of pensions, medical treatment and re-establishment will arise. For years, the Legion has dealt with such problems and the accumulated experience of years will be available to the casualties of the present war.

Q. Why is Canadian Legion War Services entrusted with this work?

A: Because of the vast experience of the Legion in dealing with problems of the half-a-million Canadians who served in the Great War of 1914-1918, the Dominion Government places deep confidence in Legion activities and recognizes their particular fitness to cope with the problems that will arise during this war and to extend wise counsel to the thousands of men who now serve.

Q: Do Legion War Services overlap those of the Red Cross, Salvation Army, Y.M.C.A., etc.?

A: By no means. On the contrary, the Canadian Red Cross have strongly endorsed our activities. It is our definite purpose to avoid infringing upon the work being done by any other organization.

Q. Why shouldn't the Government undertake this job of education and vocational training?

A. Under dictator governments, practically all services are administered by the Government, and the rights and privileges of individuals are reduced to a minimum. In Canada we still retain the right to decide whether or not we wish to provide certain services for our fellowmen. In due course it will be the duty of the Government to develop schemes for the return to civil life of the men now employed in the armed forces. In the meantime, the work of educational training is to be carried on under Canadian Legion War Services on a voluntary basis.

Q. Do men on active service really want to bother about education?

A. Where our scheme has been put in operation, the men have shown great eagerness to take advantage of the courses offered. It is not uncommon for 60% of a unit personnel to attend educational courses.

Q. Are Legion officers qualified to undertake this job of education?

A: The Legion will organize and finance the plan. The actual educational work will be carried out under the direction of the Canadian Association for Adult Education. The best educationists in Canada and overseas will assist. For instance, as Director of our Educational Work in Canada we have secured the services of Lt.-Col. Wilfrid W. Bovey, of McGill University, who is also Head of the Canadian Association for Adult Education.

Q: Do your services include helping a man find a job when he gets back?

A: Yes. To co-operate with him and employers of labor to obtain preference for the men who have qualified themselves for such jobs or positions, and to assist the government in developing plans for the rehabilitation of the men when they return.

Q. How much of this money will actually go to help the soldiers, and how much will be spent in salaries of armchair workers?

A: To date we have developed our programme with only two headquarters officers and a very limited number of men in the field, due to the fact that we have been able to utilize the services of our existing personnel free of charge, and also the assistance of so many voluntary workers. No matter how the work may develop, the paid personnel will, having regard to the amount of voluntary services rendered, be very moderate.

Q: Can my contribution be included as a deduction on my income tax?

A: Yes. This appeal is registered under the War Charities Act, and as such, the full exemption for War Charities contributions has been authorized by the Secretary of State.

Q: Will there be an official audit of Legion War Services funds?

A: Yes. A double audit. Canadian Legion War Services, Inc. is registered under the War Charities Act (Ottawa), and as such its accounts will be audited by the Auditor-General of Canada, in addition to a reputable firm of chartered accountants.

Q. Will any of the money subscribed be used for regular Canadian Legion purposes?

A: No, not one cent. All the money subscribed will be spent in the interests of Canadians who are serving in our Navy, Army and Air Force.

Q: Will any of the money be spent on work other than education and personal service?

A: Education and personal services will be a first charge on these moneys. Soldiers' concert parties will be provided and recreation huts established where required. It will also be the duty of our experienced personnel, under proper authority, to do such things as may seem reasonable and necessary to contribute to the welfare of the troops, having regard to conditions which may develop. The Legion desires to be ready to meet any emergency which may arise.

This work warrants your support. It is a practical effort which will bring rich dividends in future Canadian manhood. Send or take a generous donation to this great new cause to your nearest Canadian Legion branch.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR MOURNED THROUGHOUT EMPIRE

Canada mourns the passing of Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of the Dominion since 1935, as one of the greatest representatives of the Crown in her history and as a man who has filled with distinction public office and achieved fame through his services to literature and who summed up in his sympathetic and happy nature those qualities which made him superlatively great.

Throughout the Empire there is deep sense of mourning in the loss the Empire has sustained. In his native Scotland his death has come as a shock to his fellow Scots of whom he was so fine a representative and exemplar. In the United States, Lord Tweedsmuir occupied a warm place in the people's affection because of his broad sympathies and his very humanly qualities as well as for the office he held as the representative of the King in Canada. In Britain there will be a special group who will regret his passing, the Canadian Active Service Force, which is preparing to take its place in the line with the Empire's armies.

His passing brings an especial tinge of sadness in the fact that his death has come while he was in office and while yet not old in years. His Excellency, who had not been in robust health, was expecting to return to his home in the autumn at the conclusion of his period of five years.

The man who had served Canada so well was appreciated by the people of the Dominion and his condition since his illness has been the subject of great concern.

Lord Tweedsmuir knew Canada and the Canadian people by reason of his fine gift of understanding and by his tireless expenditure of energy to serve his office to the best of his ability. He was the most travelled of the Governors-General and knew the Dominion as few public men even in Canada can know it. Coming to this country with a name in literature and in the public service and political life of the United Kingdom, he brought a democratic outlook which pleased the Canadian people. He was delighted to serve and his every appearance and visit were the expression of that spirit of understanding and sympathy which made him truly great in his office.

Possessed of rare scholastic gifts as novelist and historian and critic, John Buchan had proved his greatness in the public service of his country. He has shown Canadians how the artist can also be the well-balanced public man. He possessed that sense which is so strong in British families—to serve the nation. This gives a steadying and widening opportunity for the expression of a man's gifts and John Buchan the writer, member of Parliament, had the gifts of the scholar, particularly the Scottish scholar, who has laid deep stresses on breadth of education and on a philosophic background. He was educated at Oxford, was trained in the law, served as secretary to Lord Milner in South Africa, was associated with the publishing business, news agencies and the London Times. He wrote novels, historical treatises and biographical works. He was liaison officer in the Great War at British headquarters and then became director of information for the Government. He became Lord High Commissioner for the Church of Scotland. In 1937 he succeeded Sir James Barrie as Chancellor of Edinburgh University.

His appointment to the vice-regal post in Canada was the crowning event of his public career when he became the representative of His Majesty King George Fifth. He was raised to the peerage.

In the office he found his training, great gifts and his kindly character such as fitted him peculiarly for the post of Governor-General. He was a noble representative of the Throne, filled that office with great distinction, and in besides he shed the influence of his character upon the people.

It was the influence of a good and noble man, high in ideals, rich in sympathy and wide in knowledge of the human heart, which will not be forgotten in Canada. Everywhere he went, he left the stamp of devotion to duty, and particularly the feeling that here was a noble man, whose goodness shone through his public and private life.

Canadians will treasure his memory because he was one whom they loved as a man who enriched the public life of Canada as well as the private life of her citizens. In their sorrow on his death after so loyal and wholehearted devotion to his post, the people of Canada will remember his helpmate, Lady Tweedsmuir, who has endeared herself to the people and especially the women of the Dominion, in her hour of lonliness and sorrow, and also their family.

BRITISH PLANES PROVEN SUPERIOR SAYS AIR SECRETARY

Sir Kingsley Wood, British Secretary for Air, asserts that the British warplanes are superior to the German planes, that while recent battles in the air have been fought in which ten German planes have been downed, not one British plane was lost.

Losses to the German air force are believed higher than actually estimated, because those losses announced by the British as shot down do not include warplanes of the enemy which may be damaged and yet able to fly away and have not returned to Germany and hence are probably lost.

Germans have lost more planes than the British is his statement of losses of warplanes.

Sir Kingsley gives credit to the various factors in the making of an effective air force and equipment. He said that the war is being fought in the design departments, in the engineering branches as well as in the factories where the planes are made. It is a wellknown fact that British engineers and artisans are among the finest and that British products in every sphere have always borne a reputation for sterling quality. This is showing today in the output of British planes. British thoroughness is telling a story in the defence of the realm, in every air conflict that is fought. The Royal Air Force contains the best fliers and fighters in the world and they have the knowledge that they go into action with perfect machines in which nothing is stinted to make them serve to the utmost the purpose for which they were built.

BOASTING OF LEY ABOUT 'HIGHER RACE'

Germans were told by the German Labor Front Leader Robert Ley the other day that Germany will recover the masterdom of Europe which she had held for a thousand years. History would deny that the Germans led the world in culture and supremacy for a millenium, for it has no such record of German supremacy.

But Dr. Ley went beyond that. He said that Nazis have been called upon to complete what millions have hoped for and longed for. He meant to rule the world, to give it what he calls "a new life" under the Nazis.

Then comes the crowning effrontery of the Nazi official, who said, "If there is a Lord God and a High Providence, the higher race, which we are, has higher rights." This, which sounds like blasphemy, should be to every thinking person the absolute proof of the insincerity of such men for a man who can refer to Providence in such words cannot be a believer in the true sense. Nazism's treatment of religion is just that kind. It has lowered the divine principles beneath the merely human and in such expression there is no trace of Christianity, whose noblest expression appears in the Sermon on the Mount. Nazism is the depth of human folly and madness as contrasted with the religion which admits a human brotherhood of all nations of the earth. In Christianity there are no inferiors but in Nazism everything is inferior, every race, every culture, even the Divine Principle which rules life, must be made subservient to the will of a group of men, bent on power through the domination of their own people first of all and then by use of their own people and other races as the pawns by which they would control the world.

Ley's words are mockery and folly and show the depths to which unholy designs and ambitions will lead a man and a group of men to threaten the moral structure of the world.

NAZIS' PLOT IN NEAR EAST NIPPED BY TURKS

One of the biggest stories coming out of the conditions in Europe and Asia Minor was the revelation the other day that a vast spy system of the Nazis has been operating in Turkey to cause sabotage in the Near East.

The characteristic decision with which the Turks handled the situation was shown in the immediate sending back to Germany of a large number of technicians and by the occupation of the Krupp works, which is a branch of the Krupp Company in Germany.

The story reveals the extent which the Nazis will cover in their efforts to win the war.

Nations by this time know the formidable character of the Nazis who honor a neutral no more than they honor a belligerent.

Cream of The Nation

A fervid exaltation of the role the Egyptian Army, "the cream of the nation," is playing and is destined to play in the building-up of an independent nation was delivered over the air from the E.S.B. station by El-Ferik Aziz el-Masry Pasha, Chief of the General Staff. He pointed out that the complete independence of Egypt depends, according to the Anglo-Egyptian Treaty, on the Army's power to safeguard the freedom of navigation in the Suez Canal. Paying a tribute to the efforts of the British Military Mission in the organization, armament and instruction of the Egyptian Army, el-Masry Pasha said that the Army had now passed the first stage of its new existence. More than that, the continuous relations between the officers of the Mission and their Egyptian colleagues, together with the serenity of the military mind and the simple life of the Army, had in great part dissipated the atmosphere of reserve and uneasiness which had grown up in the past between Egyptians and British. Military fraternity had begun to develop between the two parties, particularly in the worshops and with the armies, where members of the Mission had distinguished themselves by their honesty, sincerity and activity.—The Sphinx (Cairo).

The Lighter Side

(Among possible mitigations of black-out dangers are mentioned spats treated with luminous paint for the male and luminous face powder for the female).

My love is like no red, red rose,
But got up somewhat ghastly;
The powder on her daylight nose
It does not suit her vastly.
But, O, when shades of evening fall
(With perils now incessant),
She moves, the fairest of them all,
With features phosphorescent.

And I will run to meet her then
On tootsies newly garnished;
My spats shall catch the eyes of men
By being brightly varnished.
They, too, shall shine as shines the fish,
In cellar soundly sleeping,
When, gleaming from its dungeon dish,
It tells of too long keeping.

And thus, you see, extremes shall meet
In this new path we hack out;
Like glow-worms shall my gleaming feet
Assist me through the black-out,
While like a clock-tower 'gainst the sky,
Or lights on darkened landings,
My love hath raised her lamp on high
To match my uncerstandings.

Yet on the whole I think one might Assert that I, in essence,
Have seized the somewhat safer site
For feats of phosphorescence.
The case inclines, if fairly put,
Against the posh or swish face—
Better be seen as light of foot
Than hailed, perchance, as "Fish-face!"

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Cause of The Pain in Angina Pectoris

The cause of the pain in angina pectoris — breast pang—is believed due to lack of oxygen in the blood As youngsters we found that if we were excited before a cross country run or other form of exercises, and thus not breathing deeply, we got out of breath after running or exercising but a short time. By taking things more leisurely, running more slowly and letting the other runners get ahead of us for a while, we gradually got our "second wind" and overtook the group.

During the Olympic Games at Los Angeles, it was said that the athletes of a certain country adjourned to a tent and for a stated time inhaled air containing much more oxygen than in ordinary air. Certainly these athletes made a great showing in certain events, particularly swimming. The air so rich in oxygen enabled the blood to carry more of this oxygen to the heart muscle with the result that the heart could beat more forcibly and for a longer period without tiring) than when ordinary air was breathed.

An interesting experiment showing the effect of oxygen in angina pectoris is recorded by Drs. J. E. F. Riseman and M. G. Brown, Boston, in American Heart Journal.

Seventeen angina pectoris patients were given high concentrations of oxygen and the amount of work measured before the pain occurred. Breathing room air from Douglas bags did not increase and in several instances actually caused a decrease in the amount of work which could be done before pain developed. Breathing oxygen from Douglas bags enabled eleven of the seventeen patients to do considerably more work; four exercised until forced to stop because of fatigue without developing pain. Nine of these eleven patients were from 39 to 53 years of age. Two were 57 and 58 years old. The remaining six of the seventeen patients were not able to do any work while breathing oxygen.

This experiment would strengthen the belief that the pain in angina pectoris is due to lack of sufficient oxygen in the blood.

Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, was able to bring quick relief to patients suffering with migraine, one-sided headache, with oxygen, which would seem to prove that the cause of these distressing symptoms, so long sought by research physicians, may also be due to insufficient oxygen in the blood.

Question of Efficiency

Sir—I have recently been having occasion to seek information from seceral government bureaux in the United States and Canada. In Canada if I write to the wrong bureau that bureau at once refers my communication to the right party, even though he be a thousand miles away, and I get the necessary information.

I wrote to a branch of the War Department in New Orleans and got a reply saying that I should address a certain party in Vicksburg, Miss.

Why should an American Government bureau be so much less efficient and obliging than the Canadian?

May Curtail Use of Oil Products if War is Lengthy

Toronto, Feb. 10—(CP)—Householders with oil-burning furnaces may have to go back to coal if the war lasts long enough. Oil-burning locomotives may be replaced by coal burners and other oil-burning devices may likewise be affected. Gas for motor fuel may be rationed and some busses and trucks stop running.

These radical changes were envisioned in a paper by G. A. Gaherty, M. E. I. C., president of the Montreal Engineering Company, dealing with the Dominion's economic wartime front, and presented before the Engineering Institute of Canada assembled in convention here.

"The need of exchange for war purposes may make it desirable to curtail domestic consumption of petroleum products as the war proceeds," stated Mr. Gaherty. "Canadian coal might well be substituted for oil and gasoline wherever this is practicable. The oil-burning locomotives operating through the mountains could be converted to coal, as also household furnaces.

"As we become adjusted to a war basis" gasoline for private automobiles may have to be rationed as in England, and the use of buses and trucks may have to be stopped altogether where passengers and goods can be transported by rail. This all would reduce the pressure on the sources of supply and release tanker capacity for transport of oil from North and South American ports to the theatre of war, and so make available additional supplies of oil and gasoline vital to the successful conduct of mechanized warfare."

Neutral Supply

The Allies were dependent upon neutrals for certain commodities and crude oil, to a notable degree, is one of them, Mr. Gaherty proceeded. Mercury and antimony were amongst the others. But after the defaults following the last war, the financing of purchases of these commodities was a different matter. "To make the resources of neutrals available to the Allies their exchange is indispensable, particularly American exchange, and this is only obtainable in sufficient amount through exports and the curtailing of non-essential imports, he said in explanation.

"On account of Canada's favorable balance of trade with Britain and our debt to the United States, our non-essential imports from the United States are sure to be cut drastically. The sooner we grasp this and take steps to meet the situation, the less we will suffer in the process.

"We entered the war with a huge debt to the United States that is likely to have far-reaching effects on our war economy. Our industries had been extensively financed with American capital. Our governments had financed their extravagant projects on money borrowed directly in New York or indirectly by diverting Canadian money from our own industries. As a result it takes several hundred million dollars a year to service our American debts. Our export and import trade with the United States were about in balance, but we had a favorable balance in our trade with Britain large enough to service our debts to the United States.

"Thus it was our trade with Britain that was providing us with the wherewithal to balance our accounts with the United States, and Britain was obtaining this, in part at least, from American tourists and from carrying American goods in her ships, sources of income in American funds now drastically curtailed. But Britain herself, with her income in American funds sadly reduced now, needs these in greatly increased volume to purchase crude oil, airplanes and raw materials for her munitions industry.

"She proposes paying us with Canadian securities for repatriation, but this does not provide us with the needed American exchange, wherewith to meet our obligations to the United States. Under present circumstances we have not a hope of getting the necessary American funds from Britain, and we, therefore, have no alternative but to step up our exports where possible to the United States and other neutrals, to encourage American tourists to visit Canada while spending as little as we can on travelling in the United States, and to curtail drastically our imports from neutrals.

"The Americans on their part should recognize that it is only by this means that we can honor our debts to them, that for every dollar by which their exports to us are so reduced their exports to Britain and France will correspondingly increase, and that every dollar they spend in Canada helps their own trade."

Exchange Factor

Mr. Gaherty felt that exchange, through its command of the resources of neutral countries, might well be the decisive factor in winning this war. In the matter of exchange, fortunately, Canada held a key position and in world export trade we were already fourth. Exports to neutrals should be further stepped up, new markets should be developed, "but it is in the curtailing of our imports from neutrals by substituting our own products and those of our Allies that we can do our most effective work."

Among the measures suggested were to improve Canadian tourist facilities so that more Americans would be induced to spend their money in Canada; to increase Canada's gold production; to do what we could to increase other exports, and to cut down imports from neutrals so far as possible. "Our pre-war imports from neutrals ran to half a billion dollars per year," said Mr. Gaherty, "of which at least a third we could either do without or obtain satisfactory substitutes for, either locally or from our Allies, at little inconvenience or increase in cost." Among the last mentioned are agricultural products that might be supplanted by Canadian-grown substitutes, and agricultural machinery.

Crude petroleum and petroleum products occupied a place at the top of the list of Canada's imports and deserved special consideration. The speaker dealt with the Turner Valley field in Alberta and the possibilities of stepping up production for the benefit of all Canada. "The utmost we can hope to do in stepping up our crude oil production will fall far short of supplying our domestic requirements," he asid.

British Coal

Coal, one of Canada's chief imports, would have to be Canadian coal so far as possible or imported from Allied countries. "We should always bear in mind that Welsh anthracite is the very best and makes an excellent return cargo for ships used in the overseas trade."

Regarding the setting up of purely wartime industries, Mr. Gaherty thought Canada might follow out Britain's "shadow factory" plan but "we should realize that in some cases it will be more economical to draw on the United States for our peak load requirements than to build factories to be operated for a short period only, and this makes it all the more important to build up a strong exchange position in the meantime."

"When the war starts in earnest," he said in conclusion, "we may be unpleasantly surprised. Our war effort cannot be overdone, as better equipment for our armed forces means correspondingly fewer casualties. Per capita, Britain is currently spending over four times our anticipated expenditure for the first year of the war. Even to approach the British figure, we must first put our house in order. Apart from their excessive cost, our multiplicity of governments breed sectional jealousy and discontent. A better understanding between the various sections of the country is badly needed. We should also continue to cultivate the friendship of our neighbors to the south.

Still Another Version Offered Of The Fate Of The Mary Celeste

It is a pleasant surprise to find the Mary Celeste—that most famous of all mystery ships, which has drifted for some 67 years now through the Sunday supplements, the pulp magazines and feature columns of the English-speaking world — turning up at last in the seamanly and ship-shape pages of "Yachting," which seeks to lay her ghost to rest.

Who does not know the substance of the story of the American brig, found off the Azores in December, 1872, virtually undamaged, with sails set but not a soul on board? Who has not heard some, at least, of the almost endless elaborations which have been embroidered on this simple theme? "All" her boats were found on board (she had but one which in fact was missing); a meal was discovered on the galley stove (in some accounts the stove was still warm).

"Yachting's" reconstruction sweeps all this away. It is written by Dr. Oliver W. Cobb, himself familiar with the sea, who knew the Mary Celeste's captain and his wife—they were cousins of his — and has studied the records.

Dr. Cobb's theory is simple by comparison with most others and relatively undramatic. The vessel's cargo consisted of 1,700 barrels of alcohol. Dr. Cobb believes that warm weather had caused some leakage, that gas formed in the hold and its pressure blew the cover off the fore hatch (it was found upside down on deck), and that the captain, fearing an explosion which would blow the whole ship to pieces, ordered all hands into the boat.

This much has been advanced before by various writers, including Dr. Cobb, and embraces most of the known facts. Dr. Cobb now fits a final piece into the puzzle. The vessel was found with the peak halyards "broken and gone." These halyards would be the longest piece of rope readily available; Dr. Cobb suggests that they were hastily unrove to be used as a tow rope at the end of which the boat could ride, at a safe distance, until it was seen whether disaster would take place.

A sudden puff may have filled the sails and snapped the rope short off against the bulwarks; and the Mary Celeste may then have sailed away, leaving those in the boat unable to overtake her. They were never heard from again.

But enough "survivors" have turned up from time to time, with weird "authentic" explanations, to have filled her complement several times over. The ingenuity expended in inventing tales of murder, piracy and strange accident, as well as inventing the facts to fit them, has been astonishing. More mysterious than the mystery of the ship herself is the enduring hold which her abandoned and drifting form has established over the romantic imagination of three generations.

Dr. Cobb's theory carries conviction, and may suffice to bring her long voyage through the Sunday supplements to an end. But somehow one doubts it. The Mary Celeste, like the Flying Dutchman, seems forever proof against mere verisimilitude.—N.Y. Herald Tribune.

ACTIVE INTEREST IN CANADA

State Funeral Tuesday

In the Capital, the sorrow which fell upon the Dominion will find expression in a state funeral service.

First the body will lie in state in the Senate Chamber on Parliament Hill from Tuesday noon until it is taken to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Wednesday for the state ceremony. Then it will start its journey home to Great Britain for burial.

While the body of Lord Tweedsmuir lay in the quiet chapel here, Canada entered upon a seven days' period of public mourning.

Flags were at half-mast, social events were cancelled, political warfare was quieted and people thought of the writer, soldier and statesman, who had visited them on their farms, in their cities, and on their furthermost frontiers of the Arctic Ocean.

Sympathy Pours in Sympathy poured in from all quarters of the world to add to the tributes from leaders in Canadian life who spoke of the integrity, scholarship and ability of Lord Tweedsmuir.

It was the first time in her history that Canada had lost a Governor-General in office. And Lord Tweedsmuir had the distinction of representing in the Dominion three sovereigns.

As John Buchan he was appointed by King George V in 1935 and raised to the peerage as First Baron Tweedsmuir of Elsfield. He continued as Governor-General under Edward VIII and George VI.

Though Lord Tweedsmuir's critical condition was known for several days, his death came almost suddenly after considerable hope had been aroused, that he would pull through. Canadians went to bed Saturday night with encouraging news of progress reported by his doctors and there was a definite air of increasing hopefulness in the circles close to him. Yesterday he relapsed and though he withstood another operation well, a clot in the veins of the leg brought a respiratory failure which caused death.

Lady Tweedsmuir in Ottawa

Lady Tweedsmuir, in the words of one of the vice-regal party, had been "simply wonderful" during the past five anxious days. She had waited near her husband as the long hours of the operations ticked away. After his death she walked from the hospital beside her son, Hon. Alastair and Mrs. George Pape, lady-in-waiting. She embraced Miss Eileen Flanagan, Supervisor of Nurses at the Institute, who accompanied her to her car. She returned to Ottawa today.

A Simple Bulletin.

Death of the sixty-four year old Governor-General was made known to the press by Sir Shuldham Redfern, personal secretary to Lord Tweedsmuir, in a simple bulletin which said, "The Governor-General died at 7:13 p.m."

His Excellency had announced he would retire from office at the expiration of his term this year because of the condition of his health.

On Tuesday morning the Governor-General had a blocking of a small artery in the brain and he fell, striking his head and thereby adding a concussion to the brain. His left arm and leg became paralyzed and he became unconscious.

Acute Swelling Developed.

In the next three days acute swelling of the brain developed and an emergency trepannation of the skull was done at Government House Friday. He was brought to Montreal where X-rays showed no evidence of skull fracture but did show an extraordinary swelling of the right side of the brain. An operation was performed to relieve the pressure in a more effective manner. He improved and the paralysis originally present was disappearing and he showed signs of returning consciousness. On Sunday morning there were further signs of increased pressure and a third operation was carried out.

Stood Third Operation Well.

"He stood the operation wonderfully," the statement said, "as he had shown great recuperative power from the beginning. The signs of pressure were receding in a reassuring manner when at 5:58 p.m. he had a sudden arrest of respiration which was due to pulmonary embolism resulting from a clot which had formed in the veins of the legs."

Lord Tweedsmuir was born a son of the Manse in the border country of Scotland. In 60 years of life as John Buchan he was a prolific author of diverting tales of adventure and serious historical works. He attended Glasgow and Oxford Universities and was called to the English Bar. He went to South Africa as secretary of Lord Milner.

Later he entered the publishing and newspaper business. During the first Great War he was liaison officer at British general headquarters and later director of information for the British government. In 1927 he was elected a member of the British House of Commons for the Scottish Universities. He was Lord High Commissioner for the Church of Scotland in 1933 and 1934. In 1937, while he was Governor General of Canada, he was elected Chancellor of the University of Edinburgh.

Came in November 1935

What proved to be his final post was his appointment as Governor General and he came to Canada in November, 1935, with the title of Lord Tweedsmuir. Canadians in general believed his next work would be interpretation of Canada in the United Kingdom following his return home and looked forward to the result of his studies of life in this country.

In addition to Lady Tweedsmuir three sons and one daughter survive. John Buchan, who succeeds to his father's title, is attached to the staff of Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of the first division of the Canadian Active Service Force, now at Aldershot.

Another son, William, is married in England and Alastair, the youngest, is a lieutenant in an Ottawa unit of the C.A.S.F. The daughter, Mrs. Fairfax-Lucy, is in England. Lord Tweedsmuir's mother, Mrs. Helen Buchan, who visited him in Ottawa three years ago, died a year ago in Scotland.

Canada Loses Friend.

Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, declared in an address from Quebec on the same radio program that Canada has lost "a friend who devoted himself entirely to its service with remarkable intelligence and tact."

"One wishes that he might have been permitted to carry to its natural conclusion his work as Governor-General of Canada, which post he so ably and delightfully filled," said Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews of Ontario. Other Lieutenant-Governors sounded similar notes.

Marked by Great Industry

Lieutenant Governor B. W. LePage, of Prince Edward Island, said Lord Tweedsmuir's career "had been marked by great industry and notable achievement" and Sir Eugene Fiset, Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, declared: "I am the more deeply affected since our personal relations were the most cordial."

"His keen interest in folk made his influence effective wherever he went," said Lieutenant Governor J. C. Bowen of Alberta, adding that "few Canadians have seen as much of their own land as Lord Tweedsmuir." Lieutenant Governor W. J. Tupper of Manitoba, cited his Excellency's integrity and his abiding sense of fairness and honesty of purpose in the discharge of his high duty."

"Having occupied the high office of Governor-General, no one could have to a greater extent and with such positive success entered into the life, the customs, the ideals and the ambitions of the Canadian people," said Lieutenant Governor E. W. Hamber of British Columbia, while Lieutenant Governor A. P. McNab and Premier W. J. Patterson of Saskatchewan, sent condolences to Lady Tweedsmuir.

Rt. Rev. Stuart C. Parker, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, of which Lord Tweedsmuir was a member, said the church was "proud of him as one of its most faithful sons and distinguished elders, a son of the Manse, who showed all his life the marks of his Godly upbringing."

Catholic Church Mourns

Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec, said the Roman Catholic Church is "singularly touched by the passing of so noble a Viceroy."

"Those who were privileged to meet him and to hear him speak were impressed by his gracious personality and his brilliant mind," stated Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario.

Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, called Lord Tweedsmuir "a real Democrat" and A. R. Mosher president of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor said the members of that organization "deeply regret his sudden passing."

Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader said Lord Tweedsmuir was a "demonstration of all that is good and decent and worthwhile in the British way of life." He said "it is to be hoped that his notes are sufficiently complete to leave us a clear understanding of the conclusions of one of the greatest men, who has ever occupied the high offices of Governor-General."

An Ex-Service Man

Defence Minister Norman Rogers said the word of Lord Tweedsmuir's death would be received with profound sorrow by all ranks of the Canadian Active Service Force, the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Air Force. Alex Walker, acting Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, said that "the sense of loss to war veterans is particularly poignant, for Lord Tweedsmuir was himself an ex-service man."

Chief Justice Sir Joseph Chisholm, administrator for the Province of Nova Scotia in the illness of Lieutenant-Governor Robert Irwin, called the Governor-General's death "an incalculable loss." Premier A. A. Dysart of New Brunswick said Lord Tweedsmuir was "richly endowed with those qualities that rendered easy his great and trying responsibilities."

Hon. Henri Groulx, Provincial Secretary, sent the regrets of the Province of Quebec to the Secretary of State in Ottawa.

Premier William Aberhart of Alberta said Lord Tweedsmuir was "so scholarly, so cultured, so dignified and yet so wholesome, so friendly and so congenial."

School of Highest Rank

Most Rev. Ildebrando Antoniutti, Papal Delegate to Canada at Ottawa paid tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir as a "scholar of the highest rank and brilliance."

"I will always remember his serene understanding of the Catholic problems, and his extreme kindness towards the Catholic hierarchy and our flock," the Papal Delegate said.

President Roosevelt telegraphed Lady Tweedsmuir from Washington Sunday that he was "shocked and greatly grieved" at her husband's death.

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I recall with pleasure and affection meetings with Lord Tweedsmuir and you," the President said, "and send you our sincere sympathy in your great loss."

Cordell Hull Sends Sympathy

Secretary of State Cordell Hull also sent condolences to Lady Tweedsmuir on behalf of himself and Mrs. Hull and an official message of "deepest sympathy" to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University in New York paid tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir Sunday as "a very warm friend" who would be greatly missed not only as a statesman, but also in the academic world and in the world of letters.

President Butler recalled that it was plain John Buchan, member of the House of Commons for the Scottish universities, that the late Governor General crossed the Atlantic in the autumn of 1934 to dedicate Columbia University's new $4,000,000 Edward S. Harkness library.

Couldn't Have Been Better Liked

The New York Times, paying editorial tribute to the late Lord Tweedsmuir, said today that if Canada's Governor-General "had been a Canadian born, and elected instead of appointed, he couldn't have been better liked."

"He took an interest in every interest of the Dominion," said The Times. "He was a traveller and a sportsman. With the dignity which his place required he combined an inborn friendliness, kindness, bonhomie. He was a good listener as well as a good speaker. In the matters of treaty and trade, whether with the United States or Great Britain, he was an intelligent and a tactful negotiator.

"The Canadians hoped that he might have another term. On this side of the border he was an old friend, admired and honored. Mere officials and dignitaries have their little hour and pass. Lord Tweedsmuir had that distinction of intellect, achievement and character that made him an attractive international figure."

An Abiding Inspiration

Rev. Alexander Ferguson, Minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where Lord Tweedsmuir worshipped when in residence in the capital, last night paid tribute to the late Governor-General.

"It is very difficult to realize that His Excellency has gone from us," he said. "A week ago Sunday he was in church as usual and read the Old and New Testament lessons. More than four weeks ago he served at the communion as an active elder of St. Andrew's congregation.

"There is no question that Canada's Governor-General was one of the most brilliant and versatile figures of our time. His great qualities of mind and imagination, his very remarkable gift of friendship, above all his deep devotion to the Christian church and all for which it stands, will remain for many of us, a fragrant memory and an abiding inspiration."

Possessed Rare Gifts

Rt. Rev. Dr. John Woodside, Moderator of the United Church of Canada, paid tribute to Lord Tweedsmuir from the pulpit of Chalmers Church and said: "It will be only true to say that he was a real and genuine interpreter of Canada. He was also an interpreter of the Empire to the United States of America.

"Possessed of rare and singular gifts of mind and heart which were trained and disciplined through the years, he has made an enduring contribution to the life of this nation and empire, and to the world."

Bolstering Beauty's Ego

ANN SOTHERN. . . . .always well-poised, she does not suffer shyness

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS WHO suffer from shyness and self-consciousness are not only handicapped socially—they sit on the side lines and hold up the wall—but they also are unhappy darlings. Everybody else is having a good time and they don't enter into the merriment. Life is bitter.

The family tells them not to act that way, but that's not telling them how to act otherwise. The family can come to the aid of the distressed one by giving her praise, telling her that she is pretty and attractive, just as smart as the next one, if not considerably smarter. A pat on the back now and then is good for all of us.

Let the afflicted ones realize that shyness is a quality that is common to many distinguished men and women. Some of the great actresses suffered from stage fright all their lives, never got over it. They dreaded social affairs because they were not at ease with their fellow creatures.

No sense belittling oneself. Everybody says the wrong thing at times. But the wise woman knows that life is made up of mistakes, so doesn't worry or suffer remorse. She does the best she can and she can't do more than that. She tries to keep her mind centred on other people so it won't be so busy with her own failings and shortcomings.

If you are the working boss of the household, have to do heavy work — clean the basement or give the kitchen range a bath—you probably have difficulty keeping your nails eaves in form. Funny how they pack away grime, way down to the flesh.

Use a nail brush when washing your hands. After drying, run the orange wood stick under the eaves. Sharpen a nail white pencil and use that, forming a graceful, even line.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Simple Courtesy Best Etiquette

Pathetic, the way some young girls and grown-ups too for that matter, are so eager to appear sophisticated that they dare not be natural and say and do the things their warm hearts suggest. They are more concerned with being conventional than with being courteous and in consequence they frequently make the worst sort of impression on the very people whose good opinion they are trying to win.

Men, as a rule, are far more sensible. They aren't afraid of being thought unconventional—even ignorant. They take things in their stride, make their own etiquette, suffer less mental anquish and in the end fare better than the poor females who think they must be proper according to Mrs. Grundy.

Can't we all appreciate the distress of this young thing? "Miss Chatfield when a girl goes to her boy friend's home for dinner should she sit in the living room until the meal is announced or is it proper for her to offer to help her hostess? Some people tell me one thing and some another. Last time I had dinner there I sat in the living room and was miserable because I was afraid the boy's mother would think I ought to help her. I want her to like me; so tell me what to do."

Good news, dear child, simple heartfelt courtesy is best etiquette and, when you have the impulse to help your hostess, you may rest assured it's proper4 When a guest knows that there's no servant in the house and knows there's extra work to be done because she's there, the least she can do is to offer to lend a hand. It is the housekeeper's privilege to accept or decline the offer but either way she appreciates the gesture.

We can't put on airs over the kitchen stove and when hostess and guest get their heads and hands together in the preparation and serving of a meal there's always free and easy conversation and a good time had by all. Furthermore the girl who is anxious to make headway with the boy friend's family, plays her best card when she shows herself handy around the house and helpful to the head of it.

Life would be much more simple for women if they could forget etiquette and follow their natural impulses when they entertain and are entertained.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Problem of the Drinking Parent

Like the Scriptural poor, we seem to have the alcoholic parent always with us.

Not a batch of letters comes to this column without its query concerning this truly terrible domestic problem. What is to be done with an alcoholic addict on whom a family depends and whose inability to refrain from drinking to excess is wrecking that family?

To suggest cures is out of the question unless there is money to pay for them, and alcoholic cases are among the most expensive of luxuries. I've had heart-breaking letters from wives whose husbands have acquired "the drink habit."

The silver lining to the alcoholic cloud seems to have been discovered by Captain Rhoda Milliken of the Woman's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, when she stated a few days ago, before the Woman's Guild in the Central Union Mission, that children with alcoholic parents are better off if they come from poverty-stricken homes, not the homes of well-to-do drunkards.

The law has never found any way to step in and remove children from a home with an alcoholic mother or father, if every material comfort has been provided. But the children from hevels can be sent to institutions, where order, cleanliness and sane living may be restored to their lives.

Captain Milliken went on to say that alcoholic mothers in the City of Washington constitute the chief problem at the Police Bureau, and that about one-half of these are from the well-to-do class.

The two reasons why the past years have been especially full of broken families, Captain Milliken said, are that able-bodied men, skilled or unskilled, find it so hard to get jobs, and that it's so easy to get intoxicated without money.

Again, referring to letters which come to the Beatrice Fairfax column from distraught wives, it seems that a man with a job just can't listen to the woes of a man without bracing himself with a drink. He knows that the jobless fellow is probably a good workman, and that the fact that he is jobless is just a whimsy of fate. It's so much easier to close the argument by inviting him to have a drink and then make an escape.

The man without a job will reach out for anything that will bring forgetfulness of his problem for even a few moments. It's hard to blame the jobless man but the downgrade trek so often begins with the treat which is the short cut out of the jobless fellow's misery.

What's the solution? We've been trying to find it for centuries. But Captain Milliken's assertion that the children in hovels, with drunken parents, are more fortunate than the children from well-to-do homes is certainly a new thought for those who devote their energies to Social Service.

Faces Go With the Wind

By HELEN FOLLETT

TIME WAS, my little chickadees, when women who were out for beauty laurels swathed their sacred faces in heavy chiffon veils. In the winter season the veil was always worn. We'd hate them. But they did protect against the burning effects of strong winds. How the dear girls looked few are old enough to remember; it was when grandma was a very little girl.

It is exposure to atmospheric dust, strong sunlight and cutting winds that raises trouble with the complexion. Skin surfaces of the body that are protected by clothing have few blemishes, require no attention other than the daily bath with soap suds and a brush. More than that, except in cases of old age and extreme emanciation, these surfaces do not take on wrinkles.

Neglected, the epidermal coating of the face will deteriorate. It requires oily cosmetics even if it is inclined to supply its own oil. Without emollients there will be roughness; wrinkles will come before their time. Since women have been devotees of cosmetics, the wrinkling age has been extended way into the fifties.

Cold cream and cleansing oils are for general use, heavy unguents for friction after the face has been washed at bedtime. In cases of extreme drying a creamy foundation cosmetic should be applied before putting on synthetic blushes.

* * *

If you are dubious about demountable eyelashes, we wish to tell you that they are worn by some women who dare attempt anything in the way of self-enhancement.

The first ones offered were little fringes, silky threads set closely together along a strip of light, flesh-colored adhesive. They didn't always stick, but better ones are made now. The new arrangement consists of individual winkers, the ends of which are dipped in a paste-like substance, set between the home-grown lashes. After all are in place, the ends are clipped to form an even line.

The average Ontario family today uses more than 7½ times as much Hydro power as the average family of 1914. Yet, the average domestic Hydro bill has increased over this period NOT 7½ times—but only from $1.06 to $2.12.

IN city and town and on the farm—all over Ontario today—housewives do less work, but get more done. Families enjoy greater comfort, more leisure, better sight, fresher foods, tastier meals. And it's all largely because the cost of Hydro power has steadily come down, down, DOWN—as the use of modern "electrical servants" has increased.

Today, 1½c buys as much Hydro service as 5c did twenty-five years ago. Now, for just a few pennies a day, low-cost Hydro electricity not only lights the house, but does the washing, the ironing, the cleaning—cooks the meals and refrigerates the food—runs the radio—and provides continuous hot water.

Reunion

Halfway down, Claire began to worry about where she would land. What if it should be right in the midst of a German fortress—or even in a town? She'd have a time explaining how she happened to be bailing out of a plane in the middle of the night, even though she did have her false passport in her pocket.

Maybe she'd land in a lake or a river, or worse still, in a clump of trees. Instructions she had heard about parachute jumping came rushing back into her mind and she hoped she could follow them.

Relax your muscles when you hit the ground, she remembered, but she wondered how it was possible when you couldn't see the ground. She'd have to strain her eyes, try to make out the deep shadow of the earth, try to judge the distance and then relax as she struck. That was the way, she knew, to avoid broken bones. Then she must get out of the 'chute as quickly as possible so that if a gust of wind struck it she wouldn't be dragged.

She wondered what had happened to Bill and Rene. Whether Bill had been able to get the wounded French officer over the side, and jerk his 'chute open so he'd have a chance for life.

As these thoughts raced through her head, she was peering down, straining to get a glimpse of something that would give her an inkling of how close she was to the ground. Off a distance, she caught the faint gleam of a pair of lights moving. It must be a car, with dimmed headlights. They didn't seem very far below her, so she set herself for the shock of hitting the ground. A moment later she saw a dark mass rushing up toward her, relaxed the muscles of her legs and felt herself hit.

The jar all but knocked the breath from her body, but she retained presence of mind enough to immediately slip out of the straps that held the parachute and as she let them fall to the ground, she slumped down herself to regain her nerve.

She marveled at her luck— she had landed on soft dirt. Feeling with her hands, she decided it must be a plowed field. There was a dank smell of newly-turned earth which confirmed this belief.

Feeling strong enough after a short rest, she got to her feet. What happened to Bill and Rene? Had they come down anywhere near her She didn't know when Bill had jumped. If he had stuck with the plane a minute longer than she did, he might be more than a mile away.

Cautiously she called his name and then Rene's but when there was no answer, she decided there was nothing to be done until daylight. In the dark, she found the straps and the cords of her parachute. Doubling the cloth over, she made a seat for herself on the ground.

She found it much warmer there than it had been thousands of feet in the air, and the thrill of falling and then floating through space had set every nerve and muscle in her body to tingling. A few folds of the parachute silk would protect her some, and she settled down to wait until morning.

Far overhead she heard several planes, their throbbing motors echoing and re-echoing against the sky. Instinctively, she glanced upward, seeing nothing but the stars. Perhaps the patrol was returning to its base, or was still searching for the lone ship it had been told to intercept.

She wondered how far the Nazi plane that Rene had been flying would go without a hand to guide it, hopelessly damaged as it was. Fifteen or twenty miles, she hoped. A search would certainly be made for it in the morning, and when it was found empty there would be a hunt for the occupants. She would have to act quickly as soon as there was enough light to see. She must find Bill and Rene, and the three of them must somehow hide—in a place where planes flying overhead couldn't spot them and land patrols wouldn't see them.

Busy with her thoughts, time passed quickly and almost before she realized it, the stars began to grow dim in the sky and a faint grayness was discernible.

Getting to her feet, she bundled the silk of the 'chute as tightly as she could, and carried it under her arm as she started out. She glanced in all directions about the field, but could see nothing of Bill or Rene. There wasn't even a house, although there might be one beyond the fringe of trees to the West.

She stumbled across the plowed ground in that direction, certain that if she found any trace of Bill and Rene it would be to the West or southwest.

There was a small stream of water along the edge of the field, which accounted for the irregular line of trees she had seen. Walking along the bank a short way, she came to a wooden crossing of planks evidently placed there by the farmer who owned the land to get his equipment over the creek. She decided this was a good place to hide her 'chute and carefully stuffed it out of sight far under the little bridge.

Then she walked on in the direction she knew to be southwest, coming out of the trees into another field. There was a slight breeze blowing now, and in the far corner of the field she thought she saw something moving slightly. Was it a parachute, lying on the ground, that was billowing in the wind?

Claire started to run, stumbled over a great clod of dirt and fell sprawling. She picked herself up and started on again, this time picking her way more carefully.

As she came nearer, she saw her first guess had been right. It was a 'chute on the ground, and beyond it she could see what appeared to be a large man, prone.

Sobbing with fear now, she hurried on and finally reached the pile of collapsed silk. She saw a man lying on the ground, and beside him another. Both wore helmets and goggles.

It was Bill she recognized first—the man nearest to the 'chute. He was flat on his back, and she sobbed with relief as she bent over him and saw he was breathing. Then she turned to Rene. He too was unconscious, and his face was very pale. Blood had caked in his leather flying jacket.

Quickly, Claire stripped off the men's helmet and ran back across the field to the stream. She filled the helmets with water, and when she got back to them, started bathing Bill's face and head.

It seemed an hour, but it really was only several minutes before Cameron started to moan and stir, and soon he was sitting up looking vaguely about him. He didn't seem in the least surprised to find Claire on her knees beside him.

"Rene? Where is he?" was the first thing he said.

"Over there", Clair pointed.

"How is he?"

"Still out. I'm going to try the water treatment on him".

"The cognac in my pocket will be more effective", Cameron said, and painfully reached into his tunic for the bottle Frau Webber had forced on them before they left. It was not broken.

While Claire held Rene's head in her lap and bathed his forehead and temples with cold water, Cameron forced a few drops of the liquor between the Frenchman's lips. Soon he began to stir and groan but when he started to get up, he fell backward with a cry of pain.

He glanced up at them, his eyes blazing with hatred for a moment. Then he recognized them.

"Good", he murmured. "You're both here. I thought the Nazis had me".

Claire and Bill succeeded in getting his jacket off, and Bill stripped away his inner coat and shirt to reveal a clean bullet wound through the fleshy part of his shoulder.

"That's swell", Cameron commented. "It was right through. All we need is a little antiseptic and a bandage, and you'll be all right, although you seem to have lost considerable blood".

After he had bathed the wound carefully with water, removing the dried, caked blood, he poured cognac into the wound, first in the front and then at the back while Rene, gritting his teeth, writhed with pain.

"If it burns a wound like that, what must it do to your stomach?" he smiled weakly, when Cameron was using a part of his shirt to make a bandage for the wound.

"Are you able to walk?" Bill asked, anxiouly. "We've got to get out of here before it gets much lighter. They'll have a patrol out looking for us."

"I'll get along, somehow", Rene answered, but he shuddered with pain as they helped him to his feet.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Miracle on Main Street"

When in the course of Hollywood films, one comes along that is far off the beaten track, simply and tenderly filmed and intelligently and sincerely acted, too much praise cannot be lavished on all concerned.

"Miracle on Main Street," new romantic - drama now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, is such a picture, a production highly recommended to all, but especially for women. And too much credit cannot be paid to Margo, the star, who rose to fame in Frank (Mr. Smith Goes to Washington) Capra's outstanding earlier success in "Lost Horizon," in which picture she portrayed the character of the ever-young Maria, still uppermost in the minds of the thousands who enjoyed this previous smash hit. Others of the superb cast selected for "Miracle on Main Street" include Walter Abel whose first important screen appearance was in "The Three Musketeers," William Collier, Sr., the grand old character performer, Wynne Gibson who always appears to good advantage and Lyle Talbot who to many is the prince of screen heavies, make this hit a top-ranking one, for both pleasing and well-done performances. The story itself is tender and heart-warming and will be among the list definitely chosen as bringing to the screen the pleasing kind of enjoyment that reaches deep into the heart-strings.

A beautiful scenic, in technicolor of a camera tour through Bermuda and other interesting spots, an entertaining "Screen Vaudeville" treat and a gay all-star comedy "Teacher's Pest' precede the feature presentation at each performance.

AT THE CAPITOL

Bette Davis, the screen's first actress, will be seen in her newest Warner Bros. picture, "The Old Maid," now playing at the Capitol. Co-starring with Miss Davis will be Miriam Hopkins and George Brent. "The Old Maid" was adapted for the screen from the story by Edith Wharton, which later was dramatized for the stage by Zoe Akins. After a long run in New York and on the road, it won a Pulitzer prize—the highest award that can be bestowed upon a dramatized production.

The story deals with two cousins, Charlotte and Delia Lovell, who live in the same old house in aristocratic Philadelphia in the period between 1861, when the Civil War broke out, and the 1880's. Despite the luxury and wealth with which they are surrounded, they hate and envy each other for twenty-odd years.

AT THE BELLE

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame"

Magnificent, awe-inspiring, amazingly impressive and eye-dazzling! These words best describe "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which is now on the Belle screen.

A remarkable and convincing achievement in every department from basic idea to actual performance, The Hunchback" can safely be hailed as the most spectacular motion picture Hollywood has produced in the last decade, and in this writer's judgment it ranks with the screen's stupendous films— of which there are very, very few.

Vastly superior in every respect to past efforts to interpret the spacious and melodramatic Victor Hugo thriller, the current version is a personal triumph for Charles Laughton, whose characterization of the crippled cathedral bell-ringer it without question his crowning contribution to the screen. Equally notable is his superb support, including a host of stage and screen celebrities—Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Maureen O'Hara, Edmond O'Brien, Alan Marshall, Walter Hampden and Katharine Alexander.

Simple in the telling but breathtakingly powerful on the screen, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is a grim story of loyalty and sacrifice and love, moving swiftly in impressive style against its vast panorama of medieval settings and characters astir with primitive emotions.

The plot dwells on Quasimodo, the caretaker of the bells of Notre Dame. He falls hopelessly in love with a gypsy charmer, Esmeralda, whose exotic dancing at the annual Feast of Fools at the same time arouses the evil passions of the King's High Justice, Frollo. The nobleman, repulsed, slays one of her admirers, after which he has her accused of the murder, and convicted.

How Quasimodo saves Esmeralda at the cost of his own life when the villainous nobleman tries to carry her off, makes for a gripping climax rarely equalled in drama, surprises and thrilling exciting moments. It rocked this reviewer deeply.

Thanks to the mammoth recreations of such historic Parisian landmarks as the cathedral of Notre Dame, the Palais de Justice, Sainte Chapelle and the Court of Miracles, and thanks to the record number of atmosphere players—3,500 which people the massive settings, the pageantry and spirit and color that were the Paris of King Louis XI are vividly and realistically captured.

A triumph for its production guide, Pandro S. Berman, for RKO Radio Pictures, and for its director, William Dieterle, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is no less a triumph for the motion picture industry. Here is truly an achievement in screen art not to be missed, we hope, by any of America's host of moviegoers!

SYRACUSE STARS MAKING PROGRESS IN INT.-AM. LOOP

Toupin, Bennett and Locking Showing Fine Form and Responsible for Advance

OUT OF LAST PLACE

Team Wins Two Games Over Weekend Against Ramblers and New Haven

(By The Canadian Press)

Messrs. Toupin, Bennett and Locking can take a bow for keeping interest at high peak in the International-American Hockey League's Western Division race.

But for these three, Syracuse Stars might be considered also rans today instead of contenders for playoff positions that soon will be decided. For this trio, Stars in their own right, led their team to a double victory in weekend games.

Syracuse, by beating Philadelphia Ramblers 3-1 Saturday and New Haven Eagles 2-1 last night, sliced the margin between second and last place in the Western Section to six points. The Stars themselves are last but are in a position where another pair of victories will put them in the thick of the race.

No other team was able to equal Syracuse record for the weekend. Pittsburgh Hornets won their only start, an 8-2 victory over New Haven Saturday; Springfield Indians beat Cleveland 2-1 last night after losing 3-2 to Hershey the previous night; Indianapolis lost to Cleveland 3-1 Saturday and shutout Hershey 2-0 Sunday; Providence Reds matched Pittsburghs record, beating Philadelphia 2-1 last night in their only weekend game.

Norm Locking, Maxie Bennett and Jack Toupin accounted for four of the Stars' five goals in the two games, picking up 12 scoring points among them. Keating and Locking got the goals last night while Lockin had two against the Ramblers.

For New Haven, the double loss made it five games in a row without victory for the former Eastern Section leaders and left them only a point ahead of the third place Indians and four behind Providence. Larry Aurie and Johnny Therf caused Eagles the most damage Saturday, both scoring two goals and assisting in another.

BOYHOOD PALS TIE IN TOURNEY

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 12—Two boyhood pals—Byron Nelson and Ben Hogan—tee off today in an 18-hole match to play off their tie for the Texas Open Golf title.

Only a little more than a decade ago Nelson, freckled and carefree, and Hogan, small and quiet, worked on each other's swings while waiting to caddy at the Glen Garden course at Ft. Worth, Tex.

Nearly 10,000 golf addicts cheered them at the most exciting finish in the history of the Texas open. Both were around the 72 holes in 271—thirteen shots under par—despite sleet, rain and driving north winds. Nelson, United States Open champion, came from behind to tie his home-town friend.

Hogan had three 66 rounds, five under par, but took a 73 on his second round. Nelson with 68-67-69-67, made it eight straight rounds in below 70 on the Brackenridge Park's 36-35-71 course.

Skiers Enjoy Weekend In Oak Hills Sector

Fast becoming a place of year-round sporting activity, the Oak Hills sector was again the haunt of dozens of skiers from Belleville and district over the week-end, as lovers of the great winter sport took full advantage of almost perfect skiing conditions. Early yesterday afternoon the highways north of the city were dotted with cars bearing skiing parties to the steep slopes near "Boardman's Hill" where the novice and expert alike may find excitement and thrills to his entire satisfaction.

Apparently not satisfied with the thrills of ordinary skiing, and unwilling to call it a day even after an afternoon's activity on the slopes, one party was noticed still aboard their skiis on their homeward trip. Trailing behind their car in aquaplane style the lads were risking their necks in an effort to add a few more thrills to a full afternoon's fun.

Sports Roundup

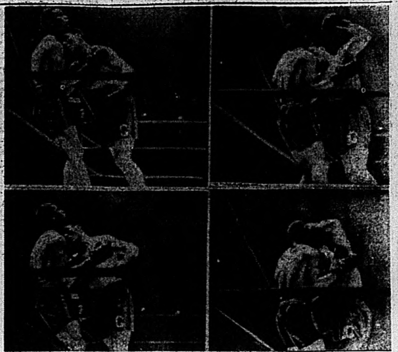
(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Feb. 12—(AP)—Far from being at the front, or near it, Max Schmeling is quietly training for his 'teenth joust with — you guessed it—Cousin Walter Neusel. . . . Note to Merrill May: The Phillies are trying to locate you to give you a raise. (Your contract was returned undelivered) . . . You can write your own ticket on whether Tony Galento's eyesight is defective. All we know is he bumped kerplunk into the microphone when he climbed into the ring to be introduced the other night. . . Mike Jacobs only hopes the Joe Louis retirement can be staved off until June, 1941, when Mike figures Billy Conn will be fit and ready to carry on. . . because of his tiny stature, Victory Morn, Col. Maxwell Howard's speedy colt, is known around Hialeah as "pocket battleship."

Odditorium: The International Baseball League which has long claimed to be the top double A circuit, now can prove it. It has moved to the 28th floor at Fifth Avenue. (The American Association offices are on the third floor and the Pacific Coast League's on the second) . . . Here's a believe-it-or-not: The Shubert (Kas.) junior high basketeers have scored consecutive shutouts, 23-0 and 39-0.

Louis says he had to go easy with Godoy to save his hands. . . True Arturo was a hard guy to fight . . .and maybe he was a bit of a clown, but Joe has met other clowns, notably the Messrs. Levinsky and Galento, on whom he wasn't afraid to use his hands.

CHAMP LOUIS RETAINS TITLE AFTER STRUGGLE



Surprising everyone, including the Champion, Arturo Godoy gave Joe Louis the toughest battle of his championship run, but was not quite good enough to capture the crown. Godoy started the fight with a low crouch, that apparently had the champ badly puzzled, and continuously kept shoving Louis against the ropes. Godoy is pictured here using his head to pin Louis to the ropes and brings his left to Louis' face. Top and Bottom Left Godoy pins the champ and starts to uncork his left. Top and Bottom Right. TORONTO VARSITY DOWNS McGILL

Rulers of Intercollegiate Hockey Badly Beaten by Toronto Squad

(By The Canadian Press)

Rulers of College hockey for almost ten years, McGill Redmen saw the end of their ascendancy approaching today.

One defeat in five International Intercollegiate League games does not necessarily mean a title but the manner in which it was inflicted and the team that was responsible were an omen that spelled bad days ahead for the wearers of the Red and White.

In a crucial week-end visit to Kingston and Toronto, McGill was unable to gain more than an even break. After administering a 10-4 lacing to Queen's university Friday night, the Reds received a trouncing from University of Toronto Saturday by a 9-4 score.

Toronto's victory, the Blues sixth in row, established the Ace Bailey-coached team as strong favorites for the crown that McGill has worn since the I.I.H.L. was formed. The Reds can recoup the loss when the teams meet in Montreal, March 1 but on their showing Saturday are not rated much of a chance.

Meantime, in a quadrangular league game Dartmouth defeated Harvard 8-3 at Hanover, N.H. The game, featured by Captain Dan Sullivan's five goals, marked the second victory of the season for Dartmouth and the third loss in as many games for the crimson.

McGill and Toronto played on even terms for two periods but in the third the blue scored five times without a reply from the Montrealers.

Don Dunbar and Art Roddington counted twice apiece for Varsity with single goals going to Muchy McIlquham, Quigley, Callon, Glynn and Maynard. Howie Walker scored three McGill goals and Bill McDonald one.

Lorne Carr

One player in the National league who is not enjoying the present major league season overly much is Lorne Carr of New York Americans, a high-scoring right wing since he joined the team five years ago, but this year in a goal - getting slump. Last year his 19 tallies were the most pooled by any of Red Dutton's men. All told in his five seasons in the Carr has counted 78 goals and been credited with 65 assists, for a very healthy all-round total of 143 points. He has spent 68 minutes serving penalties. His minor league career embraced foru teams in three leagues from 1930-31 until 1934-35, his first season with the Amerks. Vancouver Lions in the Pacific Coast league was his first pro team, followed by Syracuse in the International league the next winter, Buffalo in the same loop the next, and finally Philadelphia in the Canadian-American league, at which time he was owned by Rangers, but other than getting his picture taken as a member of the team, he saw no action for Lester Patrick's team. In his season at Buffalo he had finished second among the league's goal scorers, a feat that interested Rangers in him, and from whom Americans secured him. Lorne will be 30 the day after Dominion Day, and first saw the light of day in Stoughton, Sask. Played junior at Calgary.

DIAMOND METEORS

Diamond; That's Story of From Barber Shop to Sam Crawford

Exhibition tour
Businessman
Slugging Sam . . . in 1912
College coach

By Central Press Canadian

Sam Crawford was working in a barber shop at Wahoo, Neb., when baseball beckoned—"Come!"

Sam went. Life had not been all beer and skittles to young Samuel who had taken up a pair of barber's clippers rather than a harvest scythe. The townsfolk said he was the "talkingest" barber they ever saw, talked nothing but baseball and talked it all the time. Why didn't he forget barbering and play baseball?

Sam got his first chance in 1898 when "Snakes" Crawford—no relation—took a hay wagon full of boys from Wahoo community on a barnstorming baseball excursion through Nebraska. At Superior, Sam got the range of the opposition pitchers and murdered the ball all afternoon. Next day when the rest of the boys climbed back on the wagon and pulled out, Sam stayed behind. He signed a contract with Superior.

East Calls

Word of the sensational Wahoo slugger reached West Point, Neb., and the West Pointers took Sam away from Superior for the rest of the season. Sam was powerful with the bat and fleet in the field. His fame echoed beyond the Nebraska corn fields and agents from the big eastern teams came out to look him over.

It was Sam Crawford's golden opportunity. Baseball's ivory hunters had found him as they had found hundreds of stars before him, as they will find hundreds more stars in the future.

Wahoo Sam landed with Cincinnati in 1899, switching in 1903 to Detroit where he remained 15 years. Crawford's outfield work was excellent, but it was his tremendous batting that made him famous and steadily increased his income.

Owner E. S. Barnard of the Cleveland Indians grew weary of Crawford's towering smashes over Cleveland's right field fence. Up went a 45-foot wire screen atop the right field wall.

Detroit came back to town again and Crawford filed his answer to Barnard's challenge. It was a screaming drive that cleared the high barrier by a full eight feet. It was the kind of stuff that fills the grandstands. Sam Crawford had it in plenty.

From Wahoo, Neb. (population 2,100), Sam Crawford went to flourishing Cincinnati, Detroit and eventually, Los Angeles, building a comfortable fortune and lasting fame in America's national game.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

They are calling tonight's game "the city championship battle." It was more by popular demand than anything else that prompted the local puck moguls to promote an Air Force-Belleville junior exhibition game tonight. Neither team will be pulling their punches, simply because these two squads met behind closed doors about two weeks ago and the Flyers' "A" team was rather lucky to win by a 4-3 count. Ever since that game the local kids have been aching to get back at the "birdmen," as the Quintes feel they can skate just a little too fast for the Flyer seniors. True enough the Airmen carry the advantage in weight on the defence, but the kids are shifty and fast afoot, which will make up for any difference in avoirdupois. Actually if Coach Holway uses Driscoll in the Flyers' nets, the kids feel they can beat the Airmen. However, after last Friday night's game no doubt Laurie Gibson will be back in harness. Getting back to tonight's game, both teams will be at full strength and the fans cannot afford to pass up this game which is bound to be a scrappy affair.

Tonight's match will be the only hockey game played at the Hume Arena until Friday night, when the Petes and Flyers play the second game of their group play-offs, which opens in the Liftlock City on Wednesday. One of the first things we'd like to see is the appointment of a good competent referee for the Peterboro-Air Force series. Actually we know of no better official than Bert Hedges of Toronto. Hedges is not too strict nor on the other hand does he permit the game to get out of his control, all of which constitutes a good hockey official. However, it seems the clubs cannot mutually agree upon an official for their series, which simply means Billie Hewitt will have to assign some neutral official. According to the group agreement if either the Petes or the Flyers win their group play-offs in three straight, the Airmen only get one home gate receipt, while the Petes take two full slices off the melon. With this in mind the Airmen have two essential reasons for winning, first to advance in the O.H.A. playdowns and secondly to protect their financial interests.

Out in Peterboro' the puck moguls are suffering from a bad case of the "hockey jitters." Frank Buckland and his ace publicity man, one Cecil Perdue, are quite satisfied the Petes can beat the Flyers as they stand today, but the Liftlock City bunch are shaking at the knees in fear that the Air Force will pack their team for the play-offs, under the new military hockey regulation of the C.A.H.A. As a matter of fact the Petes are quite certain they are going to be victims of a ganging act before the current Flyer-Petes series is over and off the record we can say—"we don't blame them for their present nervous state." Incidentally the Peterboro' scribe doesn't think much of Driscoll as a goalkeeper and openly admits he expects to see Gibson back in the Flyers' nets for the group playoffs.

Regarding the above paragraph the Liftlock City scribe has the following to say after Friday night's game: "If there is any doubt in the minds of local puck fans — or the Belleville sports writer—as to the Petes' superiority over the Fliers (as they are now), we must admit we're amased. That 8-1 win here last e'en should prove something. Of course we say "as they are now," advisedly, because the rumor has grown into a roar that the Airmen intent to import heavily for the playoffs—which opens here next Wednesday. Yeah, they can do it legally, as the C.A.H.A. and the O.H.A. ruled at the outbreak of war that there would be no residence rule for army hockey players. As there are air camps at Ottawa and Camp Borden (and plenty of good puckists in the air force there, too) it stands to reason that the Fliers can bring in several fine players. However, such importations would hurt the chances of the Borden and Ottawa teams too. So, we dunno "

"The new rule which forbids the Yankees to make a trade will be a blessing to Babe Dahlgren," writes Dan Daniel of the New York World-Telegram. "He certainly deserved that break. He knows now that the champions cannot get Rudy York or anybody else in the league to take his place and with that appreciation should develop a new confidence and lift himself in the 1940 records."

Local horse-race enthusiasts will have an opportunity to get a pre-season peek at their favorite sport later on during the month when ice-races will be staged at three different places in North-Western New York State. Ogdensburg and Clayton are both in line for staging races, the former on Feb. 16-17-18, while the one being run off at Clayton is to be a real gala affair lasting four days, from Feb. 22-25 and worth-while purses are being arranged to assure some high class competition turning out. All these places are within easy driving distances from Belleville and local horse lovers will be well repaid for taking these races in. Only the veteran horse race fans will recall the old days of ice racing over the frozen waters of the Bay of Quinte, when Belleville was noted for its sporting ventures, many years ago.

The members of the Quinte Skating Club held a full dress rehearsal over the week-end in preparation for their forthcoming gala ice extravaganza to be held at the Hume Arena Thursday night. Beautiful settings and props will grace the ice surface for their show, which promises to be a small edition of the famous Toronto Skating Club carnival. In keeping with any such presentation the scenery will be unique in itself, with draperies as background. The members of the Quinte Skating Club have laboured long hours in order to make this show an impressive one.

Do you remember when Eddie Shore, dynamic Boston Bruin defenceman, was temporarily retired from the National Hockey League scene three years ago today? He suffered a broken vertebra in a crash on the ice with Ace Bailey, and decided to "take a rest" for the remainder of the season. He's back in the game now, playing for New York Americans.

SPORT SPICE — Goody Rosen, Toronto's gift to the major leagues, was sold by the Dodgers to Columbus, Rosen has the will to win and it is even betting he'll be back ...Remember Charlie Gorman, the Saint John speed skater of two decades ago? Charlie lost his last race yesterday when he died in hospital following a lengthy illness..Boxing experts contend that the Jack Dempsey of Toledo would beat the Joe Louis of today and by the K.O. route at that...Dempsey's two-fisted punching and his ability to "take it," were defined by the experts as the margin enjoyed by the Manassa Mauler... However, the present generation will give you an argument, so don't make such a statement above a whisper, unless you are ready to back your convictions. ...London, Ont., may be included in the Pony League set-up next summer and if so they intend to play night ball in the Kellogg town.

ITALIANS PRAISE TURKISH PACT

Say Agreement is Logical Step in Italy's Drive for Trade Eminence

Rome, Feb. 12—(AP)—A trade pact between Italy and Turkey is nearing completion, and authoritative Fascists regard it as a logical step in the Italian drive for commercial eminence in the Balkans.

Whatever its effect may be in further excluding Germany from southeastern Europe and in placing Italy in friendly relationship with Turkey, allied with Great Britain and France in the Mediterranean, they say Italy's only interest is improvement of her own trade.

(Official quarters in Istanbul, reporting conclusion of an Italian-Turkish trade agreement yesterday, said the pact was politically significant and indicated an early political rapproachment. It came while a steady deterioration of German-Turkish relations gave the uneasy Balkans concern over the possibility of war in their still-peaceful region.

(Trade circles in Istanbul said Italy could supply just what Turkey needs to become fully independent of Germany.)

Fascist sources here say the chief significance is that Italy's energetic Balkan leadership has been shown thus far to have kept southeastern Europe out of hostilities and, therefore, has made her trade progress with Turkey possible.

Arnold Bennett Foresaw Buchan As "One Who Counts"

London, Feb. 12—(CP)—The late Lord Tweedsmuir—when he was plain John Buchan and only 21—was described by a famous English novelist a "a man to compel respect; one who 'counts.'"

The words are inscribed in the journal of the late Arnold Bennett, under the date June 23, 1896, the day he met the future Lord Tweedsmuir.

Bennett met the man destined to become Canada's Governor-General, when Buchan had already published a novel, and written a second, and was, as Bennett wrote, "a favorite of pub'ishers, who actually seek after him."

Bennett, who was 30, then wrote this description and these prophetic words: "A most modest retiring man, yet obviously sane and shrewd, well-disposed too, and anxious to be just; a man to compel respect; one who 'counts.'"

Young John Buchan was then reader for a London publisher, and had written several reports on Bennett's novels. Bennett noted he was "a very young, fair man, charmingly shy; 'Varsity' in every tone and gesture. He talks quietly.... with the accent of Kensington, tempered perhaps by a shadow of a shade of Scotch."

The committee is well pleased with the response and the interest evinced in their undertaking which netted a considerable amount of money to be used to further their war efforts.

The United Church Sunday School Board of Management meeting at the Parsonage regretfully received and accepted the resignation of Mr. W. S. Gordon as Superintendent of the School, a position which he has filled creditably and continuously, with the exception of only a few months, for the past thirty-six years.

In accepting this resignation, the Board of Management unanimously endorsed the following resolution which will be incorporated into the minutes of the Official Board:

The Board of Management of the Sunday School of Tweed United Church desires to place on record its deep appreciation of the services of Mr. W. S. Gordon, on the occasion of his retiring from the leadership of our School. Since 1903, except for one or two very brief periods, he has been intimately associated with our School as Superintendent. In that position he has given his best to build up the School. His executive talents, energy, enthusiasm, time and means were bestowed freely to this end. Thousands of pupils, who grew up in our Church retain vivid memories of him as, punctual to the minute, he began to lead the school in his carefully prepared program of worship.

Now, as he retires, after this long period of service, he carries with him the satisfaction of a fine duty faithfully performed, and also the good wishes of all associated with him in the work of our School.

Alleged Counterfeiters Remanded One Week

Sudbury, Ont., Feb. 10 (CP) — Three district men charged with possession of counterfeit money were today remanded one week while police continue investigation in connection with circulation of spurious $10 bills in this district during the past month.

The three, Adrien Russell and Rudolph Larsen of Sudbury, and Jerry Bellanger of Levack, were arrested a week ago when city, Provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police took part in investigations. The men are held in jail without bail.

Bellanger was arrested nine days ago when he walked into the police station here and was questioned regarding two spurious bills in his possession, police said. Russell was arrested the same night and the following day police raided Larsen's apartment and seized photographic equipment.

Two women, arrested in Sturgeon Falls on the same charge, were granted suspended sentence yesterday and will appear as crown witnesses when the three men appear in court here.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning at breakfist pop said to ma, By gollies my shin still hurts where I stumbled over that suitcase in the front hall when I came downstairs to fasten that banging shutter, and I still dont know what the blame thing was doing there standing on its end in the dark hall.

Well now that you've calmed down I can enlighten you without fearing for my life and limb, ma said, I put it there myself before we went to bed so when I saw it this morning I'd be reminded to send your dress suit to the cleaners. Suitcase and dress suit, do you see what I mean? When the famous Mrs. Thurston Willows comes here for dinner do you suppose I want her to see you in a dress suit looking like the last days of Pompay? she said.

Well horse blanket to balzes that's what I call adding injury to insomnia, my shin is black and blue and proberly broken, pop said. And furthermore the great Mrs. Thurston Willows isn't going to see me in any kind of a dress suit. Suppose she herself arrives in an old pair of slacks and a couple of curl papers? he said, and ma said, Now Willyum you're talking about Mrs. Thurston Willows.

Who are you talking about, the Queen of Sheba? pop said. By gollies we ought to put a brass plack on the front door with an inscription on it, The home of Mrs. Willyum P. Potts where the famous Mrs. Thurston Willows fed her distinguished face on such and such a date, he said.

We wont need any sourcastic plack, thank you, it will be a famous event just a same, and I'm glad you reminded me about the suitcase, Willyum, because I didn't notice it this morning, Nora must of put it away and I might of forgotten to send your dress suit after all, ma said.

Making pop feel worse instead of better.

AGE AND EMPIRE HAVE SUFFERED

birds. The news quickly spread through Elsfield as plain folk passed the word that "Mr. Buchan is gone."

The Daily Sketch said "the sorrow which will be manifest today throughout the Dominion of Canada at the loss of its Governor-General will be shared by the whole English-speaking world."

"He was the first commoner to wear the King's livery in Canada," the paper said. "It was an experiment which he, by his dignity and understanding, made a complete and glorious success."

"Man Who Never Failed"

The Daily Express entitled its tribute "the man who never failed". It said Lord Tweedsmuir's life story was "one continual chapter of success."

The Belfast News Letter commented that "we need never despair of the nation while it produces men with such aptitud for public service.

Sir James Irvine, Principal of St. Andrews University and one of Lord Tweedsmuir's oldest and closest friends, said: "John Buchan was one of the most versatile men I have known. His speaking, his writing, his thinking—everything was always done with finish and perfection."

Sir James revealed that John Buchan the author kept his mind stimulated by working on two volumes at the same time.

"He would have a serious one going and an adventurous novel of "The 39 Steps" type. If one began to pall, he would turn to the other. In this way he never allowed his work to get the better of him."

Varied Career

All morning newspapers printed long obituary notices.

The Times said: "He had a career as varied as it was distinguished and his great talents were given to English letters and to the binding together of the peoples of the Empire."

The Daily Telegraph: "A career such as his is easier to parallel in France, where the writer-politician always is look on with more favor than in Britain. It is more than a coincidence that he became Governor-General of a Dominion in which the influence of French ideas is strongest."

Buchan Verse Read

"The News Chronicle, whose headline said simply: "John Buchan dead," ended its story with this Buchan verse:

"And you from time's slow torments free
"Shall pass from strength to strength and scale
"The steps of immortality."

The Daily Telegraph in a leading editorial said Lord Tweedsmuir earned a great popularity in Canada seldom squalled and never surpassed by any of his predecessors.

Lord Tweedsmuir's work as Private Secretary to Lord Milner when the latter was High Commissioner for South Africa from 1901 to 1903 was recalled today by the Johannesburg Star in announcing the Canadian Governor-General's death.

"It is impossible to touch even briefly on his career," the newspaper said editorially, "without alluding to the work he had his eminent South African contemporaries of the Boer war years did subsequently to develop and enrich the commonwealth conception in the Empire."

ARRANGEMENTS BEING MADE FOR

Lord Tweedsmuir, who has travelled Canada more extensively than any of his predecessors, will have his last Canadian homecoming Tuesday when a special train brings his body from Montreal, arriving here at noon E.S.T.

King Remains at Capital

Lady Tweedsmuir, who remained, constantly at the side of her husband throughout his six-day illness, was scheduled to return quietly to Rideau Hall this morning. Prime Minister Mackenzie King had prepared to go to Montreal to return with Lady Tweedsmuir and her son Alastair and personally extend the nation's sympathies, but remained to greet the bereaved family here.

With appropriate escort, details of which are being worked out, the body will be taken from the Union Station to the Senate Chamber of Parliament Buildings where it will lie in State for 24 hours.

Wednesday afternoon the body will be moved to the church where Lord Tweedsmuir worshipped during his residence in Ottawa. The state funeral service will start at 2:30 p.m.

Immediately after the service, the body will be taken to the railway train on which it will start the long journey to Great Britain for interment, probably in his Excellency's native Scotland.

A seven-day period of mourning was proclaimed by the government late last night and all immediate political activities of the prime minister and his colleagues, associated with the general election campaign, were cancelled.

Members of the Dominion cabinet who are absent from the capital, engaged in the political campaign, have been asked by the prime minister to return, if possible, to join with him in last tributes to the late Governor-General.

Flood of Messages.

A flood of messages of sympathy for the bereaved family and for the government of which Lord Tweedsmuir was the head as personal representative of the king, poured into Ottawa throughout the night.

The 74-year-old Chief Justice of Canada, Rt. Hon. Sir Lyman P. Duff, late last night took the solemn oaths prescribed by his Majesty and shouldered the burdens of office as administrator of the government until a successor to the Governor-General has been appointed.

The swearing-in ceremony was carried out in the library of the Chief Justice and was witnessed by the Prime Minister and several permanent government officials.

Few details of the funeral plans were available early today but it is likely Ottawa will be draped in mourning during the ceremonies here. It is expected there will be a government escort for the journey back to Great Britain.

I. R. A. MEMBERS RIOT AND RAID

Between 30 and 100 rifles were reported taken by a group of men identified as Irish Republican army members in a raid on the Bally - Kinlar military camp in County Down, Northern Ireland Saturday night.

Suspects Searched

Although the loot did not approach the amount taken in a similar raid on the Phoenix Park arsenal in Dublic Dec. 23, police searched for suspects and armored cars patrolled the streets.

The raiders also seized a soldier, but released him in the heart of Belfast during a blackout and escaped.

In addressing a protest meeting against the Birmingham executions at Dublin, Simon Donnelly, one-time I. R. A. president, declared:

"The proper attitude of the Irish people is fearlessly to resolve that the state of affairs that has caused the youth of Ireland in every generation to sacrifice life and liberty shall be ended once and for all.

The speaker referred to the same republic proclaimed during the ill-fated Easter uprising in 1916 during the last war.

Two sergeants of the Irish Army were wounded badly when revolver shots were fired into barracks at Cork.

RUSSIA CLAIMS CAPTURE OF 16

The Leningrad headquarters reported minor infantry clashes north of Lake Ladoga, scouting activity and artillery action in other unidentified sectors and "reconnoitring and bombing flights" by Red airmen .

The Russian press, meanwhile, attracted foreigners' attention with publication of a Rumanian magazine article declaring that Finland's fortifications facing Russia were built in the past four years by the German army in cooperation with France and Great Britain.

Germany Not Included

The Russian papers refrained from comment as regards Germany, ostensibly in the light of the newfound friendship between Russia and the Reich. The article, however, included this Rumanian observation:

"Such inner 'fraternity' of the great powers was created because they all were anti-Soviet."

Filling in between the lines of sparsely worded army communiques of recent days, newspapers described the fighting in the Finnish campaign. One account, in part, touched upon the rigors of warfare on the snowbound front:

"Soviet troops sleep in open tents. The cold is frightful and Soviet troops must improvise stoves. They must organize communications with the rear and centre. This inevitably slows down the tempo of the advance."

Trud, official organ of Russian trade unions, assailed William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, as "a fierce enemy of the U.S.S.R. and a faithful hireling af the reactionary Bourgeoise who are helping (former President) Hoover organize aid for Finland, who is drawing the United States into a second Imperialistic war."

PROROGATION OF HOUSE EXPECTED

A Feb. 23 prorogation would give those members who are desirous a chance to take active part in the federal election campain. The Premier, despite his resolution in the House criticizing the Dominion government's war effort, will not stand in the way of any Liberal member who wishes to support federal Liberal candidates.

Many Supporting Candidates

Several Liberal members who voted for the condemnation resolution have since expressed intentions to support Liberals in the federal fight. Among them are Highways Minister McQuesten, who seconded the Premier's resolution, and Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon. Mr. McQuesten spoke at a federal nominating convention at Hamilton Saturday and expressed his support of three Liberal nominees in Wentworth County, while Mr. Nixon sent a message of support to Brant Liberals Friday.

Debate will be resumed this week on the government bill to abolish grand juries and to reduce to six men the juries in county court civil actions. The first feature of this bill has hit a snag in Conservative opposition and second reading debate has not been finished.

It is possible that in committee stage there will be discussion of Mr. Nixon's suggestion that women jurors be permitted in Ontario. A woman having been ruled a "person" by the Privy Council, all that would be necessary in the Ontario legislation would be the changing of the words "man" and "men" to "person" and "persons." Such a change would not apply to trials under the Criminal Code.

Ed. Dunlay Appointed Chairman Marmora High School Bd.

Marmora — The first regular meeting of Marmora High School Board for 1940 was held on Wednesday evening with all the members present as follows — Ed. Dunlay, A. Burridge, C. H. Buskard, Jos. O'Neill, R. E. Bonter and H. W. Sabine.

Mr. Dunlay was appointed chairman for 1940 and Mr. Buskard, vice chairman. The committees are — property, A. Burridge, chairman and R. E. Bonter; Finance, H. W. Sabine, chairman, C. H. Buskard and Jos. O'Neill; The chairman is ex-officio, a member of all committees. Roy Smith was re-appointed secretary-treasurer. Routine business was disposed of and consideration given to plans to improve and beautify the grounds. The question will be further considered at the next meeting and some action taken.

Principal Fulton presented a report of standing of pupils in recent examinations, which was very satisfactory.

If sufficient entries can be secured a field crop competition will be sponsored by Marmora Agricultural Society this year. A field of three acres is necessary for the competition and there should be little difficulty in securing the number of entries. Persons entering are required to use registered seed of whatever variety is agreed upon which may be purchased through Marmora Agricultural Society. As this is the first year for a field crop competition to be tried here all would start on an equal basis. Specially fitted ground is not required as competitors will have time to prepare their ground for seeding in the spring. One advantage of a field crop competition is that it provides those taking part with high class seed for a few years. Valuable educational assistance is also given those taking part in regard to cultivation, fertilization, soil testing, etc.

REGINALD WHITE TO HANG APRIL 25

Defence Counsel States He Will Enter an Appeal Against Sentence

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 12 (CP).— Unless a successful appeal is filed by his counsel, Reginald White, 34-year-old farm worker, will be hanged April 25 for the axe slayings of John and Annie Milroy, aged Waterloo farm couple.

After deliberating three hours here Saturday, a jury convicted White of the murders and handed their verdict to the judge without any recommendation of mercy. White stood with bowed head and showed no emotion as Mr. Justice J. C. Makins passed sentence. Defence Counsel J. K. Sims said he would enter an appeal against the conviction.

White was arrested Aug. 21, two days after the bodies of the brother and sister were found in their farm home, the heads badly crushed from axe blows.

Strongest evidence against the prisoner was a statement read to the jury in which White confessed killing the couple following an argument with John, his former employer. Defence Counsel protested against admitting the statement as evidence, claiming police had obtained it by using improper methods. He was overruled by the judge who ruled police had used no coercion in getting the statement.

In his charge Mr. Justice Makins instructed the jury that it "must find it is murder or nothing" and added that there was nothing in the evidence to cause reduction of the charge to manslaughter.

Counsel May Appeal

Kitchener , Ont., Feb. 12—Although defence counsel J. K. Sims would not verify the report it was learned today from reliable sources, that Reginald White, convicted of the murder of John Milroy, will enter an appeal. White was sentenced Saturday to be hanged April 25.

The appeal will be based solely on question of law. While defence lawyers would not reveal the nature of the legal points to be debated, it is understood that the fact that the jail governor had taken samples of hair from the head of the accused while incarcerated in a cell in the Waterloo County jail, is one of the points of appeal White, it is said, had not been warned that these hair samples might be used in evidence against him.

N. Z., AUSTRALIAN FORCES LANDED

"I know well the splendid tradition established by the armed forces of New Zealand and Australia will be worthily upheld by you who have left home in order to fight for the cause the whole empire has made its own.

"Now that you have entered the field of active service, I send you my warmest welcome together with best wishes for your welfare."

The New Zealanders, all volunteers who have had three months of training, looked fit. Most of them were young, with a sprinkling of veterans of the last war.

Mr. Eden was cheered lustily when he told the men that in the unity of the British Commonwealth "lies the certainty of final victory and the assurance of better things to come."

Triumph of Organization

Sydney, Australia, Feb. 12—(CP) — Prime Minister Robert Menzies announced today the safe arrival of Australian and New Zealand forces at Suez, Egypt. The voyage across thousands of miles of open southern seas was proclaimed as a triumph of empire organization.

Although there was no estimate of the number of troops in today's statement, the government announced last November that an expeditionary force of 20,000 men was to leave for the front soon.

Embarkation of Australian forces, it was disclosed, had been at various ports of the Dominion, and the public was unaware of any mass movement of troops to take up positions near the war zone.

Transports carrying the New Zealanders, it was said, had joined the Australian contingent at a secret rendezvous at sea. The safe conduct of the troops was regarded as a notable feat in which the Australian navy and army shared honors with the merchant marine.

Awaited Arrival

Mr. Eden, who had flown to Cairo over the weekend, awaited the arrival of the troops at Suez. With him were Sir Miles Lampson, Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Wavell, General Officer Commanding-in-Chief in the middle east; Major-General Bernard Freyberg, V.C., General Officer Commanding the New Zealand force; Rear-Admiral Arthur Bromely of the Dominions Office and the Governor of the Suez Canal and the Military Governor of Suez.

They went on board the first transport, a New Zealander, to arrive. The arrival of the fleet galvanized the port into intense activity, the troops massed on the decks singing and waving to those ashore.

General Freyberg hailed the Dominions Secretary with the traditional Maori greeting of New Zealand—"Haeremai." He asked Mr. Eden to carry to "the great French nation" the New Zealanders' pride in having the French as Allies.

The troops disembarked and travelled to their camp. Units of the British army had sent large parties to prepare camp for their overseas guests. The site has been converted in the space of eight weeks from a waste duvoid of all habitation into a small township.

Met by General Freyberg

The first to go aboard the leading New Zealand transport was General Freyberg, hero of Gallipoli and the Somme, who had arrived previously. He gave a friendly warning to the troops that the camp to which they were going was only partly finished, but that he knew they would realize that they were now on active service.

The General, who inspected the New Zealand Expeditionary Force before leaving New Zealand, said: "I would wager with any military experience I possess backing my opinion that the men who comprise this force will strive hard to uphold the great reputation of the New Zealand Expeditionary Force in the last war. From what I have seen of them, they will not strive in vain."

Fire Causes $2,000 Damage at Bancroft

Bancroft—(Special) — Believed to have originated in partitions dividing the grocery store of Fred Shennick and the dental office of Dr. Rouse, fire caused damage estimated at $2,000 to establishments housed in the Rouse Block early Sunday morning.

Most of the damage was caused by smoke and water, as the volunteer fire brigade fought a successful fight to save the building from being completly destroyed. Handicapped by the fact that the flames had made considerable headway before their arrival the volunteers worked like veterans and succeeded in reducing the flames before they had gotten out of complete control.

Housed in the building are the Shennick Grocery Store, the dental office of Dr. Rouse, a restaurant operated by Mrs. Mona Rouse, the jewelry store of A. H. Reynolds and an insurance office of A. W. Gordon.

The greater part of the damage was caused to the stock in the Rouse grocery store and the office and dental equipment of Dr. Rouse.

The fire is said to have started in a partition dividing the grocery store and the dental office.

PULL WALRUSES' WHISKERS

Iowa City, Iowa, Feb. 12—(AP) —The walrus situation at the University of Iowa Museum called for action. So many spectators pulled the whiskers of the stuffed walruses that new sets had to be made out of wax-coated copper wire. Museum Director Homer R. Dill also ordered a glass case made for the walruses.

A. G. PARTRIDGE

Goodyear Company Show Sales Increase in 1939

More Than Earned All Dividends

Toronto, Feb. 12th.—During the year 1939 the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Canada Limited paid dividends of its shareholders to the extent of $1,586,130. Of this amount $1,286,300 was paid to common stock holders. The net earnings were equivalent to $5.25 a share. While this amount was not up to the mark set by 1938 which was $7.49 a share, it was appreciably higher than the dividends in 1937 and 1936 which were, respectively, $4.14 and $4.73. However, a comparison of the sales of the year just ended and the previous year shows that an increase was accomplished but that lessened profits were due chiefly to the favorable effect of the low market price basis of the commencing inventories in 1938 upon the showing of profits for that year.

As well as stating the above facts before the annual meeting of the company today, Mr. A. G. Partridge, president, also said in his annual report: "The operations of the combined companies for the year have resulted in a profit of $2,204,249.54 after charging all manufacturing, selling and administrative expenses, income and other taxes, but before providing for depreciation; from this amount there has been set aside a reserve of $551,747.41 for depreciation of buildings and equipment, leaving a net profit of $1,652,502.13.

A review of the Consolidated Balance Sheet discloses the strong financial position of the Company, particularly from the standpoint of working capital which amounted to $8,940,796.72 at December 31st., 1939. The companies had no bank indebtedness and the cash on hand and call loans and Government Bonds aggregated $3,324,281.72; the cash balances alone amounted to $1,445,178.90 exceeding by $312,876.29 all current liabilities of $489,152.61 and the dividend of $643,150.000 payable on the Common stock, which was provided for in the Balance Sheet although not paid out until January 22nd., 1940. The financial position thus summarized is after paying or providing for dividends aggregating $1,586,130.63, represented by 5% or $299,830.63 on the Preferred stock and the usual dividends aggregating $2.50 per share on 257,260 shares of Common stock amounting to $643,150.00 plus the extra dividend of $2.50 per share amounting to $643,150.00, a total of $1,286,300.00.

The total current assets amount to $10,073,099.33 compared with current liabilities of $1,132,302.61, including the dividend payable on the Common stock.

The total amount of all taxes paid or to be paid by or through your companies and applicable to the year 1939 amounted to $1,291,563.80 in comparison with $1,256,076.74 in 1938.

During the past year your Company has made a considerable number of improvements to its plant equipment at New Toronto and Bowmanville, with a view to extending the Company's productive facilities and effecting economies in its operations.

The use of pneumatic tire equipment on farm implements and tractors is developing at a rapid rate and making mechanized farm equipment possible on a steadily increasing number of farms. The use of such equipment will contribute greatly towards bringing the living conditions of industrial and agricultural workers into better balance, as it will tend to give the farmer advantages in lowering the cost of his production, which will help to offset the difference between what he has to pay for articles he needs and the amount he receives for the things he produces.

The incidence of war has brought many new and unusual problems, particularly the one of increased cost of raw materials and operation as well as the prospect of increased taxation. This makes it difficult to submit any accurate forecast of prospects for 1940. However, the strong financial position of the Company should enable us to adequately meet these problems and contribute in no small measure towards the great task which lies before us all of forwarding the winning of the war.

The company has met with success in the introduction of two new products, namely Pliofilm and Airfoam, which have a wide variety of uses in many industries. Its recent development, (Lifeguards) has definitely received the endorsation of the motoring public which is reflected in mounting sales.

ARMY IN INDIA BEING MODERNIZED

Great Ordnance Factories Turn Out War Material at Great Speed

New Delhi, India, Feb. 12.—(CP)—The Indian Army, whose peacetime strength, of 150,000 men has been increased, is undergoing a process of modernization and becoming more and more an efficient fighting force with equipment specially designed for tropical service.

Many thousands of Indian soldiers were brought into full army service during the first month of the war. They included newly-enlisted men, reservists and members of mobilized territorial units. This large intake is regarded as adequate for the present.

Sir Robert Cassels, the commander-in-chief, said in a broadcast that "India's greatest asset is a large supply of the finest types of fighting men". But she also is producing munitions. The Great Ordnance factories are turning out material at a speed and in quality which, a few months ago, would hardly have been contemplated.

Munitions Production

When expansion schemes are complete, it is anticipated that India will become an important centre of munitions production, able to meet her own needs and, to a considerable extent, those of the Allies.

India occupies a commanding position as a reservoir of men and material. The frontiers may be said to lie at Singapore, in Egypt and along the Suez canal. Before the war contingents of British and Indian troops were sent to Egypt, Aden and Singapore as a "precautionary measure".

Indian troops have arrived in France but they are non-combatant units. If the call for military aid should come, authorities believe it will be as generous as 25 years ago when 1,500,000 men of the Indian army served in Europe, Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, Egypt, East Africa and Palestine.

Effect of Air Training Plan On Canadian Industry Will Be Tremendous Says Howe

Pembroke, Ont., Feb. 12.— (CP)—Canada's war industries are expanding with aviation companies steadily increasing production and munition and gun factories soon to be busy Transport Minister Howe said here.

The effect of the British Commonwealth air training plan on Canadian industry will be tremendous and will create a shortage of mechanics, he said in a speech Saturday. Every man and woman in Canada who can be spared from his or her ordinary occupation would be required shortly in war industries.

The minister spoke at the North Renfrew Liberal convention when R. M. Warren, who has represented the riding in parliament for the last three years, was selected as the Liberal candidate. Mr. Warren was assured of the support of Dr. J. C. Bradley, Member of the Ontario Legislature and a supporter of Premier Mitchell Hepburn.

Dr. Bradley said there were differences between the Hepburn and King governments but in view of the alternative a Union Government under Conservative Leader Manion, practically every private Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature would support the Liberal candidates in the Federal election.

Unwarranted Language Claim

Mr. Howe denied Dr. Manion's claim that the King government turned down a British plan to establish air training schools in Canada prior to the war and accused the Conservative leader of "extreme and unwarranted" language

When a British representative came to Canada a year or two ago to inquire into the feasibility of training pilots here he was assured of the co-operation of the Canadian government but was told Canada desired to direct any schools established. The day had passed when the British government should own land and direct operations in Canada.

The British government replied that this was satisfactory and at the appropriate time a plan would be submitted. The first plan was submitted after the start of the war, was promptly accepted and was now well advanced.

Air school buildings were being erected, land was being purchased in every province and the first heavy deliveries of 5,000 airplanes ordered for the scheme would start in May.

Musical Composition Composed by Reg. Hinchey Dedicated to Leo Riggs

Belleville's Leading Musician Honored by Having Overture Named After Him

PLAYED AT CONCERT

The Belleville Municipal Band and a large crowd of residents comprising the audience at the band concert given in the McCarthy Theatre last night, paid impressive tribute to the memory of the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, who died in a Montreal hospital last night.

The strains of the "Dead March in Saul" rang out in the auditorium, followed by two minutes silence with the audience standing.

A feature of the program proper was the first rendition of the newest Reg. Hinchey composition, the overture "Riggsonia" dedicated to Belleville's outstanding musician Leo Riggs. The band was admirably conducted by Conductor Fred Jobson, in this number, after which Mr. Riggs, who was in the audience stood up to receive the plaudits of the audience. He made appropriate response in the typical Riggs' manner.

Another outstanding feature of the concert were the fine solos rendered by Mr. Harold Barrett, prominent city baritone. Mr. Barrett's efforts received the well-merited acclaim of the large number of music lovers present.

Classical and other selections were included in the balance of the program and the popular "Oh Johnny" received prolonged applause accompanied by insisted demands for encores on the part of the audiece.

Mayor G. E. Thompson acted as chairman for the function.

Montreal, Feb. 12—(CP) — Funeral service will be held today for Mrs. Alice Mary Purcell, 47, wife of Major John E. Purcell of the Canadian Corps of Commissionaires. A native of London, Ont., Mrs. Purcell died Saturday after an illness of more than a year.

Montreal Broadcast Pays Tribute to Flying Officer John White

Tribute to the late Flying Officer Johnny White, son of Mrs. S. J. Price, MacDonald avenue, who is believed to have lost his life while conducting air operations near England, was paid over a Montreal radio station, CFCF last night, according to Mr. Leo Flagler of this city.

In Montreal at the home of a friend yesterday, Mr. Flagler was surprised to hear the impressive tributes paid to the Belleville pilot who incidentally, was one of Mr. Flagler's chums at the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

The announcer gave a detailed description of "Johnny's" early life in Belleville, his efforts to secure air training and his ultimate success in the R.A.F. after he had travelled to England via a cattle boat. The broadcast known as "Personalities of the Week" was fifteen minutes in length, and devoted entirely to the late flying officer.

Toe Almost Severed While Chopping Wood

Tweed—(Special) — Elmer McCaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCaw of Lodgeroom, met with a painful accident while chopping wood at his home on Friday. The axe slipped off a block of wood which he was cutting and almost completely severed the small toe of his right foot. He was brought to the office of a Tweed physician for attention.

Misfortune seems to dog the footsteps of this young man as he lost parts of several fingers a few years ago from an exploding dynamite cap.

SOVIET INFANTRY ATTACKS WANE BEFORE FINN LINE

'RUSSIANS TIRED'

Red Army Infantrymen Ride Atop' Tanks And Drop Off to Fight

(By Thoms Hawkins)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

On the Mannerheim Line, Summa Sector, Feb. 12.—(AP)— Confident Finnish officers declared today the power of the Red Army's infantry attacks was waning and predicted an early end to the battle on this front.

Although Soviet Russia for eleven days has thrown her greatest offensive might into her effort to crack the Mannerheim Line here, it still is intact as far as this writer could observe.

Within 1 and 1-2 miles of Summa pivotal point of the Soviet offensive, where I visited Finnish positions in a tour of the front afoot and by sled, I found no indication that the Finns' steel-and-concrete line had been pierced.

Almost 2 Shells a Second

(In Moscow, however, a Russian communique claimed sixteen Finnish fortifications captured. This, apparently, was in addition to thirteen "artillery forts" which the Russians previously had reported captured and which the Finns denied had been taken.)

The Russian onslaughts continued with infantry attacking under the protection of artillery barrages which rained shells at a rate of almost two a second.

But, said a Finnish commander, "tiredness on the Russian side is apparent". Despite such a novel equipment as steel shields and tanks which spit flaming naphtha, he said Soviet troops were protected inadequately from Finnish fire and easier to stop than earlier in the battle.

Surprise Attempted

"The Soviet High Command," he said, describing the fighting, "seems definitely to have counted on a surprise attack in the Summa sector.

"The enemy is using the best of all the means at its disposal, not only heavy artillery, but also a great amount of bombing planes in conjunction with many tanks, armored sledges and armor-sheltered infantry.

"There has been no chance to count enemy losses, but last Friday on a 300-foot stretch 150 Russians were killed by our first line. The total killed has been many thousands of Russians.

"The Russians have been given huge amounts of vodka to drink before fighting. We have found kegs of it on the battlefields. My men saw for sure one day Soviets shot from behind, we believe by political troops forcing the fight."

(A contrary picture has been given by communiques of the Russian command's Leningrad headquarters. Throughout the fighting they have acknowledged no massed Russian attack on the Karelian Isthmus or any major battle telling only of occasional local clashes between scouts and advanced patrols).

INQUEST OPENED ON WM. TURNER

Preliminary Hearing Held at Hospital And Adjourned Till Wednesday

The preliminary inquest looking into the death of William Turner, Trenton, opened at the Belleville General Hospital, where he died this morning. Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson was in charge with Acting Crown Attorney Ormond Butler conducting the investigation. Miss Lucille Bertram, hospital supervisor, identified the body and following preliminary arrangements the proceedings were adjourned until Wednesday. The body was then released for burial The late Mr. Turner was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital on Feb. 2nd last after having been struck by an automobile in Trenton. The driver was not held at the time.

The coroner's jury, as impanelled by Sergeant Arthur Booth, was composed of Messrs. M. Davison, foreman, A. Wilkinson, G. Blue, W. Harden and Don Cook. The adjourned inquest will be held at the Court House.

EMPIRE TRIBUTE MAY BE PAID IN ANCIENT ABBEY

Eldest Son of Late Lord Tweedsmuir Carries on Bravely With Duties

MESSAGES OF REGRET

(By Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, England, Feb. 12 —(CP-Cable) — Despite consuming grief over the loss of his beloved father who had been his closest companion, counsellor and friend, the new Lord Tweedsmuir carried on bravely today with his military duties at the headquarters of the First Canadian Division here. He received messages of sympathy from all parts of the world.

The tall, distinguished-looking heir to the title so proudly born by Canada's late Governor-General remained on duty at his own request. He reported earlier than his colleagues, hiding his feelings and the strain of long wakeful nights behind a calm soldierly exterior.

In the red brick billet where we have bunked together as roommates, and known as Chilblain Castle, John Buchan, as he is still called by his more intimate colleagues, told me he would remain with the Canadian forces on the headquarters staff. It is his own desire and he is satisfied it also would be his father's wish.

Tonight the lieutenant leaves on an indefinite furlough to attend to immediate family affairs. He will meet his brother, William Buchan, who is serving in the Royal Air Force. Their sister, Mrs. Alice Fairfax-Lucy, and brother-in-law, are expected to sail for Canada at the earliest possible time but it is not believed John and William will accompany them.

There was a move afoot today to arrange a memorial service for the popular governor-general in Westminister Abbey at which representatives of all the Canadian forces would join with this nation in solemn tribute.

Among many cablegrams which the 28-year-old successor to the title received was a message of sympathy from Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King on behalf of the government and people of Canada. Defence Minister Norman Rodgers sent condolences from the Defence Forces of the Dominion while others came from brother officers in the Governor-General's Foot Guards, relatives and friends.

Few young men have had such eventful careers as the second Baron Tweedsmuir. He is a Democrat to the hilt and neither rank nor title could change him.

Meeting Life "in the Raw"

"To enjoy life to the full one must go out and meet it in the raw," he remarked the other night in a fireside chat. "I like to mix and work with men who know what trial and hardship can mean."

That has been his abiding philosophy since he launched into the world for himself. He has worked as fourth deckhand on a fishing trawler in the heavy seas of the North Atlantic. He has hunted walrus amid the icefloes of the Hudson Straits, slept in igloos of Baffin land, where he worked among the Eskimos as an official of the Hudson's Bay Company. There he and his companions built the first timber house and covered more than 1,900 miles of ice and snow by dog team.

No Commercial Fishing In Quebec Waters

Montreal, Feb. 12—(CP) — The Quebec Government will prohibit commercial fishing in all lakes and fresh water streams in the province to guard against depletion of island fisheries, Hon. P. E. Cote, Minister of Lands and Forests and Game and Fisheries, announced today.

The minister said the ban would apply to all fishing of fresh waters with seines or any kind of traps. It will apply also to commercial fishing of St. Lawrence water where tides are not felt.

WAR BRIEFS

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP)—Authoritative sources said today Russia and Germany concluded a new and more extensive trade agreement which will be announced officially later today, or tomorrow.

While authorized sources were declined to give the details of the agreement, they claimed it would be 'of far reaching importance, synchronizing the needs of both sides for supplies.

Group of Supersalesmen to Strangle Nazi Trade, Find New Markets For Britain

London, Feb. 12 (CP)—A program to organize a group of supersalesmen around the world to fight Great Britain's economic battle against Germany was drawn up today for the new export council of economic experts as its first full meeting.

Headed by Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, Board of Trade President, and Robert S. Hudson, Overseas Trade Secretary, the Council's two tasks are to strangle German trade and find new markets for British goods.

The salesmen would be chosen specially for their drive, tact and knowledge of foreign languages.

Britain is buying large quantities of goods from the Balkans, not so much for her own needs, but to deprive Germany of them. Extension of export credits has been proposed as an inducement to manufacturers to increase their trade.

Nine Nazi U-Boats Destroyed In Trap Set by Royal Navy

Daily News in Copyright Story Makes This Statement Today

FLEET WITHDRAWN

New York, Feb. 12—(CP)— The Daily News, in a copyright story, says today that "at least nine" German U-boats have been destroyed in a trap set by the Royal Navy.

The story, attributed to unidentified Canadian sources, says that some of Germany's ablest submarine commanders had been lost in the vessels caught in the deliberately-set trap.

The trap was made after Lieut.-Commander Gunther Prien became a Nazi hero for penetrating the Scapa Flow naval base and torpedoing the battleship Royal Oak.

The News says that Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, remarked after Prien's feat that "now they (the Nazi U-boat commanders) will all want to try it," and added: "Let them come."

The plan, according to the News report, worked this way:

The fleet was withdrawn from Scapa Flow to the Firth of Clyde, on Scotland's west coast, and the Firth of Forth, on the east. "And there, Nazi U-boat commanders discovered one by one that the British weren't bothering about keeping the booms closed at the harbor mouths.

"One by one, overlooking the incredibility of such evident stupidity Nazi commanders succumbed to the temptation to out-Prien Prien. One by one—although on Christmas Day two tried it—they worked their ships through the open booms into the jaws of death.

"What the Germans should have realized was that both harbors were 'wired for sound.' Electrical ears picked up their approach and progress. The raiders' positions were always exactly known. Once inside the trap, the booms closed and death-laden destroyers rushed the submarines' final rendezvous. No word went back to warn other Nazi commanders."

SNOW FALLS ON WEST FRONT

Just east of the Moselle River, one of the most active sectors since the war began, German troops launched a small attack against a French outpost. No attempt was made at artillery preparation. Small forces tried to encircle the post but were forced back without actually arriving at the point of the direct assault.

Artillery activity was reported from north of Bitche along the Vosges sector, where German and French batteries exchanged quite heavy fire.

Rev. C. E. Coughlin to Answer Critics

Detroit, Feb. 12—(AP) — Rev. Charles E. Coughlin will answer his critcs in a book to be published this week and distributed directly from his shrine of the Little Flower in Royal Oak.

Announcement of the forthcoming publication was made during Father Coughlin's regular Sunday radio hour. It is being issued, the announcer said, because neither the radio nor the Press is "the proper vehicle to carry any comments of such a nature.

The book will deal in part with complaints lodged with the Department of Justice by the Jewish People's Committee.

No explanation was given of Father Coughlin's failure to speak last Sunday. The announcer called it regrettable that a number of rumors began to circulate.

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 13 (CP)—Lord Tweedsmuir came for the last time to Parliament Hill today, to a hushed and sorrowing Capital where high and low alike will pay their final respects to a Governor-General beloved of all Canada.

Promptly at noon the funeral train arrived from Montreal where his Excellency died Sunday night after a concussion received in a fall at Rideau Hall just one week ago.

Casket Rests in Senate Chamber

Fifteen minutes later the casket lay on a dais in the centre of the Senate Chamber, to remain there until the state funeral tomorrow afternoon.

Under a cloudless sky with a brilliant sun shining warmly through the frosty air on a perfect Winter setting, the black and purple draped train drew into Union Station where a waiting throng was held back to make way for the official party, assembled there for this last sad homecoming of the 64-year-old Governor-General.

Official Party at Station

Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff, administrator of the government since Lord Tweedsmuir's death, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, officers of the diplomatic corps in Ottawa and many others high in church and state were at the station.

Others in the official party at the station included all members of the Federal cabinet who were able to be in Ottawa, representatives of the Supreme Court of Canada, all the diplomatic corps including the High Commissioner for the United Kingdom, the new United States minister, and the ministers of France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Japan.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Flexible ice! As the temperature drops, all surface water becomes colder because it is in contact with the colder air. It therefore becomes denser and sinks and is replaced by warmer water from the lower levels. This process continues until the surface water is cooled down to 39 degrees. Upon further cooling the top surface water expands, that is, becomes lighter and stays on top. When 32 degrees is reached it freezes. When salt water freezes, ice crystals are formed free of salt. But salt is often held between the individual crystals, and this renders a sheet of ice a few inches thick flexible to the extent that it is not broken up by the action of a moderate swell.

DIET MEMBER CRITICIZES ARMY ABOUT EXPENSES

Declares Secrecy Surrounding Military Expenses is Making People "Uneasy"

DEMAND REFUSED

Tokyo, Feb. 13—(AP)—For the second time in ten days, a member of the Japanese Diet (parliament) criticized the army today by declaring that secrecy surrounding military expense is making the people "uneasy."

War Minister Shunroku Hata refused a demand by Ryozo Makino, a member of the Seiyukai, for a detailed explanation of war expenses. The debate became so heated that the stenographic record was suspended.

RECRUIT 10,000 MORE FISHERMEN

Admiralty Announces Project to Meet Menace of Nazi Mine-Laying Craft

London, Feb. 13—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that it was recruiting 10,000 additional fishermen for naval patrol duty to meet the menace of German mine-laying aircraft and magnetic mines.

Since the war started 10,000 fishermen have entered the navy to aid in the fight Britain is waging against submarines and mines, surface raiders and planes which have bombed and machine-gunned fishing boats and lightships.

About 300 fishermen are being recruited weekly, a naval source said.

The age limits are 18 to 45 but experienced men up to 66 have been accepted. One man of 72 was reported found in the ranks.

Rates of Pay for Service

Pay ranges from the equivalent of $5 weekly for seamen to about $10 weekly for enginemen. Additional allowances are made for dependants or when the seaman is employed in minesweeping or anti-submarine work.

At the start of the war the navy used many trawlers under charter contracts covering vessels and crews, but as the contracts expired the admiralty took over the ships and enlisted the crews.

"Many new vessels are being built and others are being taken up," one source said.

ANZACS ENCAMP ON ANCIENT TRAIL

Famous War Songs of Last War Echo Across the Desert

Kantara, Egypt, Feb. 13.—(CP-Reuters)—Units of the Second Australian Imperial force made camp at this ancent caravan trail city today, ready to take over possible war time assignments in the middle east.

Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden was expected here Thursday on an inspection tour. Active preparations indicated he would find everything ready.

Songs the Anzacs made famous during the last war echoed across the desert as the leading Australian transport crept through the darkness last night to anchor here. Then came the tramp of boots as the men, each carrying a small white duffel bag, were disembarked.

Although it was midnight when the tranports arrived, Kantara, which lies astride communication lines between Northern Egypt and Palestine, was alive with excited Arabs.

Of the arrivals here, Staff Sergeant Stan Smith of Sydney was the only original member of the Third Brigade of Anzacs who forced a landing at Gallipoli during the last war. A man of giant stature he celebrates his 52nd birthday tomorrow and has a son in training at home.

Camp arrangements here were made on the same extensive scale as those made for the troops which arrived yesterday at Suez.

LOWEST TEMPERATURE RECORDED

Amsterdam, Feb. 13 —(CP)— The lowest temperatures ever recorded in the Netherlands were reported today by the Royal Meteorological Station, with 11.2 degrees below zero at the airdrome of Eelde, in the northeast, and a country-wide average of 1.4 above zero.

TELEPHONE CORD GIVES FIRE ALARM

New Britain, Conn., Feb. 13—(AP)—A fire here sent in its own alarm. A telephone operator noticed a light flickering on her switchboard and notified police headquarters. Cuts Little Muscle to Relieve Indigestion and Gastric Ailments

Venice, Fla., Feb. 13 —(AP) By cutting a little muscle which controls the flow of bile into the intestines, a Canadian physician reported today he had found a way to relieve indigestion and gastric ailments that rest, diet and medication will not cure.

Before the International College of Surgeons here Dr. Otto Demuth of Vancouver, B.C., explained his instrument and technique for severing the sphincter of oddi, which rings the inside of a duct leading from the pancreas, liver and gall bladder to the small intestines.

In certain cases of chronic indigestion and diseases of the gall bladder and liver, the sphincter tightens and cuts off the supply of juices needed to complete digestion of food.

Dr. Demuth said he had used the technique successfully since 1933. The instrument is a small knife concealed in a tube. It is inserted into the duct to the point where the blade, when expelled, will sever the muscle. Delicate handling is necessary in the operation because the muscle is hard to reach and a small artery which lies near the sphincter must not be cut, Dr. Demuth said.

104 MISSING AS ORAZIO BURNS

The Italian liner Orazio, which was en route to Barcelona, Spain, is not much more than a smoking hulk as she burns fiercely 38 miles south of Toulon, France. Of the 412 aboard, 104 were lost. The ship had been held up two hours by French search for contraband, which caused Mussolini illogically to declare France was to blame for the deaths; that the two hours would have given the ship time to reach a port.

ONTARIO HOUSE STANDS RECESSED UNTIL THURSDAY

Resolution Unanimously Passed Expressing Deep Sorrow in Death of Lord Tweedsmuir

BUDGET READY

Toronto, Feb. 13. —(CP)—Out of respect to the memory of Lord Tweedsmuir, the Ontario Legislature stood recessed today until Thursday. When the House reconvenes again it will be to hear the budget address by Premier Mitchell Hepburn who as provincial treasurer, will give his accounting of Ontario's finances.

The budget address was scheduled for today. Up until the time the House sat yesterday it was thought it would be. But Premier Hepburn announced it was thought fitting to adjourn until after the funeral of His Excellency.

In formal resolution, the legislature placed its sorrow on record. Concluding paragraph of the resolution read:

"The manner in which Lord Tweedsmuir identified himself with the life and interests of this country during his tenure of office endeared him to the Canadian people in a marked degree and his personal qualities of heart and mind secured for him a respect and affection which will never be effaced from Canadian hearts".

Those who knew Lord Tweedsmuir appreciated a kindly nature and a brilliant mind, said Mr. Hepburn, moving the resolution. His record as a public servant and of his contribution to England's literature would live forever.

"The commander-in-chief of Canada's defence forces has died on active service", said Col. Drew. "He gave his life for this country just as much as if he had fallen on the field of battle. Only the highest type of spiritual courage and physical endurance sustained him in his great task when failing health must have made the heavy responsibilities of his high office an almost intolerable burden."

"He remained at all times the lovable and friendly Scotchman who conducted himself with the modest simplicity of the son of a Presbyterian minister," said Col. Drew.

Perhaps the greatest tragedy, continued Col. Drew, was that Canada would not have the benefit of the conclusions Lord Tweedsmuir would have been able to draw from his comprehensive study of every part of Canada.

THYSSEN UNAWARE OF NAZI DECREE

Says if Report of Disenfranchisement is True, It is Plan to Get Him Out of Reichstag

Geneva, Feb. 13—(AP) — Fritz Thyssen, early supporter of Adolf Hitler and once one of the wealthiest men in Europe, said today he had not been notified officially of a Nazi decree depriving him of German citizenship.

"If it is true, it may be an effort to get rid of me as a member of the Reichstag," he told reporters.

The decree depriving Thyssen and his wife of German citizenship was published in the official German Gazette in Berlin yesterday.

The one-time owner of the greatest steel corporation in Europe and his wife entered Switzerland last November. His immense holdings were confiscated by the German government shortly afterward.

Thyssen has refused to explain his break with Hitler. German authorities also have been silent.

Tributes From Distinguished Men

Premier Thane A. Campbell of Prince Edward Island paid tribute today to Lord Tweedsmuir as a man who "endeared himself to every Canadian by his renown as a scholar and writer, and by the gracious charm of his personality."

Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia said today the death of Lord Tweedsmuir removed "one of the very greatest of our Governors-General.

Lieutenant - Governor Murray MacLaren of New Brunswick, paying tribute today to Lor' Tweedsmuir, said the Viceroy "brought great distinction to the office of Governor-General of Canada.

S. J. Hungerford, President of the Canadian National Railways and Trans-Canada Air Lines, said at Montreal Lord Tweedsmuir held the esteem and sincere affection of the Canadian people because of his personal character.

Bench Joins in Mourning

The Bench and Bar joined in mourning the death of Lord Tweedsmuir when the Ontario Supreme Court opened at Ottawa today.

With all members of the Bar standing Mr. Justice J. Keiller MacKay said:

"We open this court with full and overflowing hearts. The Governor-General is dead and Canada and indeed the commonwealth has suffered an irreparable loss. We shall continue to cherish in grateful memory the inexhaustible richness of his life and the beauty and nobility of his character."

Principal F. Cyril James of McGill university said today that Lord Tweedsmuir in his capacity as Visitor was an integral part of the university life, "spontaneous in his help and cordial in his friendship."

"God gave us memory that we might have roses in December, and the thankful recollections of a tireless public servant mingle with the memories of a brilliant author and an unforgettable personality," he said.

Samuel Bronfman, President of the Canadian Jewish Congress, said today at Montreal, Canadian Jewry "bows its head in sorrow as we realized what a tragic loss the Dominion of Canada and the Empire have suffered through the death of Lord Tweedsmuir."

Sailor on British Cruiser States Vessel Trapped by Two Other Cruisers

Rio De Janeiro, Feb. 13 (AP) — Rear-Admiral Sir Henry Harwood told The Associated Press today that the crew of the German freighter Wakama, after setting their ship afire yesterday off the Brazilian coast, had been taken aboard a British cruiser.

Sir Henry, Commander of British naval forces in the South Atlantic, said in an interview that 10 officers and 36 men of the Wakama's crew had been picked up in lifeboats by one of the British patrol vessels.

Sir Henry's flagship, the cruiser Hawkins, entered port here last night. The cruisers Shropshire and Dorsetshire yesterday were in the waters off Brazil where the Wakama was intercepted and fired by her own men.

Menace to Navigation

Because she was considered a menace to navigation, the burning Wakama was sunk, Sir Henry said, by the British cruiser that intercepted her. He would not say which

MAN SUSPECTED IN MURDER CASE COMMITS SUICIDE

Mike Antamanchuck, Winnipeg, Cornered by Posse of Detectives

TWO OTHERS HELD

Winnipeg, Feb. 13 (CP) — Mike Antamonchuk, 26 said by police chief George Smith to have been the chief suspect in the slaying of a Winnipeg policeman here Saturday, committed suicide early today after he was cornered by a posse of detectives.

Constable John McDonald, 26, was fatally wounded and Constable Norman Stewart suffered a hand wound when they cornered a band of safe crackers Saturday in the Radio Building in downtown Winnipeg. Police are holding two suspects, but refused to divulge the names.

A posse of detectives trapped Antamonchuk in the Brant block shortly before 6 a.m. EST. armed with shotguns and rifles the police surrounded the building and waited. Antamonchuk was ordered to come out. A shot was heard inside instead and police rushed in. They found Antamonchuk slumped on the floor, dead from a self-inflicted bullet wound.

BODY DRAGGED HALF A MILE

Grace Aston, 45, Toronto, Found Dead After Being Struck by Motor Car

Toronto, Feb. 13—(CP)—An unexplained accident early today brought death to Grace Aston of Toronto and caused severe injuries to Frank Lawrence of Toronto. They were struck by an automobile.

Body of Miss Aston, about 45, was found on street car tracks at Dovercourt Road and College St. and it is believed she was dragged under an automobile or transported in some other way from Lansdowne Avenue and Bloor Street, where the accident occurred, more than a half mile away.

Lawrence, in a dazed condition, wandered from the scene of the accident. He apparently walked to her home where residents had him removed to hospital. Lawrence told hospital officials he and Miss Aston were crossing Bloor street, when hit by a car that did not stop.

The woman's body was found by Louis Somers of Toronto who saw an object on the road he believed to be a sack. When he discovered it was a body, he called police. The right shoe, hat and purse was missing and the right side of the body showed signs of being dragged. Later, a woman's hat and purse were found some distance away.

Allies Watch U.S. Exports to Neutrals Whose Trade With Nazis Doubles

Paris, Feb. 13 —(AP)— French military sources say Allied blockade officials will concentrate their investigations on United States exports to neutral countries bordering Germany on the grounds that much of these exports may be destined for Germany.

These sources cite figures indicating exports to neutrals around Germany have doubled and trebled pre-war figures.

Norway is said to have received $15,000,000 worth of American goods in September, October and November of 1939, compared with $5,500,000 worth in the same period during 1938.

Other neutrals' figures cited for the same comparative periods include, Switzerland $7,000,000 and $300,000; Sweden $35,000,000 and $18,000,000; Baltic States $31,000,000 and $21,000,000 and Italy $17,000,000 and $14,000,000.

Blockade officials are said to regard the increases as more than just coincidence, although part of them may be explained by the war's forcing neutrals to buy goods in the United States formerly obtained from belligerents.

Soviet Detachment Driven Back Beyond Frontier

Other Assaults Near Lake Ladoga and in Kuhmo Sector Also Repulsed With Heavy Losses

100 SLEDGES CAPTURED

Finns Deny Russian Report 32 "Defensive Fortifications" Had Been Captured on the Mannerheim Line

Helsingfors, Feb 13—(AP)— The Finns announced today that their army had repulsed heavy Soviet attacks in the Summa sector of the Karelian Isthmus and also beaten back Soviet assaults northeast of Lake Ladoga and in the Kuhmo sector further north.

In repulsing the Russians on the isthmus, where a big Soviet offensive was in its 13th day today, the Finns yesterday "made several successful counter attacks" the army communique said.

(A Red army communique issued in Moscow covering this action said that 32 "defensive fortifications" had been wrested from the Finns on Monday and that much war material had been captured.)

Communique Issued

Today's communique said there was fighting yesterday also at Muolajaervi and at Taipale on the isthmus.

In the Pitkaranta Islands northeast of Lake Ladoga the Finns said they "destroyed" a Russian column of 100 sledges, and they reported capturing several Russian machine-gun nests in the Kuhmo region.

At Raate, the Finns said, they drove a Russian detachment "back beyond the frontier."

The Red Army blasted away at the Mannerheim Line in the Summa sector for the 13th day today with indications that reinforcements were being thrown into the attack.

FORMER DEPUTY MINISTER DIES

Dr. J. A. Amyot, 72, Retired in 1933 Due to Failing Health

Ottawa, Feb. 13—(CP)—Dr. J. A. Amyot, former Deputy Minister of Health for Canada, died here today after a lengthy illness.

Dr. Amyot was 72, a native of Toronto and a descendant of a distinguished French family which came to Canada four centuries ago.

He was educated in Toronto and graduated in medicine from the University of Toronto in 1891, later becoming house surgeon in the Toronto General Hospital and after that joining the staff of Toronto University as demonstrator in pathology.

He retired as Deputy Minister of Health for Canada in 1933 due to failing health.

Leader in Preventive Medicine

He was a leader in preventive medicine and sanitation and was almost as well known in the United States as in his native Canada, having done noteworthy work in 1912 and 1913 in investigating pollution of the Great Lakes as a member of the international joint commission.

He took a leading part in introducing into Canada the filtration and chlorination of water and the pasteurization of milk, decreasing materially, according to medical men, the number of deaths from typhoid in Canada.

Dr. Amyot went to England with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in 1915 as a member of the staff of No. 4, General Hospital, University of Toronto and won immediate recognition.

Funeral Service For Lord Tweedsmuir To be Broadcast

The C.B.C. also may broadcast the funeral procession to and from the church with one or two observers describing the scene.

The service is scheduled to start around 2.15 p.m. EST.

FRENCH GUARD SOVIET EMBASSY

Regulations Go No Farther Than Those Imposed on French Embassy in Moscow.

Paris, Feb. 13—(AP)—The Foreign Ministry announced today that a special police watch had been installed over the Soviet Embassy in Paris in disregard of its diplomatic immunity because of its "relations" with the outlawed French Communist Party.

Authorities asserted surveillance of the Embassy in Paris went no further than regulations already imposed by Russia on the French Embassy in Moscow. They accused the Russians of questioning, searching and even photographing visitors to the French diplomatic headquarters.

Police raided the Soviet Trade Bureau here last week and ransacked its files. A Soviet protest against the incident was rejected by the French government.

Posting of a guard around the Embassy was declared to have "no political significance" in regard to Russian-French relations but feeling between the two powers has cooled sharply since the Nazi-Soviet accord was concluded last August.

After war broke out France outlawed the Communist party, conducted widespread raids on Communist organization headquarters and jailed several Communist members of the Chamber of Deputies.

CHIMNEY STACK SAVES MAN DROP OF FIFTY FEET

Galt, Ont. Feb. 13 (CP)—William Mcauslan saved himself from a 50-foot fall by grabbing the chimney stack as he slid down the ice coated roof of Dickson school here yesterday.

Clinging there precariously, he was unable to attract attention of passerby for some time. Lightly clad, he wrapped around him the Union Jack which he had been proceeding to set at half-mast in memory of Lord Tweedsmuir, when he slipped. Rescue finally was effected by a member of the fire department called to the scene. Today Mcauslan was recuperating from shock and severe chill.

Annual Meeting Held by Cannifton United Church

The Congregation meeting of the Cannifton United Church was held on Wednesday evening, February 7. A number gathered in the Sunday School rooms where a bounteous supper was served, after which the meeting was opened with Rev. A. Armstrong presiding.

All joined in singing "Jesus Calls us o'er the Tumult" followed by prayer by the pastor.

Reports of the different departments were then given.

Lyle Armstrong reported that the Young People's Union is in a promising condition.

In the absence of the Secretary, Mr. Chas. Mills, reported for the Sunday School. There was a small balance.

Mr. Douglas Brenton, superintendent, in his remarks on the work, pointed out that it often happens there is an ebb and flow in attendance and that the smaller attendance of the last couple of years appears to be the ebb.

The reports for the Mission Band and also for the "Alert" Bible Class were given by Mrs. Gerald Brenton. The Band had raised $10 and the "Alerts" showed a balance, after contributing to church funds and giving gifts to the sick.

The "Others" Bible class reported a helpful year. Sick members had been remembered by cards, gifts and flowers or boxes of fruit.

The report for the Woman's Association was given by Mrs. Putman The Society has had a very active year; has contributed quite a sum to the upkeep of the church and has a balance of $125.

Mrs. H. Empson reported that the W.M.S. ahd sent $143 to the Presbyterial Treasurer, a ten per cent increase over last year.

Mr. E. Brenton for the trustees reported all accounts paid and a small balance on hand.

The stewards were re-elected and Mr. Harry Pound was added to the Board of Trustees.

Mr. Sydmer Bird was added to the session.

Votes of appreciation were passed to the presidents of the W.A. and of the W.M.S.; to Mrs. Cole for opening her home so frequently for quiltings; to Mr. E. Brenton; envelope steward; to the pianist and the choir and to all workers who had given freely of their time and effort.

A vote of thanks to Rev. and Mrs. Armstrong was passed and regret expressed that Mr. Armstrong's health made it necessary for him to give up the active work for the present.

Though no formal vote was taken, all feel that much is due to the faithfulness of the caretaker, Mrs. Kellar.

During the evening, Jean Matthews gave a couple of readings and Marguerite Armstrong a piano solo.

It is felt that the year has been quite satisfactory and it is hoped more members of the congregation will avail themselves of the opportunity of becoming better acquainted with their church and its activities generally.

Faraday School Trustees Accept Teacher's Resignation

Bancroft, Feb. 13—Special—There will be a new school teacher at the little schoolhouse just west of Bancroft within the near future.

Trustees at a special meeting last night decided to accept the resignation of Howard Shelton, twenty-six-year-old pedagogue central figure in the Faraday Township's schoolhouse drama on Feb. 6 when infuriated pupils attacked him with rulers, pointers, inkwells and textbooks following his new regulation of opening school fifteen minutes earlier.

Since that day, the schoolhouse has been closed, and the pupils enjoying an unexpected winter holiday.

Expel Alleged Ringleaders

But the victorious "infantry" did did not emerge scathless from the schoolhouse skirmish. Trustees likewise decided last night to expel two alleged ringleaders of the affray for a period of two weeks, starting with the arrival of a teacher.

In the meantime they are advertising for a new teacher, and looking for a "supply" until the new one arrives.

Mrs. Laundry's Mother Dies

Mr. Emerson Laundry of Bancroft received word last Friday morning of the death of Mrs. Laundry's mother who resides in Simcoe, Ontario. Mrs. Laundry had previously left for Simcoe last Thursday morning to attend her mother who then was reported gravely ill.

Mr. Gerald Towle who motored to Toronto with Mrs. Towle last week is remaining in the city for a week's course in hairdressing.

Mr. Jack Russell was a week end visitor in Toronto.

VETERANS READY FOR CAMPAIGN TO RAISE $2,000

Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch, Voted $200 to Cause

LARGE COMMITTEE

Last night in their club rooms on Front Street, officials and members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 201 left no doubts as to their intention of supporting the drive of the newly formed Canadian Legion War Service Inc. In fact they did it in a manner that was befitting members of a returned soldiers organization.

They said it with funds.

They held a special meeting which was featured by the attendance of prominent business, financial, professional, and organization heads of the city, to draw up plans for the raising of $2,000 which has been stipulated as Belleville's quota of the half-million dollar Dominion objective.

The Belleville veterans did not split hairs. They did, in a manner that cannot be denied, signify their wholehearted intention of standing behind the boys "over there" and to assist them in preparing for their civilian rehabilitation when the war is over.

$200 From Club Funds

They unanimously voted two hundred dollars or one-tenth of the objective, out of their club funds to start off the campaign. This was immediately followed by the cheque for one hundred dollars given by a prominent resident of this city. Two members of the club volunteered two one dollar donations. In other words the fund has three hundred and two dollars in its treasury, practically before the campaign has officially started.

The campaign will not officially get under way until Wednesday morning. Last night twenty-two group captains, who will head teams, which will canvass the city, were appointed. Tonight they will hold a special meeting and tomorrow morning, everything will be in readiness for the teams to "take off."

Committee Personnel

Another important feature of the meeting was the appointment of the personnel of the campaign committee. Many prominent men of the city are endorsing the campaign as can be noted in the following personnel:

Honorary Chairman, Col. P. H. Wills; Campaign Chairman, Col. A. E. Geen; Vice Campaign Chairman, F. W. D. Wiggins, Pres. A. and N. Veterans; Treasurer, T. H. Dredge, Bank of Montreal; Honorary Directors, Charles A. Cameron, K.C., R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., Major Sidney Gilmore, His Worship Major Glencoe Thompson, Lt. Col. T. Y. Wills, Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan, Lt. Col. Roscoe Vandewater, D.S.O., Rev. A. B. Payne, Rev. Claude Olmstead, Msgr. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., Mackenzie Robertson, Dr. G. H. Stoble, C. L. Jewell, B. C. Sisler, I. G. Hefkey, W. H. Morton, Col. A. B. Gribble, Jack McVeigh, Pres. Retail Merchants; Secretary J. H. Lazenby.

Trained When They Come Home

The answer to the question, "will they be trained to carry on when they come back" has prompted the Canadian Legion to inaugurate the present campaign. Many of our boys have left school or given up promising jobs to do their bit in this fight for freedom. They are being trained for war. From the experience of the last war many of them will develop a mental attitude that they "are never coming back."

It is imperative that the members of our fighting forces retain the ideal of peace and a readiness to shoulder the responsibilities of civil life. Their minds must be kept focused on the day when they will resume their places in a Canada at peace.

It is to foster this ideal that the Canadian Legion War Services have undertaken the job of preparing the boys for the final order to "Cease Fire."

The mistakes of the last war must be avoided. Canada must make her soldiers into citizens with the same smoothness and efficiency that she is making her citizens into soldiers. They must be prepared for peace. They are the cream of young Canadian manhood, the priceless material of Canada's great future.

National Importance

The educational and personal services of the Canadian Legion War Auxiliary designed to fit the Canadian troops for the return to peacetime occupations. It is an undertaking of great national importance. The citizens of Belleville are asked to contribute their bit towards this end.

Any information regarding the campaign can be secured from Secretary J. H. Lazenby or members of the executive of the Army and Navy Veterans, Belleville Branch at their Front Street Club rooms.

All cheques should be made payable to the Canadian Legion War Service Auxiliary Inc.

Among the resolutions passed at the meeting last night was that a letter of condolence be sent to Her Excellency Lady Tweedsmuir by the secretary, expressing the deepest sympathy of members of the Belleville Branch Army and Navy Veterans in the sad loss of a loving husband, and a popular Governor-General of Canada.

Boxes will be installed in the club rooms during the campaign for the purpose of receiving voluntary subscriptions.

LINK TRAINERS BEING BUILT FOR R.A.F.

A million-and-a-half dollars are being spent in the little Ontario town of Gananoque to build planes that will never fly. The money is being spent by the British air ministry on 200 Link trainers, the stubby, motorless "planes" used to teach young pilots of the royal air force the intricate problems of piloting the modern fighting planes of the R.A.F.

CHINESE VICTORY CERTAIN STATES DR. H. A. BRACE

Former "Y" Worker in China for 25 Years Cannot See How Japan Can Win

EXPLAINS SITUATION

A victory for China in the Sino-Japanese war is certain, according to Dr. H. A. Brace, of Toronto, who spent 25 years in Y.M.C.A. work in China, and whose son has been on the staff of General Chiang-Kai-Chek for some five years. Speaking before the regular luncheon meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday, Dr. Brace told of the immense strides made by the Chinese in meeting Japanese aggression. He declared that the action of the United States government in allowing the U.S.-Japanese trade treaty to lapse had made certain of the final result. Under this treaty Japan had secured about 60 per cent. of her munitions and other war materials. He regretted to note, that Canadian firms had supplied some $26,000,000 worth of war essentials last year.

Dr. Brace gave a clear exposition of the tangled political situation in the Far East, with Japan ever pushing forward in an effort to bring realisation to a dream of dominating power. Part of this dream was the subjugation of China and drawing from its population a great mercenary army with which to hold and expand Japanese conquests.

Transition in China

With the rise of Japanese ambitions came the transition in the Chinese form of government. Sun Yat Sen had brought into being a republic but in its wake had come internal strife and a misunderstanding of the liberty made possible by republicanism. Then came the first Japanese assaults on the Chinese eastern ports, and the first steps by Chiang-Kai-Check towards the development of a national spirit. Even then, said Dr. Brace, the Chinese leaders realized the full portend of Japanese ambition and made preparation for the removal of industries and government to the western provinces.

Some 60,000 Chinese students educated in this continent had returned and had helped in the upbuilding of the new China. Among them were engineers who had supervised the building of over 100,000 miles of roads. From the plentiful charcoal they had developed the fuel which substituted for expensive gasoline to operate trucks and other motor vehicles. They had brought the radio to Chinese millions so that at the present time very few are beyond its scope, said Dr. Brace.

Today Japan holds only about 10 per cent. of China, and their efforts to subdue more of the country were meeting with little success. As an indication of the paucity of news reaching this continent, Dr. Brace cited an attempt in October of the Japanese to cut one of the vital Chinese roads, in which they lost 20,000 men and were driven back some 50 miles.

Parallel with her Chinese war, Japan was endeavouring to drive towards the Dutch East Indies. By occupying the Spratly Islands south of China, Japan has created a three-way threat to United States in the Phillipines, the Dutch Indies and the British trade routes.

Dr. C. T. Wang Quoted

In emphasizing the rapid development of China, Dr. Brace quoted Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese ambassador to Washington who also is a great Rotarian, Mason and Christian. Dr. Wang had declared that his country was developing so fast that within a few years it would become one of the great international powers. As an evidence of this development Dr. Brace said that the 10,000,000 Chinamen living abroad had contributed some $660,000,000 since the Japanese attack on their home country.

In conclusion, the speaker appealed to all Christians and in particular, Rotarians, to extend all possible aid to the Chinese in the fight for freedom.

Dr. Brace was introduced by Past President J. E. Shortt. On behalf of the club E. M. Bassingthwaighte expressed appreciation of the address.

Stirling Churches Observe World Day of Prayer

Stirling — A large congregation representing Women's Missionary Societies of all major churches of the Stirling district gathered at St. Paul's United Church on Friday afternoon, February 9th., to join the various groups of Christian women throughout the world in observance of the World Day of Prayer. The order of service adapted from program prepared by Misses Muriel and Doris Lester founders of Kingsley Hall in the East End of London, England, and endorsed by the Inter-Board Committee of the Women's Missionary Societies of Canada was carried out with officials of the local societies each taking prominent parts.

A display of unity in Christian service was evidenced as the leading executives of three local societies took their place together on the platform, Mrs. Pidgeon, president of St. Paul's United Church Women's Missionary Society; Mrs. M. Tompkins, President of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society and Mrs. H. Rodger, president of St. John's Anglican Church Women's Missionary Society. The first part of the service including the Call to Worship, opening hymn and prayer in unison was conducted by Mrs. Pidgeon. From this point Mrs. Tompkins led the responsive reading of the Scripture Lesson, a moment of meditation and silent prayer climaxed with the prayerful singing of the hymn "Breath on me Breath of God". A brief and inspiration address based on Scriptural passage from the 15th chapter of St. John was delivered by Mrs. Baker followed by prayer by the leader.

Mrs. Hiram Rodgers, president of St. John's Women's Missionary Society, capably conducted the next group of numbers set forth on the carefully arranged program which included reading responsively observed, a hymn of Thanksgiving, a prayer in unison for guidance in the future, the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past", a period of intercession and prayers for The King, Queen and the Royal Family, for those who serve in our defence, for the sick and infirmed, for the strengthening of our national life, for missions and for the church, and a prayer in time of war, each of these preceded by a brief moment of silence. The hymn "Unto the Hills Around do I Lift up, my Longing Eyes" was followed by a splendid devotional address given by Mrs. W. H. Walker of St. Andrew's Church.

An interesting contribution to the musical part of the service was a vocal solo exceptionally well rendered by Mrs. Cecil Macklin of St. Paul's United Church Choir, followed by the act of dedication taken by all present. A well known hymn and the repeating of the benediction in unison climaxed this impressive service largely attended by Women of the Stirling district Women's Missionary Societies faithfully striving for the furtherance of the Christian cause throughout the entire world.

Letters From the Troops

Stirling—The following letter received by Mr. Ernie Cain of Stirling from Pte. Stanley Dainard, "B" Company H. and P. E. Regiment now stationed at Aldershot, England, vividly sets forth the impressions gained by the well known Stirling hockey played upon his arrival in England.

"Aldershot, England.
"January, 12th., 1940.

"Dear Ernie—Well, I received your Christmas card yesterday. It was very nice and I want to thank you very much for sending it. I just returned from five days leave in London. It is sure some place, especially at night when it is "blacked-out". We were only lost once all the five days we were there and that was from the time we went there until we came home. We would wander around here and there until about twelve and then start trying to get home. It was generally about four when we went to bed. It was great to see some of the big places there. We saw the King in his car going by. We also saw them change the guard at Buckingham Palace. That is a real thing to watch. It is the most snappy thing I ever saw. There is so much to tell that it would take all night. If you ever get the chance though it would really be worth your while to come and see it.

"From the time I left Picton until we arrived here all we did was travel, sleep and eat. We arrived in Halifax on Tuesday noon and went aboard. It was some trip across here. We sailed Friday noon and landed on Monday. We were about eight or nine days on the water and rest was spent in the harbour at Greenoch. We landed in Scotland in Clyde River. The scenery going up the Clyde was wonderful. The hills and green fields were worth seeing. The sun doesn't come up around here until about eight or nine o'clock in the morning.

"It is funny weather over here. There is no snow and it is so damp and raw. The barracks are nice stone buildings. Well I guess there isn't much else to say at present. Give my regards to all the boys around there will you—? I can't write to them all because it would take about eight weeks. Well be good and thanks again for the card.

"Your sincerely,
"Your old pal,
"Stan."

ONE OF THE TRULY GREAT

The universal note of tribute which is heard from all parts of the British Empire to the memory of the late Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, is a proof of the sterling quality, devoted service and noble manhood of the deceased royal representative. The tributes are unique in the fact that they cover so wide a field of human interest. It is rarely that one man sums up so many qualities and possesses them in unison. The late Lord Tweedsmuir was all that has been said in praise of him and more.

He was one of the finest democratic figures in the world, one to whom the democracies can point when they desire an example of what democracy does and how it finds expression in noble manhood.

Lord Tweedsmuir was great in all his undertakings and had been called one who had never failed. Back of all his efforts was a noble and good man. In his life he summed up what is worth while in any man's life, faith, sincerity, good nature, tireless effort, keenness of perception, enjoyment of life, lack of ostentation, a fine spirit of brotherhood and camaraderie, a love of art and beauty, and goodness. He wrote many books and biographies such that of Sir Walter Scott but the greatest he wrote was his own open life, which all the world might read.

AMAZING EVENTS IN NORTHERN WAR

The war in Finland is a war of amazing events. There are Finnish victories which stagger the imagination by what they achieve against a huge foe.

An Associated Press correspondent, Thomas F. Hawkins, tells of Finn ski patrols nailing leaflets to trees for propaganda purposes. One patrol leader told a story which Hawkins reported of dropping pamphlets into the lap of a Russian soldier who had fallen asleep against a tree. He only muttered when the Finns shook him and did not open his eyes. A leaflet was stuck on the Russian's bayonet.

Another told of a Russian lying in a shell hole with his legs frozen. The soldier was unable to speak and raised one hand in token of surrender.

Another story yesterday told of Russian infantrymen riding on tanks with shields and jumping off to fight.

These are incidents in the unusual struggle which is going on in the north where a small people are fighting to save their country from invading Russians. The entire struggle is so vast an affair that it can never be told in fullness.

FRENCH VIEWPOINT

The "constant peril" of Germany is what stands in the way of immediate peace in Europe according to Allied and other opinion. This constant peril must be crushed before France can join any economic system such as Cordell Hull, the United States Secretary of State, has referred to, said a semi-official Paris statement.

The French point out that England and France are now seeking by victory of their arms to obtain "material and positive guarantees of peace without which no stable organization of international relations could be established either in the political or the economic field." So said a semi-official note the other day, explaining that positive guarantees are preliminary conditions to any negotiations.

The New York Times, says that the President of the United States is justified in sending a single investigator like Sumner Welles to a number of European capitals, and that he "like all good Americans deeply wants the eventual restoration of world peace on a sound and lasting basis for all nations, while he undoubtedly knows how slight is the prospect of immediate peace." The Times also says "the talks with the neutrals involve 'no plan or plans' but are in the nature of preliminary inquiries."

Xray of Chest Before Joining the Army

When we were examining for the last war and the recruit was of average weight or near average weight for his build and no tuberculosis could be detected by the usual methods—striking the chest with the fingers to learn the sound, or listening with the stethoscope to get breathing sounds—the recruit was considered to have sound lungs. Among the recruits that were accepted were some who had had tuberculosis but were apparently healed. Some were able to undergo the preliminary training and actually gain weight; others broke down even during the preliminary training and others after the stress and strain of war. These cases have been a source of much distress to the patients themselves and a great expense to the government.

An editorial in the Canadian Medical Association Journal states that "there is no need to extol the value of the Xray in the physical examination of the lungs. To those who spend any time in the tuberculosis institutions it is only too evident that by the routine methods of "sounding" and "listening" by means of the stethoscope, one is apt to miss much."

In other words no matter what other methods are used, the examination of the chest for military purposes should be carried out by the Xray.

What would be gained? An enormous sum of money would be saved the country by preventing the entrance into the army of those whose unfitness is not detected by the ordinary or routine methods. The Xray should become an "ordinary" method.

If, then, the army is considering the use of the Xrays as an ordinary method of examination of the lungs, what about the rest of us?

When there is a tired feeling, loss of weight, persistent cough with or without an afternoon rise in temperature, it would be good sense to stop taking cough medicines and tonics and ask your physician about an Xray examination of the chest. It is not expensive regularly employed and is free in most communities to those who are not employed.

The Xray examination will remove doubt, will show up early tuberculosis, and give every chance for a "cure".

The Navy That Flies

The Fleet Air Arm was once a branch of the Royal Air Force. The Navy contributed three-quarters of the pilots and all the observers; it was administered by the Air Force ashore, and by the Navy when it served afloat. This arrangement worked very well because it worked on unbounded goodwill; but it had certain disadvantages and in due course the Fleet Air Arm ceased to be a branch of the Royal Air Force. It is now a part of the Royal Navy, and it lives mostly in aircraft carriers and the larger men-of-war that carry aircraft, writes a naval eye-witness in the London Listener.

Now in certain parts of the coast there is a great deal of cooperation between the Air Force and the Navy. If you remember they gave a remarkable demonstration of this on Trafalgar Day, when a convoy escorted by the Navy was attacked by German bombers. The Air Force fighters came whistling out from the coast like a stream of machine-gun bullets in defence of the convoy. Twelve enemy machines took part in that attack. Only five returned to Germany.

At one of these points where the two services are in close touch, a squadron of Fleet Air Arm fighters on board an aircraft carrier recently got orders to fly off and take a spell ashore. I think the idea was to give them a rest because they had had a lot of gruelling fights and possibly to give them opportunities for certain specialized training. Anyhow they cocked an eye to windward and gave a hitch to their trousers and did all the things sailors do when they are told to go somewhere and do something, and off they went — streaming up from the deck of their carrier one after the other like bees going up from the alighting board.

When I found them they had come to earth on a bleak headland with hangars and rows of huts, the only things that broke the skyline. They agreed that one good thing they had in plenty, and that was fresh air. There is normally only one sound on an aerodrome — the roar of propellers as engines are warmed through and machines take off or alight. Whenever there was a lull in this one heard the cry of gulls above the cliffs, and the faint grumble of the surf.

Working in conjunction with the Air Force they instituted a continuous naval patrol across a part of the North Sea from dawn to dusk. One day was very like another except that sometimes the fog came rolling in from the sea and, unless the visibility was too low for flying or they intercepted an enemy reconnaisance or bombing machine, one patrol was very like another. This squadron of Fleet Air Arm fighters is carrying out, day after day, what I shared with them for a few hours.

Flying Kit

First of all a word about the kit. Full flying kit consists of a combination suit like the skin of a teddy bear. On top of that goes a wind-proof combination suit with a high collar lined with fleece. Then comes a life-saving waistcoat. This can be inflated in a few moments by the wearer, and for some obscure reason is known technically as a "Mae West." The parachute harness buckles on over this. It is a cumbersome arrangement to walk about in, but it can be released in a second, and there are moments when it gives its wearer quite a lot of moral support. Lastly there is a flying helmet with earphone attachments, gauntlet gloves, and fleece-lined flying boots.

Now picture rows of wooden huts, something like what one imagines a mining camp to be, rising out of a sea of mud churned up by lorries and all the traffic of a camp. In one of these huts, warmed by a paraffin stove and lit by a single hurricane lamp, the fighting pilots and observers were pulling on their flying kit. They were all pretty young— two of the pilots were Midshipmen, one a Sub-Lieutenant—a South African. There were two Marine Officers. Several were Petty Officers, ex-telegraphist Air Gunners and so on.

I seem to remember that in the last war there was a good deal of rather feverish — almost macabre— gaiety among the fighting pilots along the front. They made jokes about death. I haven't noticed any of that in this war. I thought they all looked soberly cheerful. Much the same expressions framed by the leather helmets and lit by the flame of the hurricane lamp as I could recall on the faces in the changing room before a rather important football match. Then one by one, burdened by the harness, they went squelching through the mud towards the landing ground where the fighters were drawn up.

A bank of grey low-lying cloud hung overhead; beyond the edge of the cliffs the sea was visible for a mile and then was obscured by mist. There was a silvery brightness in the sky to eastward which was reflected in the puddles. The cold wind blowing off the land, carrying silvery wisps of rain across the aerodrome, smelt of heather and the hills.

The engines were being warmed through — that meant that the naval fighting machines, drawn up a little to seaward of the ranks of R. A. F. machines, were roaring like all the bulls of Bashan. Each pilot and observer walked to their allotted machines. Two of them stopped to exchange a remark drowned by the deafening roar of the engines in the slip-stream, where normal speech is, of course, an impossibility. The speaker reached out for the tube of the other's headphone and spoke into it. The observer did the same and they both laughed. They were finishing a conversation they started in the hut; in that rush of air and uproar it was their secret. We climbed up into our cockpits. They were all two-seater fighters.

And then the roaring grew a little louder and the ground flow- turned in a wide circle and re- ed bumpily away beneath us, ceded. It was quite far beneath us by the time I had finished fiddling about with my straps and switches and trays of machine-gun ammunition and looked over the edge to see what was happening. It was doing funny things —the earth we had left behind — tilting on edge a bit, and a mare and her foal in a field and some sheep on the edge of a cliff seemed quite unconscious that they were grazing at a most impossible angle; and there was a rushing wind that sang in the wires and a rather queer feeling of lightness in the region of the tummy.

I screwed my head round and saw the other fighters, quite close to us. Their movement was like that of boats, rising and dipping slightly on the surface of an invisible sea. The real sea was far beneath us, dark greenish grey, and then it faded. The observer in the next machine was blowing his nose on a pocket handkerchief. I rather envied him that pocket handkerchief; I couldn't get at mine through all those layers of flying kit. Perhaps it didn't matter, up there above the clouds. They stretched beneath us like an Arctic panorama, with little dark streaks which was the sea thousands of feet below showing through rifts in a white floor that looked like pack ice, and cloud mountains in the far distance catching the first rays of the rising sun. Not only did handkerchiefs not matter, but nothing seemed to me to matter very much, because we had been climbing steadily for some time and the altitude produced a curious feeling of detachment. It seemed impossible to recapture any emotion; one was sure only of peace; a sort of Nirvana; and a rushing wind tearing through empty space; blue sky above and a white light gleaming on the cloud floor beneath.

A little voice spoke in my earphone — a buzzing mumble. It was the pilot speaking. "Keep a good look-out." That was what we were there for, of course. Somewhere out of the cloud mountains to the southeast, or out of the blue of space, a speck might appear, or a cluster of specks, and we should be after them full split. And death would be abroad in that sunny emptiness. It was queer to think of death, up there in all that peace.

One of the pilots — the youngest, aged 20 — said one evening that the hunt was grand. It was the kill that wasn't so funny. He himself had intercepted a German bombing machine one afternoon and a grim game of touch-last began in a series of gigantic cloud valleys. The enemy dived and banked and dodged from one cloud cover to another, and the relentless pursuit went on, "until", said the midshipman, "I nipped ahead to a cloud I thought he'd make for and I waited for him on the other side. Gosh, it was fun! I got him as he came through at 200 yard range. But then, when you saw the poor devils spinning down nose first through the clouds, with smoke pouring from the engine, it wasn't so good. I hated that part of the business."

So that's how they feel about it.

Occasionally disaster comes to one of our machines. This same pilot—I think he is the youngest fighting pilot in the Fleet Air Arm — had engine trouble when on patrol over the North Sea the other day. Down he came from 10,000 feet — planing down in the direction of a trawler he remembered seeing earlier. He hit the water at 90 miles an hour, slap into a 15-foot swell, about three miles from the trawler. Another fighter in his patrol saw him going down and followed him through the clouds. The trawler's crew were below decks and to attract their attention the undamaged plane circle round, firing an occasional burst of machine-gun fire. The trawler's crew decided reasonably enough that they were being attacked by a German machine and stayed below.

In the meanwhile the machine still floated. The pilot and his observer climbed out and although very shaken they managed to launch their collapsible dinghy; but that in some way became entangled with the tail of the machine, and the pilot in trying to free it got his hand nipped in the hinge of the rudder. So there he was up to his waist in icy water, clamped by his wrist to a machine that at any moment might cock up her tail and dive to the bottom.

The observer realized the situation in the trawler and most gallantly decided to try to swim to her for help. So off he set, supported by his "Mae West." The other fighter was circling helplessly overhead: she must have looked like a detracted mother peewit. However, her strange behavior reassured the traweler's crew. They came up on deck and finally sighted the wreckage of the plane Stoking for all they were worth they came rushing to the rescue and hauled the observer and the pilot on board. In a day or two they were as right as trivets and back on patrol again.

Why Both Sides Have Held Back Land Offensive?

(This is one of a series of war commentaries by Sir Charles Gwyn, British soldier of many wars, commandant of the Camberley Staff College for four years prior to retirement in 1931).

Written For The Canadian Press

By General Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Feb. 13 —(CP)— Admittedly this has been a strange war—if by strange you mean that what was generally expected hasn't happened.

Many continue to ask why neither combatant takes major offensive action by land or air. Some say the Allied directors of strategy lack offensive spirit, adding that this is what the doctrine of defensive strategy has brought us to.

But it certainly is not the case that the leaders and men of the Allied forces are lacking in the offensive spirit. It is rather that they know that strategy must be adapted to every phase of the contest. The time for action will come. But it has not been forgotten that the premature offensive of 1914 and 1916 cost the Allies dearly.

1. The German Army in September (1939) was fully mobilized Though the bulk of it was engaged in Poland, there were ample forces to hold the 120 kilometres of the Siegfried Line between the Rhine and Moselle—a position which presented a narrow, strongly fortified front with flanks secured by neutral territory, which the French on moral and political grounds would not think of violating.

2. A frontal attack, lacking the element of surprise, cannot be undertaken against the Siegfried position without a considerable period of preparation and reconnaissance. It could in September, only have been justified as a means of bringing relief to Poland, and if the main German army was still committed to that front.

3. But before the French army could fully mobilize and the first British contingent could and did arrive, the fete of the British army was sealed. An attack then on the Siegfried Line with the German main army released from Poland would have been an act of madness.

4. On the other hand, the French army, reinforced by the B. E. F. could with confidence hold the Maginot defences. Time was required by the Allies for the expansion of the British Army and for the effects of the blockade.

5. It was necessary, moreover, for the Allies to retain a large force in reserve in case the Germans invaded neutral territory. While that danger existed the Allies had to wait events.

Regarding Air Attack

It is not therefore difficult to understand why the Allied armies are standing on the defensive. The reasons why the Allied air forces did not take offensive action are rather more complicated. The main reason I suppose, was that there were few military targets which could be attacked without endangering non-combatants. Such an attack it was desired to avoid.

To have initiated such attacks, however strict the concentration on military targets, would have given a handle to German propaganda and would have invited reprisals unlimited by any humanitarian scruples.

Attacks on purely military objectives such as airdromes, except when active operations are in progress, might not produce great effect, and would certainly involve casualties.

There were therefore valid reasons for leaving it to the enemy to initiate full air war. The growing strength of the Allied air forces also suggests a policy of waiting.

German Hesitancy

But why did not the Germans, in view of the growing strength of the Allies, take the offensive when the Polish Campaign ended? I think this is how they saw it:

1. They probably would have attacked then and there had not Hitler, hoping to get away with his spoils without a major war, launched his peace offensive.

2. The great expenditure of petrol and the damage done to German mechanized vehicles and aircraft during the Polish war were also postponing factors.

3. By the time these causes of delay had disappeared, winter was approaching, making extensive land operations hazardous.

4. There would then seem to have been a conflict of advice as to the form offensive operations should take. The alternative courses considered were apparently: (a) A combined land and air attack on the Maginot Line, including probably the invasion of Luxemburg; (b) An invasion of Holland and Belgium to facilitate air attack on Britain and the U-Boat war; (c) Postponment of land and air offensives till the Spring; (d) Intensification of U-Boat, mine and surface-raider action, without risking a major land and air war.

5. Weather conditions probably led to the abandonment or postponement of land operations.

6. The effect on the German people of air reprisals, coupled with the hardships of food shortage, may have been the reason for hesitation to initiate air war. The difficulty of carrying out air attacks on Britain without incurring prohibitive casualties had also been revealed by the R.A.F. mass flights over Germany.

These and other considerations led the Germans to a decision to stand on the defensive during the winter.

In view, however, of the disappointment results in the sea warfare, and of the diminishing prospects of economic assistance from Russia owing to Soviet difficulties in Finland, it is almost certain that Germany must take the offensive in the Spring. Economic conditions will force her.

What form her initiative will take cannot yet be forecast. But it is certain that, sooner or later, according to the nature of her action, the Allies, to achieve victory, will take counter offensive action. With growing strength, then can await with patience the opportunity for that counter-offensive.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Russian attacks on the Mannerheim Line continued yesterday. After 11 days of furious pounding the Red forces appear to have done little more than demolish some of the Finnish advance posts.

Were it not for the incompetence displayed by the Russians in previous battles of the Finnish war the long assault on the Finnish fortifications might be taken as an indication of what would happen if the Germans attacked the Maginot Line or the British and French the Siegfried Line.

The Mannerheim Line is a thoroughly modern system of fortifications although less elaborate and perhaps having less fire-power than either the German Westwall or the French fortifications facing Germany. All three are designed to enable a smaller body of troops on the defence to hold up and destroy a much larger body on the attack.

So far the Mannerheim Line has functioned as it was expected to function. The Russian attacks have cost them great numbers of lives and many tanks.

An attack by either the Germans or the Allies on the fortifications opposing them in the west would also be costly in men and material. The side launching the attack certainly would try to obtain a vast numerical superiority over the defending forces.

The Finnish success in stopping the Russian steam-roller in the Karelian Isthmus will be studied carefully by German and Allied staff officers in planning both defensive and offensive operations in the west. They will have the task of estimating how far the result at the Mannerheim Line was due to the strength of the line itself and how much to faulty generalship and mistakes on the part of the Russians.

Help the creator of "the Dumbells" to MAKE OUR SOLDIERS LAUGH

CAPT. "MERT" PLUNKETT organizer of "The Dumbells" during the last war. Now supervisor of Concert Party Work for Canada's Overseas Forces, under the auspices of Canadian Legion War Services.

1916! A ruined barn or hall in France... packed with Canadian troops. On the crude stage the lights go on. Scene follows scene... the audience rocks with laughter. Strange happiness comes to lonely hearts. 'Tis like a breath from home, this evening of gaiety amid war's tragedy.

Concert parties such as those which played to capacity houses behind the lines in France during the last war, are essential again to the morale of the Canadian troops. The task of organizing and training such concert parties has been undertaken by the Canadian Legion War Services. Capt. "Mert" Plunkett, organizer of "The Dumbells," who is in charge of this work, is now in England organizing and training the men who will entertain our troops in England and France.

The Legion needs your help to finance this great work, to purchase costumes and equipment for these parties. Other vital needs of the troops which the Legion has undertaken to supply are as follows:

Home-like Facilities for Our Men Overseas
The Legion is establishing leave centre hostels in England and France. Here the men will be provided with beds and meals at nominal cost. Recreation and reading rooms will be available free of charge. Travel bureaux will be operated to assist men on leave.

Personal Services
Through its representatives in the field and its 1100 branches all over Canada, the Legion will help the men on service in the solution of worrying problems of a personal or business nature.

Educational and Vocational Training
In collaboration with the Canadian Association for Adult Education, an organization with a distinguished record, the Legion has undertaken a plan whereby Canadians on service may continue their training to fit them to take their places successfully in civil life after the war.

HELP WIN THE WAR!
Here is how you can do your bit. Your contribution to the Legion drive for $500,000 will help to keep up the morale of our men and will contribute to the happiness, comfort and future success of our boys overseas. Give to the Legion's new cause — today!

On Saturday, Feb. 3rd., at eleven o'clock a quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shorey, 4th Concession Sidney, when their elder daughter, Muriel Evelyn, became the bride of Kenneth Harrison Yorke, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke, Corbyville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. W. Scott, beneath an arch of evergreens hung with a large white bell.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was becomingly attired in midnight blue crepe with gold trimmings. She also wore a shoulder corsage of pink roses and sweet peas. There were no attendants.

During the signing of the register Mr. Chas. Elliott sang "O Perfect Love". The wedding music was play by Mrs. L W. Scott.

After a sumptuous wedding dinner the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Toronto and Western points. For travelling the bride wore Suez crepe with matching hat and accessories and a black fur-trimmed coat. The best wishes of the community go with the young couple for a long and happy married life.

Miss Loretta Freeman, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a pretty frock of dark green chiffon velvet and velvet hat, gloves and shoes to match. Mr. Joseph Doran, Read, was best man.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the Quinte Hotel, Belleville, where a dainty breakfast was served.

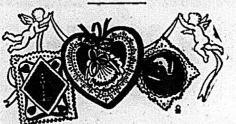
The History of Saint Valentine is Reviewed

Origin Of Peculiar Observances Obscure; Superstitions Hold Sway for Many Years



At least three different Saint Valentines, all of them martyrs, are mentioned in the early martyrologies under date of February 14. One is decribed as a priest at Rome, another as Bishop of Interamna (the modern Terni), and these two seem both to have suffered in the second half of the third century and to have been buried on the Flaminian Way, but at different distances from the city. In William of Malmesbury's time what was known to the ancients as the Flaminian Gate of Rome and is now the Porta del Popolo, was called the Gate of St. Valentine. The name seems to have been taken from a small church dedicated to the saint which was in the immediate neighborhood. Of both these St. Valentines some sort of Acts are preserved but they are of relatively late date and of no historical value. Of the third St. Valentine who suffered in Africa with a number of companions nothing further is known.

Origin Obscure

The origin of the peculiar observances of St. Valentine's Day is a subject of some obscurity. None of the saints (Valentine) seem to have had anything to do with the matter, beyond the accident of February 14 being used for the purpose. Mr. Douce, in his "Illustrations of Shakespeare" says "It was the practice in ancient Rome during a great part of the month of February to celebrate the Lupercalia, which were feasts in honor of Pan and Juno, whence the latter deity was named Februata, Februalis and Februlla. On this occasion, amidst a variety or ceremonies, the names of young women were put into a box from which they were drawn by the men as chance directed.

The pastors of the early Christian church, who, by every possible means, endeavored to eradicate the vestiges of pagan superstitions, and chiefly by some commutations of their forms, substituted, in the present instance, the names of particular saint instead of those of the women; and as the festival of the Lupercalia had commenced about the middle of February, they appear to have chosen St. Valentine's Day for celebrating the new feast, because it occurred nearly at the same time. This is, in part, the opinion of a learned and rational compiler of the "Lives of the Saints", the Rev. Alban Butler. It would seem, however, that it was utterly impossible to extirpate altogether any ceremony to which the common people had been accustomed—a fact which it were easy to prove in tracing the origin of various other popular superstitions. And, accordingly, the outline of the ancient ceremonies was preserved, but modified by some adaptation to the Christian system. It is reasonable to suppose, that the above practice of choosing mates would gradually become reciprocal in the sexes, and that all persons so chosen would be called Valentines, from the day on which the ceremony took place.

Nowaday's St. Valentine's Day is almost everywhere a much degenerated festival, the only observance of any note consisting merely of sending Valentine cards to members of the opposite sex for whom the sender has a particular affection, and this is confined very much to the humbler classes. Many people still have "Valentine" parties on or near February 14, but these are Valentine parties in name only, with possibly a few decorations symbolic of the day.

The approach of the day is usually heralded by the appearance in stationery and other shop windows of large numbers of the above mentioned Valentine cards, which are decorated with cupids and hearts etc., and on which appear various sentimental verses in keeping with the occasion. Until quite recently it was the custom to send single sheets of post paper on which was seen ridiculous colored caricature of the male or female figure, with a few burlesque verses below. This practice, however, has almost entirely died out.

A Kind of Lottery

But years ago it was very different. Ridiculous letters were unknown, and, if letters of any kind were sent, they contained only a courteous profession of attachment from some young man to some young maiden, honeyed with a few compliments to her various perfections and expressive of a hope that his love might meet with return. But the true proper ceremony of St. Valentine's Day was the drawing of a kind of lottery, followed by ceremonies not much unlike what is generally called the game of forfeits.

Misson, a learned traveller, of the early part of the eighteenth century, gives apparently a correct account of the principal ceremonial of the day: "On the eve of St. Valentine's Day the young folks in England and Scotland, by a very ancient custom, celebrate a little festival. An equal number of maids and bachelors get together; each writes their true or some feigned name upon separate billets, which they roll up and draw by way of lots, the maids taking the men's billets and the men the maids'; so that each of the young men lights upon a girl that he calls his "valentine", and each of the girls upon a young man whom he calls hers. By this means each has two valentines, but the man sticks faster to the valentine that has fallen to him than to the valentine to whom he is fallen. Fortune having thus divided the company into so many couples, the valentines gives balls and treats to their mistresses, wear their billets several days upon their bosoms, or sleeves, and this little sport often ends in love".

A Present Given

During the reign of Charles II., it appears from "Pepys's Diary that married and single were then alike liable to be chosen as a valentine, and that a present was invariably and necessarily given to the choosing party. There also appears to have been a prevalent notion amongst the common people that this was the day on which the birds selected their mates. They seem to have imagined that an influence was inherent in the day, which rendered in some degree binding the lot or chance by which any youth or maid was now led to fix his attention on a person of the opposite sex. It was supposed, for instance, that the first unmarried person of the other sex whom one met on St. Valentine's morning in walking abroad was a destined wife or a destined husband. Thus Gay makes a rural dame remark:

"Last Valentine, the day when birds of kind
Their paramours with mutual chirpings find,
I early rose just at the break of day,
Before the sun had chased the stars away;
A-field I went, amid the morning dew,
To milk my kine (for so should housewives do).
Thee first I spied — and the first swain we see,
In spite of Fortune shall our true love be."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

EASY TO DIRECT GUESTS' COURSE OF CONVERSATION

I have deep admiration for the apparently nonchalant way some people direct an introduction. With an easy grace, they come to our aid and, having given us the name of the other person, give us a cue to what we say after our salutation. By giving thought to what may be an awkward social moment, they have acquired a sense of social steering that instantly gives direction to the situation. The nonchalance of their way of doing this is only surface quality; underneath is the charming quality of social understanding.

While the usual hostess or host introduces us to someone and then dashes off to make the next introduction, Mrs. or Miss or Mr. Stage-director gives us a clue to the stranger's interests, material to begin the conversation.

For instance, we are told that "Mrs. Allen has just returned from Bermuda, and she loves it as much as you do." How easy, then, to start merrily on this shared enthusiasm. Or, "Mr. Franklin lives in Chicago too, and I'm sure you'll find that you have many mutual friends." In this manner, the wise host or hostess cleverly establishes a common center of interest on which the ensuing conversation can be based.

CORSAGE?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am asked to pour coffee at a wedding breakfast. Would it be proper for me to wear a corsage?

M.

Yes.

Big Haul

By MRS. E. McCLINTOCK

Ted closed the door on the sound of his parents' voices and went slowly down the street. No use to expect any help there.

It was raining slightly but Ted seemed not to notice. There was a lump in his throat that would not be swallowed and the moisture on his face was not entirely due to the elements.

Jerry was gone! Over and over again he repeated the words, as if the sheer horror of them could in some way be mitigated by constant repetition.

Jerry, his pal—his friend. That mall, playful bundle of yellow puppy-hood that had followed him home from school almost two years ago, and had come to mean more to him than any other living thing on earth.

Jerry wasn't like some dogs. Jerry understood all about things. He understood about hard times and parents who quarreled and how few were the pennies that could be earned after school. He knew because he and Ted talked everything over together. But he didn't know about dog catchers and licenses that cost two dollars and pound fees.

At Schultz's grocery, the familiar sensation of a soft, furry body rubbing against his legs, and a cold nose pushing itself into his hand made Ted's heart almost stop beating. But it was not Jerry who looked up expectantly in his face. It was Schultz's dog seeming to sense that Ted was in trouble, and offering his doggish sympathy. Ted patted the dog's head, and tried to stifle the sobs that came tearing at his throat.

"Is that your dog?" The voice came from a car that was parked at the curb.

"No," Ted replied. "This is Schultz's dog. The dog catcher got my dog this afternoon. He's out at the dog pound."

"What's his name?"

"Jerry. I went out to see if I could see him just before it was dark. Couldn't get very close to him, though. There's a big wire fence all around out there—and the place is all locked up. I could hear him barking and I tried to talk to him. I wanted him to understand about the license fee." Ted gulped convulsively and wiped his eyes with the back of his hand. "Do you know what they do with the dogs when you can't pay the money, mister?"

"I guess they do away with them".

"How?"

"Gas, I suppose."

"Oh!" Ted turned away, the leaden misery in his heart evident in the dejected line of his whole body.

"Hey, wait a minute. How far did you say it was to the dog pound?"

"About three miles," Ted said.

"Hop in and we'll take a ride out to see your dog."

At the old warehouse on the outskirts of the town, where the canine prisoners were incarcerated, Ted's companion set to work in a methodical manner. Donning a pair of gloves and extracting some tools from a sack, he scaled the fence and had the door unlocked almost before Ted had traversed the path from the car to the fence.

As Ted's arms closed around the frantically yelping Jerry, he thought that never in his life would he be so happy again.

Back in the car Jerry shivered and whined and licked his master's face, and then as if sensing the part the stranger had played in his delivery, he climbed into his lap and caressed him in the same manner.

Ted's hand in his pocket encountered the six cents he had earned the day before. Drawing them forth, he held them out to the stranger.

"I'd like to pay you for your trouble," he said. "That's all I've got, but I'd like you to take it.'

The stranger hesitated and then solemnly pocketed the money. At the edge of town he drew up to the curb and stopped the car.

"I'll let you out here," the man said. "No use of me going all the way in."

"I used to have a dog," he mused. "His name was Prince. I'd like you to do something for me," he said suddenly.

"Sure," Ted replied eagerly.

"You'll see a ratty looking guy standing in front of the bank where you met me. Tell him I won't be able to keep my appointment with him. And give him this;" (taking three of the pennies from his hand) "tell him that's his share of tonight's haul."

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, February 14

A VERY lively and ambitious day, but not without its setbacks and dangers, is forecast. While things may move at high pressure, there also will be tenacious obstacles and delays to reckon with. The mind will be well stimulated for really creative work.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy an interesting and eventful year, with much progress and ingenuity. But be prepared for some delays, probable postponements and tenacious obstacles.

A child born on this day may have a studious and friendly nature. It should have business ability, making a good success of its affairs.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

FEET

Our feet are members which take a lot of punishment right from the cradle to the grave. They get squeezed into all kinds of shoes and they are asked to work and take us places whether the shoes hurt or not. It is no wonder that foot trouble is one of the modern world's commonest ailments. I suppose sore feet spoil more dispositions than any other complaint. And it is all so unnecessary.

The most important shoe fittings are those in babyhood. Then the foot is soft and pliable. It takes the shape of any shoe we happen to put on and if shoe is the wrong shape or size, permanent damage is done.

The other day I received a letter from a young couple in New York. They were having an argument over what kind of shoes to get the baby, who was just at the creeping stage. The mother thought the child should be left with bare feet until it started to walk, and the father thought that the child should get used to shoes right away so he wouldn't find them awkward when he began to walk.

Well, I'm no foot specialist, but I think the child should be left barefoot until he begins to walk. I know the Dionne Quintuplets didn't have a shoe on their feet until they were over a year old.

Good shoes — I mean well fitting shoes are very important to a child. Yet, unfortunately, there seem to be more ill-fitting shoes on children than there are properly fitting ones.

Shoes should never have to be "broken in". They should fit the baby's foot right at the start.

When a baby under two years of age has his foot placed in a badly fitting shoe, or in a shoe that is the wrong shape, the soft feet are moulded into the shape of the shoe. The bones of the foot of a small child aren't bones at all, they are cartilage, or soft gristle. This soft foot is pressed into the shape of the shoe, and when the bones harden they stay in this shape. When a person is about 20 years of age the foot has taken on a shape that it will keep the rest of that person's life. They may not be the feet needed for his height and weight or manner of walking. The result is chronic foot troubles.

When a child is young the soft cartilage of the foot can be forced into unnatural shapes without causing pain. Because the child doesn't complain that his feet hurt, the parents often accept the shoes as a good fit when they are not.

There isn't the slightest need for this common mistake in the care of the baby. Correctly designed baby shoes can be bought in almost any shoe store and it is no difficult problem to make sure that the shoes are a good fit.

The best shoe for a baby is one with a soft, pliable uppers, elk skin for instance, and pliable, flexible soles. I think it is important to buy a good quality shoes which is so made that no stitching or tacks can come through the insole and irritate the foot. It should fit firmly, but not tightly at the instep and heel but there should be ample room at the toe.

McGuire, I.P.S., as superintendent of the Sunday School as successor to Mr. W. S. Gordon who held the office for almost thirty-six years. The Board of Management learned with regret that Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tummon and family will be moving to Foxboro in a few weeks. For a great many years they have been associated with the Sunday School as teachers and their places will be exceedingly hard to fill. With these thoughts in mind the Board passed the following resolution:

The Board of Management of the Sunday School of Tweed United Church desires to place on record its deep appreciation of the exceptional services of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Tummon and family who for the past twenty years have all been faithful and valued members. The enthusiastic spirit they have shown in the varied activities of our Sunday School has been greatly appreciated.

Mr. Tummon taught the Ladies' Bible Class with great acceptance for many years. Mrs. Tummon has been a devoted teacher in the Junior Department and a leader in our musical services; Margery and Marian have taught in the Beginners and Primary Departments and assisted in the C.G.I.T.; Jack has acted as Secretary-Treasurer of the Sunday School; Frank has assisted with his fine musical gifts in the school concerts; Jim has been librarian of the Senior boys' class, which Evan, untu his transfer from Tweed, gave valuable leadership in boys' work both on Sunday and through the week. Seldom have the talents of every member of a family been so willingly placed at the service of a Sunday School.

We deeply regret their coming removal from our Church and School and trust their good work will continue in the community to which they are moving. Our sincere wish is that God's richest blessings may be upon them throughout life.

The Rangers of the Juvenile League were hard-pressed to maintain their unbeaten record on Friday night as they nosed out the lowly Red Wings by a score of 3 to 2. Baldwin and Teddy Rashotte scored the losers' goals while Fobert, Donohue and Meraw scored for the winners.

The second game between the Bruins and Leafs was a scoring spree with former winning by a score of 13 to 10, Grant Baker rapping in seven goals for the winners. Sills scored five goals for the Leafs.

Mr. C. Ed. Way was elected chairman of the Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Fund at a meeting held in the Salvation Army Hall on Friday night. Major Alderman of the Belleville S.A. Corp, was present and explained the purpose of the Million Dollar Drive being conducted across Canada in March.

"The returned soldiers", said Major Alderman, "speak in the loudest tones of the work of the Salvation Army in France and England during the World War. The Salvation Army huts were open at any and all hours and never was a soldier refused food and drink because he was without funds.

"We all hate war", observed the Major "and it is not our fault that we have it. The democratic nations of the world must do something to stem the tide of "isms" which have been built up since the last war. This trouble is not going to blow over soon; not even when Germany is defeated will it be over, because the "isms" must be removed and mankind must be brought to think in terms of Christianity in a practical way. Christianity is in the melting pot, but it will come out pure".

Major Alderman sketched briefly the work of the Salvation Army among the soldiers of Canada's present Army at home and in England. To provide S.A., refreshment booths S.A. huts and in other ways care for the soldiers as they did in the Great War a fund of one million dollars is necessary. Of this amount one thousand dollars is allocated to Tweed and the surrounding villages of Central and North Hastings. erborough, viited Mr. and Mr. D.

The following committee was formed to undertake the campaign locally:

Hon. Chairman, W. S. Gordon; Chairman, C. E. Way; Vice Chairman, S. B. Rollins; Secretary, L. Marriott; Treasurer, F. W. Clarke; Executive, H. W. Crosbie, W. LeSage, T. N. Beatty, Dr. Dales, S. H. Connor; Publicity Chairman, S. R. Curry.

Most of the officers and committee members are ex-service men, who knowing well, from experience; the good work done by the Salvation Army in France, willingly consented to aid in the present campaign, which will be conducted in March.

Once again the congregation of Tweed United Church was delighted with a beautiful solo by Mrs. Jas. Goldie of Peterboro, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sager. At the Sunday morning service Mrs. Goldie sang "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings".

Miss Mavis McGuire, M.A., of Blenheim High School staff, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McGuire.

The choir of Tweed United church was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Foster on Thursday night. Following choir rehearsal, games were played and a dainty lunch was served. Mr. W. Morris and Mrs. S. H. Connor moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Foster for their hospitality.

Skiing is the most popular outdoor sport among the young people of Tweed this winter, as weather conditions with an abundance of snow make skiing ideal. The favourite resort of the devotees of the pastime is a series of hills northwest of Tweed. Conditions here are practically perfect for both the novice and the expert with high hills and broad open spaces; and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons dozens of skiers gather here for the swift, breath-taking runs.

At a meeting of the Official Board of the United Church held on Wednesday evening the following committees were appointed:—

Missionary and Maintenance — Claude Barnett, J. W. Kingston, John Sager, Treasurer; W. S. Gordon, S. B. Mc Gee, W. H. Sayers, Geo. Gordon, W. Morris, E. C. Drinkwater, Mrs. F. B. Foster, Mrs. C. Barnett, Mrs. M. Drinkwater.

RHEUMATIC PAIN GONE—PRAISES MOSBY'S TONIC

Mr. Marion Says: "I Had 3 Years of Suffering with Rheumatic Pains — Could Not Raise My Arms Above My Shoulders — But Now My Pains Have Been Relieved by Mosby's Tonic and I Feel Fine!"

Another True Instance of relief from Long-Suffering came to light here a few days ago in a statement about MOSBY'S TONIC received from Mr. Fred Marion, of 3411

MR. FRED MARION

Sandwich St., W., Windsor, Ont. Mosby's Tonic is the "Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents," which has created so much discussion here in Belleville, and which is being introduced to the public daily at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street. What Mr. Marion has to say about Mosby's Tonic will be of interest to every one who suffers. His Grateful Statement follows:

Rheumatic Pains in Arms, Hands and Limbs

"If anybody in this world ever had what you call REAL rheumatic pain, then I know I am that very person." stated Mr. Marion. "I was down in bed with it for long periods. These rheumatic pains were simply ALL OVER ME. I could not even raise by arms above my shoulder. The joints of my fingers were swollen and both of my knees were stiff and full of pain. Besides all of this, my stomach was badly upset and my bowels were constipated.

"I tried first one thing and then another, until I was discouraged. But finally I found Mosby's Tonic and I want to say that this medicine began to help me almost at once. Before I had finished my second bottle the rheumatic pains began to leave my body. You don't know what relief that was! And when I had taken my fourth bottle I could walk without any pain, and now I can raise my arms above my head. The suffering has gone from my shoulders, and the swelling has left the joints of my fingers and knees. And another thing, Mosby's Tonic has regulated my bowels and has relieved me in so many ways that I want to publicly endorse this medicine in the hope that others who suffer as I did will get it and take it."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver, Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC acts on bowels, stomach, liver, kidneys. It contains 15 Roots and Herbs scientifically blended with 5 Other Proven Ingredients. It clears gas and pain from the stomach, cleanses the bowels and invigorates liver and kidney action. That is why so many people are benefited in a general way by this New Formula. Remember—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic—NOW—and start taking it.

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street.

CHAPTER 26
Wanted: A Plane

Rene was weaker than Bill and Claire had thought.

"You'd better leave me, he urged weakly. "I'm just a burden to you. Without me, you may be able to get away. With me, we're all lost. And if we're caught, you know what it means".

"Nonsense", Bill said. "You're coming with us. I'll help you on one side, Claire can help on the other."

Rene insisted still that they leave him, but when Claire and Cameron flatly refused, he reluctantly went along. Bill had gathered up the collapsed parachute and carried it under his arm.

There was heavily wooded territory about a mile to the south—they could see it now that the sun was beginning to dispel the morning mists—and Cameron and Claire had decided it offered their best chance of refuge.

"We'll head for the creek", Bill decided. "It seems to flow through the woods, and the trees will shield us from any one who might be out this early in the morning."

When they reached the fringe of trees they turned southward to follow the stream. It was slow painful work, and they had to stop frequently and ease Rene down to the ground for a short rest.

"What I can't figure out," he said after the second of these stops, "is how I happen to be here at all. I heard the Nazis shooting at us, I felt a sharp pain, and then I guess I passed out. How did I get down?"

"I climbed over into your cockpit, straightened out the ship and got you over the side and jumped," Bill explained. "I figured I was taking a chance with two of us on one 'chute, but it was the only chance we had. I'd already signalled Claire to jump, and I hoped that we might all land within a mile or two of each other. Luckily there was no wind, so we didn't drift".

"You should have left me in the ship", Rene said. "But thanks anyway, old man, for saving my life. If we get out of this, I'll try to repay you some way."

"Repay me? Claire and I owe you more than we ever can pay," Cameron protested. "But for you, we'd be prisoners in Berlin, facing a firing squad. Now we've at least got a chance. Where do you think we are Rene?"

"About halfway between Berlin and Paris' We had flown a little more than a hour when they caught us."

"We'd better be getting along," Claire suggested, and after Rene had had a small nip from the cognac bottle they went on.

So slowly were they forced to go because of Rene's weakness and the necessity for frequent stops, that the sun was high in the heavens befor they reached the shelter of the woods. The ground was much rougher here too, and its steadily rising slope made Rene think they were in the foothills of the Taunus Mountains.

"Our flying time would have put us about there", he said. "We're lucky we landed on the flat instead of in the woods or the mountains."

"Are we near any cities, do you think?" Cameron inquired.

"If my guess is correct, we're somewhere northeast of Frankfort, which would put us pretty close to the second defensive line of the West Wall."

"Then it might be possible," Cameron said, more to himself than to Rene or Claire. He spoke as though he were answering a question he had put to himself.

"Possible? What do you mean?" Claire asked.

"There's only one way I can see for us to get out of here", Bill explained. "I hadn't meant to mention it until later, but we might as well discuss it now. We've got to get hold of a plane, somehow".

"A plane" Claire exclaimed, in astonishment. "But how?"

"That's what we've got to figure out."

Rene's eyes gleamed appreciatively as he nibbled on a small piece of chocolate Claire had salvaged from her pockets. It was left from the food Frau Webber had given them when they left her flat.

"You know, Bill, you're a man after my own heart. If you can pull off a stunt like that, you'll get enough decorations from the French government to cover the whole left side of your coat."

At Cameron's suggestion, Rene drew a small map of the district where he thought they were, with surrounding towns, Claire had found a pencil in her purse, and the inside of the chocolate served for paper.

"There must be several air fields in this district—emergency places," Cameron said as he looked over the map.

"I wouldn't be surprised", Rene answered, "although we've spotted very few from the air. The Germans are masters of camouflage".

Cameron decided it would be foolish for them to go farther then, as they were safely screened from the air, and the spot where they were seemed to be a dense wilderness into which no one was likely to come.

With Claire's help, Bill used the silk of the parachute to make a shelter against the wind near an overhanging rock, and then they gathered pine bows for a bed.

"Rene must get stronger before we can do anything," he told Claire. "You stay here with him while I go scouting. We've got to have food, some good nourishing food for him, more than anything else".

The girl made Rene as comfortable as she could and was alarmed when she felt his forehead. It seemed hot and dry to her—an indication that he had some fever. He was asleep in a few minutes, however, and she went to the nearby mountain stream and busied herself by piling up small rocks to make a makeshift stove.

Within two hours Bill Cameron was back, proudly bearing a dead partridge as a result of his foraging expedition.

"Stalked it for an hour, and knocked it over with a rock. Not very sporting, but you can't stand on ethics when you're hungry."

It developed that Bill was an experienced woodsman. In short order he had the fowl plucked and dressed. He had started a fire in Claire's stone oven, lining the inside with large rocks and sealing it as much as possible to keep the heat inside. The oven was close to the bank of the stream, and Claire stood by with the helmets, ready to scoop water and extinguish the fire in a moment if they heard any planes overhead. Even a thin wisp of smoke, rising from the wooden hill, would be sufficient to betray them.

When the rocks were hot, Cameron packed the partridge in wet clay dug from the stream bank. Then he opened the oven, raked out the coals and ashes, extinguished them, and placed his fowl inside, after which he sealed the outside of the primitive stove with more clay.

"The Cameron fireless cooker," he jested as Claire looked on appreciatively. "In an hour the bird should be done to a turn."

It was almost dusk when he opened the oven and drew the roasted partridge out with a stick. He cracked off the clay, which had baked to bricklike hardness, and the odor of the fowl made Claire ravenous. She realized how long it had been since she had had a decent meal.

She awakened Rene, bathed his forehead with cold water, and was relieved to see that his fever had gone down. Seated around his bed of boughs, the three of them feasted on the partridge, Cameron forcing the tenderest pieces—the breast—upon Rene.

"We've got to get you well and strong so we can get out of here".

The fowl was completely gone in a few minutes, but there had been enough to take the sharp edge from their hunger for the time being.

"Tomorrow I'll get something else", Cameron said. "There must be considerable game in the forest at this time of the year."

After Bill had cleaned Rene's wound again with cold water and given it another application of cognac and rebandaged it, the Frenchman lay down and promptly fell into a sound sleep.

"That's the best thing for him", Cameron told Claire. "Complete rest for another day or so, and he'll be fit to travel. The wound does not look infected to me."

"You have a lot of qualities I never suspected", Claire commented admiringly. "You're a doctor of sorts, and you've certainly proved yourself a woodsman. When did you have time to learn all these things?"

"When I was a boy I used to go to summer camps in the Maine woods and learned a lot of tricks from the guides. In later years, I've usually managed to get in a month or so of fishing and hunting in Canada".

They talked for several minutes until Bill caught the girl nodding and insisted that she lie down under the shelter and rest. She was too sleepy to protest much, and the sunlight was filtering down through the tall pines when she awakened the next morning.

She looked out for Bill, but he was gone from the place she had last seen him—seated outside the little tent where she and Rene were resting. She started up, in sudden panic. What had happened to him?

WHO INVENTED THE MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why SHOULD you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to YOUR door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of WHAT you can get, and WHERE. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed . . . many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about!

Belleville Quintes Defeated In Practice Tilt by Airmen

Inexperience Proved a Deciding Handicap for Teen-Aged Squad

SCORE IS 10-3

Depending upon break-away plays and the inexperience of their opponents, the Air Force seniors downed the Belleville juniors 10 to 3 in an exhibition game at the Hume Arena last night.

The local kids held their own with the more experienced Flyers in the initial session as the teams battled to a 1-1 draw. Four goals in the middle session, three that came as the result of over-anxiousness on the part of the juniors, saw the Air Force take a decided lead.

Throwing caution to the winds, the juniors played offensive hockey in the last period, moving five forward on the attack, a system that paved the way for five more Flyer goals, all the result of break-away plays, as the kids slipped two passed Gibson. The junior defence failed to cover, while the more experienced senior Flyer forwards scored frequently as they sallied in on Cook for ten goals.

Storms, Goyer and Everett scored for the juniors, while Irvine, Baldwin, Gathercol paced the winners in the scoring column. Clare and Goyer looked the best for the teen-aged locals while Gathercol, Baldwin and Irvine carried the mail for the Air Force.

The game was played as a practice fixture prior to the forthcoming O.H.A. play-offs, that see Peterboro' meet the Flyers here on Friday night and the Belleville juniors play hosts to the group-winning Kingston juniors in the O.H.A. playdowns next Tuesday here.

The line-ups:

TONY BELIEVES LOUIS FINISHED

Galento Thinks He Will Knock Bomber Out in Next Meeting

Orange, N.J., Feb. 13.—(AP) — Tony Galento, who says his eyes "are 100 per cent", offered to bet anyone $10,000 today that he'll stop Joe Louis in five rounds this July when they meet for the World's heavyweight boxing championship.

Galento spiked a rumor he was going blind, saying he'd match his eyesight with that of anyone.

At first, two-ton Tony wanted Louis, his managers or his friends to take the bet. He changed his mind and opened the offer "to anyone who'll give me the prevailing odd".

"Louis is through, finished," he said. "He couldn't hurt (Arturo) Godoy last Friday night".

When Galento was introduced from the Madison Square Garden ring last Friday night he struck his head against a microphone and some sports experts said that indicated his eyesight might be bad.

"The crowd give me such an ovation, I was excited", Galento explained. "When I swung my head around I didn't know the microphone was so low. Anyone could hit their head like that".

FINNISH RUNNER FEARED KILLED

Gunnar Hockert, 5,000 Metre Champion, Fighting With Finns Against Russia

Helsingfors, Feb. 13—(AP)—Gunnar Hockert, who won the Olympic 5,000-metre run in record time at Berlin in 1936 and later established world records for 3,000 metres and two miles, was reported to have been killed Sunday in fighting on the Karelian Isthmus.

Hockert was the second famous Finnish athlete to lose his life in the war with Russia. Birger Wasenius, ace speed-skater, was killed in action in December while leading a ski patrol across frozen Lake Ladoga.

Hockert won the Olympic 5,000-metre race in record time of 14:22.2. Later in 1936, he set mark of 8:14.8 for 3,000 metres, which still stands as a world record.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Chitter chatter: Sep Palin has 22 trotters and pacers, including Greyhound, in training at Aiken, S.C.....Track men tell you Chuck Fenske's most dangerous rival for the balance of the season is not Glen Cunningham but Lou Zamperini, the dark-thatched Californian....His radio job will cause Charlie Grimm, ex-Cub boss, to miss his first training camp in 24 years.

One-minute interview:
Dizzy Dean: "No, I ain't mad at nobody.....I ain't ever mad at nobody."

Tattle tales: Plenty of whispering here that Mike Jacobs may run into interference from a rival fight mob before the Messrs. Conn and Lesnevich tee off at Miami, Feb. 28.,..Taisto Maki has yet to make a track start in the United States, but already he's responsible for $846 in the coffers of the Finnish relief fund through contributions, etc.....American Baseball Association gossips say the loss of Vince DiMaggio will just about kill Kansas sity's flag chances.

Sports cocktail: Ty Cobb has bought a home on the Nevada side of Lake Tahoe and gone in for skiing in a big way..When Fenske beats Cunningham the Akron Beacon-Journal prints it under the "old news department" head .... Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy went night clubbing during the week-end.

BRUINS CAN GAIN FIRST PLACE TIE BY BEATING WINGS

Victory Will Put Them Level With Rangers and a Game in Hand

CLAPPER RETURNS

Ross States Milt Schmidt is the Greatest Centre of All Times

Boston, Feb. 13.—(CP)—All those hockey managers who said they would make Art Ross eat his words haven't shoved much past the teeth of the quick-tongued Boston pilot yet.

Ross has his Bruins in position to gain a first-place tie in the National League standing tonight when they play Detroit Red Wings here. If they win, the Bruins will climb level with Lester Patrick's brilliant New York Rangers and will have a game in hand to go ahead.

Ross called his 1938-39 World Championship team the greatest he had seen in all his hockey experience. So the critics smiled when Art cut adrift such compotent parts of that team as Charlie Sands, Ray Getliffe, and then Eddie Shore and Jack Portland.

But here are the Bruins within easy knocking distance of the top and Ross' hecklers haven't had a chance yet to laugh out loud. With Captain Dit Clapper back on their defence after an absence through injury, the Bears seem ready to make long strides toward their second straight league championship.

Ross told observers that Milt Schmidt was one of the greatest centres of all time. The solid young centre from Kitchener, Ont., is leading the scorers by four full points and no manager who claims anyone greater than Schmidt can laugh at that.

Pitchers Allowed To Take Complete Step Before Delivery

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 13 (AP)—Relief has been a long time coming for the baseball pitcher, and he has taken some hard knocks in the past 20 years, but the elders of the game at last are in a mood to help him stand off the batters.

Meeting here yesterday, the Rules Committee voted to allow pitchers to rear back and take another.

Complete step as they deliver the ball. That is the first really important move toward helping the hurler that has been made since the rule-makers began abolishing freak deliveries back in 1919.

Opinion was widely divided whether the new rule would effect any great and immediate change. All agreed it was a move toward harnessing the hitter, or at least toward giving the pitcher an even break.

Adoption of the rule was a victory for Clark Griffith, veteran Washington Senators Manager, who for several years has been carrying on a vigorous campaign for pitchers' rights.

The new rule will permit the pitcher almost complete freedom with one leg. There's only one thing he can't do now, and that is to step sidewise.

Whereas the hurler previously has had to stand with both brogans on the rubber, he now (in the case of a right-hander) can stretch his left leg far out behind him during his wind-up and take a long, complete stride as he swings through to deliver the ball.

CANADA SCORES SUCCESSES AT NEW YORK SHOW

Reg Sparks' $12,000 English Bull Dog Judged Best of Breed in Show

SPLENDID ANIMALS

Cairn Terrier From Brockville and 1939 Winner in Class Beaten

New York, Feb. 13.—(AP)—In a fantastic world of sharp-eyed judges, gawping humans, throat sprays, powder-puffs and eyebrow pencils the best examples of dogdom went on parade yesterday—and today a two-year-old nine-pound ball of fluff is the doggiest of them all.

Just arrived from England, a magnificent Sable Pekingese won the best of breed from another foreign champion believed almost unbeatable—and immediately became a prime choice to replace last year's Ch. Ferry Von Rauhfelson of Giralda as best in show this year.

The newest sensation is Remenham Derri purchased by Mrs. Richard S. Quigley of Lockhaven, Pa., for a sum that guessers said might be high as $7,500. Winner of a gold medal for being England's most victorious dog, Remenham Derri defeated Ch. Che le of Matsons Catawba, often regarded as the best Peke ever to show in the United States.

It was only 24 hours before Westminster opened Monday morning that the winner arrived—after a bad three weeks in a stormy Atlantic crossing.

The first important winner of 1939 to take a beating was the Cairn terrier. Ch. Pimpernel of Mercia, from the Brockville, Ontario, kennels of Mrs. G. W. Hyslop. The Wilton, Conn., Tapscot Kennels' Jere O'Tapscot won.

Canada scored several successes. The most outstanding was that of Reg Sparkes' recent English importation, Basford Golden Nymph, said to have cost the Toronto exhibitor $12,000 and which won 62 ribbons in England in little more than two months. Basford Golden Nymph won the best bulldog award.

Sisler, Browns' Great Slugger, Another Ohio Boy Who Made Good

In 1924 — A recent snap — Sisler the slugger — An early picture with Browns — A great fielder

By Central Press Canadian

For nearly 20 years, George Harold Sisler was the peer of all first basemen.

He was the classiest, speediest hardest-hitting first sacker the St. Louis Browns ever had. His big bat was the scourge of opposing pitchers year after year. His mighty .420 batting average in 1922 still stands as the highest in American league history.

Today Sisler still is connected with baseball in a big way. As high commissioner of national semi-pro baseball, the Browns' star of yesterday wields a big influence on baseball-playing youth.

Ohio Boy

Another of the Ohio boys who have made good in the big time, Sisler claims Manchester, O., as his birthplace. This was in 1893.

First schooling was at Akron, O., where Sisler drew considerable attention as a phenom with the bat. When only 17, he signed with Akron on an old Buckeye-Keystone stage league. But he didn't play with the Akron team, his contract being transferred to Columbus, where Pittsburgh bought it. He signed a contract with the Pirates, but he was only a minor. When his father signed one with the St. Louis Browns, Sisler became a "cause celebre" in baseball.

The old National baseball commissions had to rule on the contracts. It decided in favor of the Browns.

Hits .420

Sisler's first year in organized ball was in 1915. But he broke in as a pitcher. He also played the outfield. As a pitcher he won four games and lost five. But Sisler's whip-arm and his fielding genius soon caused his transfer to an infield spot—at first base.

In his first full season with the Browns, Sisler banged out a .305 average. For 10 years he never failed to hit under .300, and twice finished with .400 or better. He was declared the "most valuable" player in the American league in 1922, the first player to be so honored.

Quits for Good

In 1923 Sisler came down with an eye infection. He was out of baseball the whole season, but proved his greatness the following have made god in the big time, over .300 again. In 1927 Sisler was traded to Washington, where he remained only one year.

He went to Boston of the National league and after three years there he was shunted to the minors. After a year with Rochester and Shreveport, he hung up his playing paraphernalia for good. He managed Shreveport while playing for that club.

Sisler set many records in his major league career. He was stolen base king twice. He finished with a .341 average for his lifetime work, one of the highest of all.

BOBBY BAUER
Boston Bruins

Bobby Bauer

Only in its third full National league season as a unit, but heading for the heights occupied by the Cooks - Boucher, Morenz - Joliat - Gagnon, Primeau - Conacher-Jackson, and other great forward lines of the game, is Boston Bruins' "Kraut line," on which Bobby Bauer patrols right wing—and one of the best at that position in the league. Last year he was selected on the Canadian Press alternate all-star team. He hails from the same section of Ontario as Milt Schmidt and Porky Dumart, his companions on the Boston No. 1 line, his birthplace being listed as Waterloo. The date, Feb. 16, 1915. He played his junior hockey at Kitchener and St. Michael's college, Toronto, whom he helped to a Memorial Cup win six years ago. First pro team was the Boston Bruin Cubs, later Providence Reds, before moving up to the major league to stay. In his first full season he led his linemates—in fact the whole Boston team—in scoring with 20 goals. Last year he got 13, one less than Dumart two less than Schmidt, and his totals until the beginning of this season stood at 34 goals, 32 assists for 66 points, with a mere 13 minutes served in penalties. Robert is the smallest member of the "Kraut line," scaling only around 160 pounds—but very forceful.

TOMORROW:—Pep Kelly, Maple Leafs.

Complete arrangements for the first round junior "B" play-offs in the O.H.A. and between the Belleville "Quintes" and the Kingston "Red Indians" were completed over the week-end. Coach Wally Elmer, Kingston, and Skipper Toots Holway agreed to open the series in Kingston on Friday night with the return game slated to be played in the Hume Arena next Tuesday, with goals to count on the round. Some bad news was received in the Quintes camp over the week-end, when it was learned Jack Bundy had strained the ligaments of his back. Jack's injury was attended and strapped by the club physician, Dr. Austin Walters, who ordered Bundy to remain off skates for at least a week. Bundy sat on the sidelines last night, but is hopeful of getting into Friday night's game at Kingston. Incidentally Bundy's injury was sustained during last week's Picton at Belleville junior tussle.

As the Petes and the Flyers launch upon their fourth consecutive O.H.A. group play-off Wednesday it might be well to review their past records. To date the Petes have won two of the past three group play-offs, the Airmen winning their first such meeting in 1937 following which Tommy Lawrence's sextette continued to win the Intermediate "A" championship and later bring the first and only Allan Cup playdown to a Belleville ice. In 1938 and again last year the Petes rubbed the Flyers out in the post-group series. The season's statistics show that the Petes have a decided edge in the matter of goals scored for and against. In eight games the Petes scored a total of 75 goals, while in seven games the Flyers have scored but 24 counters. Defensively the Petes have only had 26 goals scored against them as against 31 pucks that have entered the Flyers' nets. From this corner it would appear as though the Flyers' best bet would be to play a "kitty bar the door" type of hockey and depend solely on breakaways in an effort to try and leave the fleet-footed Peterboro' forwards in the background, if that's possible.

According to Billie Hughes, who seems to be in the know as far as boxing circles are concerned in these parts, there will be no return Smith-Ellis fight. It seems the powers that be at the Trenton R.C.A.F. feel there has been too much undue publicity given the proposed Ellis-Smith return bout, which tends to create ill feelings between all parties concerned. The Trenton branch of the Canadian Legion had planned to stage the bout, but from what information we were afforded by Mr. Hughes, the Trenton promoters will have to be satisfied with a substitute show if they are at all desirous of entering the boxing promotion picture. Maybe when the present air had cleared and more amicable and mutual feelings are restored we may see Hub Smith and Jiber Ellis face each other in the ring once again, but in the meantime the bout is taboo, out and cold turkey.

This year's National League schedule hands Cincinnati's team the largest mileage in its history. The Reds will have to cover 14,996.2 railroad miles to play their games, 700 miles more than they toured in 1938, their previous high.

When it comes to action and service it would appear as though Tommy Mascaro, manager of the Capitol Theatre, really has something on the ball. In less than one week after the recent world's heavyweight title fight, the fight pictures are to be shown at the Capitol Theatre, commencing Thursday of this week. In this modern age of speed one can look for most anything. Local fight fans will eagerly await these pictures in order to find out first hand whether or not Louis' crown is tottering. The "Brown Bomber" says he refrained from hitting Godoy on the top of the noggin on purpose. "Do you think I was goin' to bash my fists on his skull?" asked Louis. On the other hand experts claim Louis is slipping, but regardless as to which camp you favour, the better suggestion would be to see the fight pictures at the Capitol Theatre and be your own judge. The pictures were taken at ringside and show all of the important features in slow motion, for the benefit of the patrons.

While on the subject of boxing, do you remember when the comeback campaign of Max Schmeling, dethroned world heavyweight boxing champion, suffered a setback six years ago tonight when Steve Hamas blasted out a 12-round decision over the German? Schmeling's campaign, however, seemed crowned with success when he knocked out Joe Louis in June, 1936, but the Brown Bomber answered with a one-round knockout in 1938.

One thing was proven during last night's Air Force-Belleville junior exhibition tilt—Toots Holway's teen-aged charges still persist in passing the old boot heel around at random and with abandon. Combination hockey is the only winning style yet devised, but there is absolutely no use in shooting the rubber without knowing first hand whether or not there is a potential receiver available. Last night the juniors' passing plays were absolutely terrible, as they banged the rubber around without the slightest thought of where their passes would terminate. The success of combination is to play "heads up hockey" and watch all passing plays, as the playmaker is invariably responsible for the ultimate outcome of whether a goal results or otherwise.

Both teams were shorthanded last night, McLeod of the Air Force being laid up with an injured shoulder, sustained in Peterboro'. Neither Ginn or Wagar were available for the juniors, both being snow bound, which forced Perry Everett up on the forward line where the junior defenceman did remarkably well. The game was played solely to experience the juniors and it is to be hoped they learned plenty from their mistakes of last night.

Sport Spice — Argentine boxing promoters are said to have offered $500,000 guarantee for a return Louis-Godoy fight, but no mention is made of the officials.... All of which brings "Two-ton Tony" Galento to the fore with the crack that "Louis is all washed up and I kin knock dat bum out inside five rounds" .... Joe Vosmik, once the pride of the Cleveland Indians, was traded by the Red Sox to the Dodgers, the last stopping off place in the majors ....Walt Gerow's Napanee intermediates finished the O.H.A. season without having won a game, but they tied Queen's 7-7 last night, which is a slightly better O.H.A. record than the Redmen enjoyed....Dave Harding who played hockey 25 years ago, was out again with Camp Borden last night....Dave had an intermediate team of his own here last winter and gathered more pleasure and fun out of getting beaten than could be imagined.

NAZI FREIGHTER SCUTTLED BY

British ship delivered the finishing stroke but made it clear it was not the Hawkins.

"I didn't see the Wakama burning," he said, "but I know she burned and sank because of a communication I received from the other cruiser.

"I understood they finished her off so she would not menace other shipping."

When asked if a British scouting plane had been the first to spot the richly laden 3,771-ton freighter, Sir Henry said: "That is correct."

Plane Did Not Attack

"But the plane did not attack; it simply gave word to give up."

Sir Henry, who was Knighted after commanding the British squadron which drove the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee into Montevideo, indicated that the overhauling of the Wakama had been an easy matter.

The Admiral said the Hawkins did not make any move against the Wakama.

"We were in communication with the other cruiser. She located the Wakama and then asked for instructions.

"I said, "you take care of her; we are going on to Rio De Janeiro'."

Asked whether the Shropshire or the Dorsetshire could take credit for bagging the Wakama, the Admiral answered:

"It was one of them. Besides the Hawkins, there was only one other British warship near the Wakama."

Heavy Consignment

Her holds stowed with heavy consignments of lard, hides, cottonseed oil, mica, rock crystal and cacao, the Wakama had flashed an SOS yesterday, giving her position as 50 miles off Cabo Frio, east of Rio De Janeiro.

The Hawkins had been 34 days at sa and had nothing exciting to report other than the Wakama incident, Sir Henry said in denying reports published here that the cruiser had sunk the German freighter Wolfsburg.

The Wolfsburg sailed from Recife sea and had nothing exciting to regamble with the British blockade has been heard.

La Coruna, the last German freighter to sail from Rio De Janerio before the Wakama, "apparently escaped the British cruiser awaiting her off shore," Sir Henry said.

He added that the vessel, now nine days at sea, might still be intercepted.

DIET MEMBER CRITICIZES ARMY

Makino's party, the Seiyukai, has only less parliamentary strength than the dominant Minseito.

"The people are uneasy," Makino said, "and to remove that uneasiness it is necessary that the armament plan must be explained concretely to some extent.

"The people are barred from making political criticism, but they are criticizing nevertheless in other ways."

Situation Reviewed

Hata then reviewed the international situation and the war in China and said the army estimates were based on "common sense."

Citing the need for the "replenishment and rehabilitation of arms," the army and navy on Feb. 1 presented for parliament's approval a 7-year program to cost $671,000,000 in addition to $1,862,017,680 already approved.

"We cannot discharge our duties if the army continues to make such vague replies regarding this enormous expense," Makino replied. "Nor do I consider the war minister is discharging his."

"I cannot give a further explanation," Hata retorted. "We are in the midst of war and are doing all possible to prevent espionage."

Japan does not intend to withdraw from the Anti-Comintern Pact even if the dispositions of one or two of the other member nations differ now from what they were when the pact was concluded, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita told the Lower House of the Diet.

Arita repeated in substance the views he expressed in his speech to the Diet a fortnight ago, when he stressed that Japan's Anti-Comintern aims were unchanged by the development of the Soviet-Nazi entente or by Japan's own efforts to adjust her relations with the U.S.S.R.

Ryo Koyama, rightist member of parliament, meanwhile charged Great Britain with responsibility for sinking of the Japanese liner Terukuni Maru Nov. 23.

The Terukuni Maru went down off the English coast presumably after striking a mine. Koyama declared that "whether conditions at the time make us doubt that the mine was laid by German vessels; moreover it is clear that the British Admiralty designated the route followed by the liner.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reason-

MARMORA WINS OVER TWEED 4-2

Callery in Visitor's Net Proved to be the Stumbling Block

Tweed Feb. 13 (Special)—Marmora defeated Tweed last night at the arena by a score of 4 to 2 in a hard fought struggle in which Callery in the visitors net proved to be the hero. Only his superb work prevented Tweed from winning as he repeatedly outguessed the attackers. The locals got a bad game out of their systems. In justice to them neither Prevost nor Courneyea was feeling well and played under difficulty.

Play from the opening face-off was fast and both goalies had considerable to do. Leal missed the goal by a narrow margin, Courneyea and Prevost opened the scoring for the locals, the latter scoring on a perfect backhand. Tweed was guilty of some careless defensive work and Marmora got in close on Reeves with G. Leonard getting the equalizer on a pass from Reynolds. Play slowed considerably toward the end of the period which ended with the score deadlocked at one all.

The second period saw the visitors tack on a couple of goals as they kept the play in Tweed zone for much of the period. Only Reeves' good work in the net prevented the visitors rolling up a bigger margin. Reynolds broke the tie on a well-earned goal. Tweed's failure to back check cost them the third counter and G. Leonard's back-hand through a maze of legs beat Reeves.

G. Leonard who was outstanding for Marmora capped a perfect performance at centre with a sparkling goal early in the final period to give the visitors a commanding lead. Tweed had a big margin of the play in the last frame but were unable to pull the game out of the fire. Joe Courneyea secured the locals' only marker in this frame which saw Callery make a number of stops as he outguessed Tweed marksmen. Final score Marmora 4; Tweed 2.

Tweed: goal, J. Reeves; defence, J. Tummon, J. Orr; centre J. Courneyea; wings, Prevost, Marsh; subs E. Tummon, Howard Long, Harold Long, H. Leal, G. Wagar, A Courney.

Referees: T. Cousens, Marmora; J. Quinn, Tweed.

SOVIET DETACHMENT

One source said five Soviet divisions, including reserve lines, were occupied in that sector, although no definite figures were available. (The strength of a Russian division is estimated at 15,000 men.)

The bark of artillery continued steadily as the Karelian Isthmus battle went on.

The vigorous onslaught followed a short week-end decline, but the Finns said they were repelling the invaders at every point.

(There was no specific mention of a Russian contention that 32 more Finnish "defensive fortifications" had been captured, bringing to 61 the number claimed since last Thursday.)

Russian Drive Spreads

The Russian drive spread along the isthmus to other points. The Finnish command said a battle was continuing on the neck of land between Muolajaervi and the River Vooski; that an attack at Taipale was repulsed, and that Russian attempts to cross the ice of the Gulf of Finland and Lake Ladoga had been thwarted.

The Finns did not mention their casualties, but said the Russians suffered heavy losses.

Finnish leaders in Helsingfors expressed interest in reports that Latvia and Estonia possibly were approaching a crisis in their relations with Russia, with whom they made military pacts last autumn.

In Riga, Foreign Minister William Munters of Latvia said, however, that relations with the Soviet Union were very satisfactory, and inquired, "where's the Sovietization of which we were warned? No one in Latvia can say the Soviet Union intervenes in our home affairs some way or another."

U. S. NAVAL CHIEF FORESEES GRAVE

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, told a House Appropriations Sub-Committee in testimony made public today that the international situation is "fraught with more possibilities" affecting the United States than in 1914 and 1915.

"The ultimate aims and ambitions of Germany, Russia and Italy can not be definitely determined, nor can the public utterances of their governments be accepted at face value," Stark said.

Far East Situation

"Such conditions render likely the possibilities of a general European war and, in conjunction with far-eastern conditions, they threaten a world conflagration."

Asked whether the Navy's preparedness is greater than in 1914-16, Stark replied:

"I think it is far better, but I believe the international setup to be fraught with more possibilities against us than was the case in the early stages of the world war. This in turn tends to offset our better preparedness."

Stark rejected as futile suggestions that congress extend the traditional three-mile shore limit.

"Changes in long-established recognized international limits by one power might not, and probably would not, be accepted by some others, particularly if these others saw their own previously accepted rights injured thereby," Stark said.

"If we fail diplomatically to obtain international acceptance of our convention, we would either have to give in or fight to put it over......."

Australian Troops Arrive At Camp in Palestine

First Contingent Reaches New Encampment Prepared by Scottish Regiment

5-HOUR TRAIN TRIP

Jerusalem, Feb. 13—(CP)— Australian troops began arriving in Palestine today.

An estimated 30,000 Australian and New Zealand troops arrived at Suez yesterday after a 10,000-mile journey from the Antipodes.

The first contingent of Australians reached a Palestine camp after a five-hour train journey.

Long lines of gray buses, winding through the green hills and orange groves, carried the men from a small country station to their new encampment which had been prepared by a Scottish regiment stationed in Palestine.

British Press Hails Arrival

London, Feb. 13—(CP)— The press hailed today the arrival of Australian and New Zealand troops in the middle east as further proof of the Dominions' intensive war efforts.

"Turn your eyes to Suez," The Daily Herald said. "There Anthony Eden (Dominions Secretary) welcomed on your behalf yesterday the Anzacs of 1940.

"Nothing could make us British rejoice more than the quick decision of the Dominions to give not merely moral but practical help in the present mortal struggle."

Answer to Nazi Prophets

The News Chronicle saw the arrival as one more answer "to false prophets in Germany who built hope on the break-up of the empire in the event of war."

"Once more the Australians and New Zealanders have taken war stations for the defence of our common heritage."

The Times said "the Allies have been building quietly in the near and middle east in readiness for any emergency in any part of the world."

"Both Australian and New Zealand forces are composed exclusively of men who have volunteered individually to take their part in this crusade for freedom and for the right of small nations to maintain their independence against lawless aggression.

Nazi Sources Claim Commander Within His Rights

Berlin, Feb. 13—(AP) — Nazi sources claimed today that the commander of a German submarine was within his legal rights if he torpedoed the Netherlands steamship Burgerdijk, because the ship was en route to the British contraband control station at the Downs.

(The Holland Amerika line reported yesterday that the 6,853-ton freighter was torpedoed Saturday on a voyage from New York to Rotterdam).

Under German prize court law any neutral vessel headed for a belligerent port, whether voluntarily or not, is considered by German naval officers as carrying contraband.

ON THE ICE IN BATTLE DRESS

The Canadian Expeditionary Force hockey team, which has been formed by Canadian soldiers now training in England, were so rushed for time when they visited Empress Hall for a workout that they took to the ice in battle dress. Here one of the Canadians is "on the run" with a young figure skater as a partner.

INSIDE A GUARDIAN OF BRITISH SHIPPING

High above the sea, the side gunners of one of the huge flying boats attached to the coastal defence patrol of the royal air force, are pictured at their positions keeping a ceaseless watch for the appearance of enemy U-boats or planes. The flying boats of the coastal command have completed 5,000,000 miles in their task of watching over British shipping since the war began and not one ship has been lost in a convoy under their care. The big Sunderland four-engined flying boats meet the convoys when they are still far from British shores and during their constant watch, the whole service have sighted and attacked over a hundred U-boats.

WAR BRIEFS

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP)—The German High Command communique today reported: "No special events."

Paris, Feb. 12 (AP)—Boy Scouts started a house-to-house collection of scrap iron for melting into armaments today, collecting everything from bird cages to German helmets brought back from the front in 1918. The first test collection yielded a breastplate of a French cuirassier worn in the 1870 war between France and Prussia.

Rouen, France, Feb. 12 (AP)—A contingent of 150 Hungarian volunteers for service in Finland passed through here today enroute to Helsingfors. They carried their own equipment.

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Feb. 12—(AP)—General Attilio Terruzzi, Minister for Italian Africa, told Blackshirt Colonists today to prepare "for every risk" when Italy announces her intentions to the world.

"All must be ready," he said, "so that when Italy shall have to utter her sacrosanct words to the world everyone, however distant from the Mother country, may be prepared for every risk."

Washington, Feb. 12 (AP)—Senator Georgie Norris, Nebraska Independent, suggested today that the United States government's "moral embargo" against warplane sales to Japan and Russia be extended to all goods.

In addition, he said, United States citizens might well cease buying any products from the two countries, which he described as "barbarous."

London, Feb. 12 (CP)—The Finnish legation, which is assisting British volunteers to go to Finland, said today that only a small number had enlisted so far. The legation indicated that these men probably would leave secretly soon.

Most of those applying at the legation were said to be adventurous youths or men too old or for other reasons unable to get into the British service.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma telephoned home she was going to be a little late for dinner on account of different things, and me and pop were sitting in the living room waiting for her and getting hungrier, and pop said, High ho, the house doesn't seem the same without your mother, does it, Benny?

No sir, it's not as good, I said, and pop said, That's what I meant, I think we ought to show our appriciation for your mother on the occasions when she is in your mist and can get the good of it, instead of waiting til her absense impresses us with the realization of how much we esteem her, dont you think so? he said.

Sure, pop, G, I said. Hay pop, I've got an idea, why dont we meet her down in the front hall when she comes in, like somebody being met at the station by a brass band to show how much we appriciate her coming home? I said, and pop said, By gollies that is an idea, we might sing something appropriate to the tune of Happy Berthday to you.

Aw G, we ought to do more than that, pop, I said. We ought to yell and cheer and bang on tin plates and things and make it sound just like New Years and give her a real reception to prove how much we really think of her, I said, and pop said, I see what you mean.

And I've got another idea, pop, I said. I've got a round string of paper flowers up in my room like the Highwayans put around their necks to show they're happy, so how about if I get that and throw it around ma's neck while we're yelling and cheering? I said, and pop said, That's a real thought, but if your mother happens to have one of her shopping headakes dont you think teh warmth of our welcome might serve to remind her of it?

G, that's right, and the paper flowers are kind of old and shaky, they might go all over the floor and spoil the effect, I said.

The result being we both just kissed her when she came in and she seemed sattisfied.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Feb. 13—(AP)—Buyers got behind a handful of low-priced issues in today's stock market and generally neglected the so-called leaders. Near the fourth hour fractional gains predominated.

Among stocks, new 1939-40 highs were posted for Studebaker, Martin-Parry and Loft in relatively lively dealings. Attracting modest support were Crown Cork, International Mercantile Marine, Eastman Kodak, Allied Chemical, International Paper Preferred, Bethlehem General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania.

Dome Mines and Hiram Walker, among Canadian issues, dipped trifles as Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific held unchanged. Canadas 4c, in the bond market, dipped 1-8 of a point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 13—(CP)— The Toronto market was colorless in the early hours today with prices barely firm, except for a narrow gain in the gold share index, and only 132,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

Adjustments in the golds were limited to a few cents. In the base metal list Steep Rock was the feature. It climbed to a new high at 2.63 for a gain of 9 cents. Sudbury Basin and Noranda were up narrowly. Western oils were dull.

Egg Prices Ease Slightly at Toronto

Toronto, Feb. 13 — With many members of the trade on the sidelines digesting the monthly figures from Ottawa on cold storage stock holdings, butter eased on a nominal market here yesterday. The egg market, however, closed on a firm note.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported 32,746,759 pounds of creamery butter held in cold storage in Canada on Feb. 1, as compared with 34,269,447 pounds a year ago. Cheese stocks were well down at 20,465,622 pounds, against 29,841,263 on the same date of last year. Cold storage eggs numbered 779,652 dozen, and compared with 531,291 on Feb. 1, 1939, while fresh eggs totalled 1,101,126 dozen, as against 612,592 a year ago, and frozen eggs amounted to 3,261,286 pounds, which compared with 2,653,112 pounds in 1939.

Only the odd small sale of Ontario solids was reported on the butter market as buyers remained aloof from proceedings. No. 1 grades closed at the nominal quotation of 27¼c per pound.

Fresh receipts cleared readily under fair demand on the egg market, and the tendency was to ask for higher prices on the two top grades in the graded section. Slightly better demand was evident for the lower grades. Prices in both divisions maintained previous levels.

YOUTH MINISTER TO TAKE OFFICE

Leaves For Ottawa

Following the meeting the Conservative Chief left for Ottawa to attend Lord Tweedsmuir's funeral Wednesday, after which he plans to continue his election campaign tour of Western Canada.

Dr. Manion will broadcast over a nation-wide network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from Brandon, Man., Friday from 10.30 to 11 p.m. E.S.T. The Broadcast is a substitute for the one scheduled from here last night.

Dr. Manion told his audience in the City Hall auditorium that a Welfare Minister would be assisted by a voluntary and unpaid advisory committee of the best qualified young people's workers who would formulate proposals for employment developments for youth.

Owe Opportunity to Earn Living

"We do not owe our young people a living but we do owe them opportunity of earning a living," he said. To this end, he pledged himself "to an unremitting effort to provide opportunity for our youth, irrespective of their creed, politics, social or economic status, to train them to occupy their rightful places of service and responsibility in the community."

The Welfare Minister and assisting voluntary committee would seek the help of business, educational, union, social and religious bodies through local and sectional advisory committees.

Dr. Manion said he planned to set up work centres along the lines of the civilian conservation corps camps in the United States. In addition, he would propose a scheme of apprenticeship in industry, assisted by a government subsidy, which would give young people an opportunity to learn a trade.

Business reasons—as well as empire sentiments and love of democratic liberties—demand that Canada's war effort should be wholehearted, Dr. Manion said.

Leader Asks Question

If Britain and France were beaten, what would become of Canada's export trade, on which much of this country's prosperity depends he asked. It might well be, he added, that Canada itself would be in danger if Hitler were victor.

"That is one reason why, now that we are in the war, we must do our very best, short of conscription, to aid in winning it," Dr. Manion said.

The Conservative Leader made brief reference to an exchange of letters he had last March with Tim Buck, Dominion Secretary of the communist party of Canada, in which he had cited an encyclopedia definition of communism, in part, as emphasizing the "initial necessity of civil war."

Experts Important

At that time he had remarked to Buck that he had no knowledge that the Communist Party of Canada had dissociated itself from Russian Communism and its world revolution aims, its wiping out of freedom of speech, press and assembly, its attempted destruction of religion and family life.

If Hitler should win in this war, he said, Canada might well be the prize Germany would aim at, with it rich resources, huge areas and sparse population.

On the material side he pointed out that Britain was the world's greatest market for foodstuffs and many raw products abounding in Canada.

"Our huge exports to that country are of the utmost importance to us," he said. "In wheat, Britain imports about 200,000,000 bushels a year, of which we supply a good portion. In lumber, fish, nickel, and other minerals, fruits, bacon and cheese, Canada is the source of supply to such an extent that that market is of vital importance to us.

A Second-Rate Power

"Should Britain and France be defeated by Germany, Britain would then be in the subservient position that Czecho-Slovakia and Poland are now. She would be a second-rate power, if a power at all, and our markets probably would be gone.

"Where would we sell our surplus product, a large proportion of which we sell now in the British market? That is a question that puzzles thoughtful men in all parts of Canada, especially those who are interested in exporting our products.

"Not only through sentimental attachment to the British Empire, not only because of deep affection for the liberties to which we are accustomed, but from the standpoint, as well, of our export trade and all its effects upon our various lines of business and industry, it is vitally important that Britain and her Allies must win this war".

Russia Declares Self

Dr. Manion said Russia had at last declared itself as an aggressor in its invasion of Finland, showing it shared the objectives and methods of Hitler. Here he noted a perpetual willingness of the German people to be "bossed." They were a great people in science, arts and literature but there was "something wrong with a people that permits itself to be bossed that way."

Because of his criticism in the House of Commons and elsewhere of the Communist party, the Clarion, former Communist paper, had dubbed him Canada's No. 1 enemy of Communism, he said. He felt sure all good Canadians, whether Protestants or Catholic, objected to Communism. He defined Communism as establishment of Socialism by force, by revolt, whereas the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation aimed to bring about Socialism by constitutional means.

ONTARIO HOUSE STANDS RECESSED

"He was working on a history of our country which it is to be hoped can be completed by his literary executors. But my great personal hope is that his notes contain sufficient information for us to understand his thoughts as to the best way of dealing with the constitutional problems which have been disturbing us so greatly in recent years."

Lord Tweedsmuir stood for all that was best in democracy. No other system could have produced a man of such great attributes combined with such simple humility, said Col. Drew.

"His public life was founded on the strong rock of domestic happiness under the guidance of deep religious convictions which he had acquired in his own home. He stood before us as a living example of all that was good and decent, and worthwhile in the way of life that we are fighting today to preserve."

Indebted for Royal Visit

When the history of today is written, Col. Drew predicted that Lord Tweedsmuir would be said to have contributed more to national unity in Canada than any other man. To him Canada was indebted for the royal visit last year.

Canada had looked forward to the day when Lord Tweedsmuir in his writings would immortalize Canada, said Premier Hepburn, rising to say he concurred in every thought expressed by Col. Drew.

"He became one of us and always remained the great commoner," said the Premier. "Britain has lost a great citizen and Canada a great Canadian."

Arthur Roebuck (Ind. Lib. Toronto-Bellwoods) said Lord Tweedsmuir was the very ideal personality for filling the exalted office which he took. In intellectual power, in grace of character and in ability as a thinker, he shone.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, said the French-Canadians of Canada shared every sentiment of loss expressed by their fellow English-Canadians.

MAN SUSPECTED IN MURDER CASE

Arrest After Gun Fights

Prior to the death of Atamonchuk an ex-convict, police arrested the other two suspects after two gun fights during which at least one wanted man was wounded.

The first arrest was made after officers of a cruiser car accosted the driver of a car believed to have been used in the getaway after the two policemen were shot. The driver fled in the car and police followed, engaging in a running gun fight. Police declined to give any details of the arrest but it was learned blood stains and a gun were found in the car.

A second running gun fight was staged by the officers who captured the second suspect and rushed him off to hospital. The second man was spotted in downtown Winnipeg and began a duel with pursuing officers.

The two men were in custody at the time officers set out to round up Antamonchuk.

Man-Hunt Pressed

The man-hunt was pressed for Atamonchuk, recently released from Stony Mountain penitentiary. At 4:30 o'clock this morning word came that the man was in the Brant block in the north end of the city and police squads, armed with shot guns and rifles, rushed to the hide-out.

Before one suite in the block Detective Sergeant Harry Alexander and a picked crew stopped. The demand to open the door was received with Atamonchuk's reply: "I can't. I have a gun in my back."

"Open up or we'll bomb you out," Alexander persisted. A voice of a second man in the room pleaded with police not to shoot and a rifle was then tossed from the suite followed by a man who gave himself up but who went unidentified by police.

A shot was heard in the room. Police found Atamonchuk slumped on the floor, a bullet hole through his body. The bullet had gone through and imbedded itself in the wall.

TWEEDSMUIR'S BODY LIES IN STATE

Senior officers of the headquarters staff of the armed forces also were in attendance. So were high commissioners from South Africa, Australia and Eire.

A purple and black draped platform had been erected on the station platform to the height of the railway car and onto this the casket was moved from the car "Bonaventure" which bore his Excellency body from Montreal.

Casket Draped with Union Jack

The casket, draped with the Union Jack and bearing the Governor-General's head-dress, was passed through the window of the car to the platform.

From there it went to the shoulders of eight bearers from the firing party who carried it through the lines of the guard of honor, from the Governor-General's Footguards.

Hon. Alastair Buchan, the Governor-General's third son, and Sir Shuldham Redfern, personal secretary to the Governor-General followed immediately behind the casket as the guard of honor, lining the route from the end of the train, through the station concourse and out the east door, presented arms.

From there a motor hearse quickly bore the casket to the Centre Block, under escort of motor cycle police.

Beneath the Peace Tower the small cortege entered the Parliament Building's main door and down the heavily draped corridor to the Senate Chamber.

There a dais had been prepared, with tall candles at each of the four corners. In the anteroom floral tributes from all parts of Canada awaited placement about the bier.

Son is One of Officers on Guard

From three o'clock this afternoon until six and from 8 to 10 o'clock this evening, the body will lie in state so that all who wish may pass by the bier. It will be guarded by four officers in shifts, one of them, Hon. Alastair Buchan.

Capital's Streets Crowded

The procession from the Union Station to Parliament Hill was through streets crowded with people and, for several hundred yards from the station, the way was lined by troops of the Foot Guards and the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa.

As the cortege wound about the slope leading to the Peace Tower its way was lined by men of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Solid lines of troops guarded the main corridor of the Centre Block along which the body was carried by the same eight men of the firing party provided for the station arrival by the Guards Regiment.

Hon. Alastair Buchan and Sir Shuldham Redfern fell in immediately behind the casket as it was taken from the hearse and borne through the main entrance.

Sir Lyman Duff followed immediately after, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and others of the official party.

While his Excellency's plumed helmet, dress sword and sword straps were carried upon the casket, the Governor-General's orders and medals were carried by an aide on a black cushion, and placed beside the bier.

Complete Hush Over City

Throughout the slow-march procession from station to Parliament Buildings there was almost a complete hush over normal activities of the city, broken only by the intermittent playing of funeral marches by the Footguards band, the muffled roll of drums, and shouted commands to section after section of the Guards who presented arms as the casket passed.

Short Prayer is Said

Immediately the casket was placed in the senate chamber, the four tall candles, one at each corner of the bier, were lighted and Rev. Alexander Ferguson of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, who will conduct the state funeral service tomorrow, said a short prayer.

Then the first group of four officers who will maintain constant guard over the body advanced, one to each corner of the stand, with swords raised high in solemn ceremonial.

Reaching their appointed posts the officers turned smartly, lowered their sword points to the floor and bowed with hands crossed over sword-hilts.

Change of Guard

This guard will be changed at short intervals, the officers being drawn from the four services, navy, army, air force and Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Following the ceremonial the Chief Justice, Prime Minister, Foreign Representatives, Justices of the Supreme Court, high officers of the four branches of the service and cabinet ministers, filed past the bier.

At three o'clock this afternoon the chamber will be thrown open for the general public. The lying in state will be interrupted from six o'clock until eight, and then be resumed until 10 o'clock tonight.

First to Lie in State

The Capital temporarily forgot war problems and political issues to pay respect to the late Governor-General.

The body of Lord Tweedsmuir is the first to lie in State in the new parliament buildings. Only two other men were accorded the honor of such a parliamentary ceremony. In 1891 Sir John A. MacDonald lay in State in the old parliament buildings which were burned down in 1916 and in 1919 Sir Wilfrid Laurier lay in State in the National Museum, being used at that time as a temporary parliament building while the new structure was being erected.

The entire election campaign has been stalled as the nation mourns and won't resume until the end of the week. Conservative Leader Manion interrupted his coast-to-coast election tour to come back to Ottawa for the funeral but will return to Western Canada later in the week and speak over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Friday night from Brandon, Man.

Practically all political activity ceased on Parliament Hill until after the funeral.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King likely will begin his campaign again early next week, probably with a National network radio speech but the campaign is not expected to hit its stride for a week.

Messages Acknowledged

Last night the Prime Minister acknowledged receipt of numerous messages of sympathy at Lord Tweedsmuir's death from many governments. These included the United States, Australia, New Zealand and Italian.

Lady Tweedsmuir received cablegrams of condolences from the King, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, Anthony Eden, Dominions Secretary, and many personal friends in the United Kingdom.

Officers in Mourning

Officers of the Canadian army, navy and air force wore black arm bands and all Dominion government buildings throughout Canada were closed this afternoon. Flags will remain at half mast until the official mourning period ends next Sunday night.

Funeral arrangements were completed late yesterday by an inter-departmental committee headed by Dr. E. H. Coleman, Under-Secretary of State, and approved by Lady Tweedsmuir.

From three p.m. to six p.m. the body lies in state in the black-draped Senate chamber, where many times Lord Tweedsmuir officiated in his official capacity at the opening and closing of parliament and the annual drawing room.

Casket Not Opened

The body also will lie in State from eight p.m. to 10 p.m. and during both periods thousands of sorrowing persons will file past the closed casket, which will not be opened at any time.

Among the officers is Lieut. Alastair Buchan of the Dragoon Guards, youngest son of Lord Tweedsmuir who will share in keeping the guard over his father's body.

Tomorrow at 2.10 p.m. the cortege will leave the parliament buildings for the State funeral in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, conducted by Rev. Alexander Ferguson, minister of St. Andrew's where His Excellency was an elder.

Body to be Cremated

The church in downtown Ottawa a few blocks down Wellington Street west of Parliament Hill, will be crowded with representatives of foreign governments and leaders of Canadian life, including Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Conservative leader Manion, for the service.

A motor hearse is to convey the body from the station to the Senate and then to the church but the remains will be carried on a gun carriage to the Union Station following the church service. It will be taken to Montreal for cremation prior to the trip to Great Britain for interment. Possibly the ashes will be carried on a British warship.

Service at Montreal

Montreal, Feb. 13 (CP) — A special train bearing the body of Lord Tweedsmuir back to Ottawa left here at 9.50 a.m. E.S.T. today.

The flag-bedecked casket, containing the body of the Governor-General, was borne to the three-car train from a gun-carriage after an impressive procession along streets lined with thousands of sorrowing, bare-headed Montrealers.

At the station, draped in the purple of mourning, pipers played a Scottish air as the casket with the Scottish-born Viceroy was carried to the train and placed in position through a window.

The engine and rear coach of the train also were draped in purple.

Impressive Farewell

Montreal bade an impressive, solemn farewell to the 64-year-old Governor-General who died in hospital here Sunday of a brain injury suffered in a fall at Rideau Hall a week ago today.

Before the procession of close to 1,000 members of the military, Dominion, Provincial and city government officials, started from the funeral chapel shortly before nine o'clock, residents of this city were gathering along the cortege route.

The casket was borne into the station and onto the train by eight bareheaded members of the Canadian Active Service Force. The casket was draped with a Union Jack and on top of it rested Lord Tweedsmuir's plumed helmet and his belt and sword. An aide removed the hat from the coffin as it was placed on the train.

Guards Keep Mournful Watch

Montreal's farewell began at the Mountain Street undertaking chapel where the body had lain in a quiet, dimly-lighted chamber since early yesterday. Throughout the night, officers of the Canadian Grenadier Guards continued their mournful watch over the casket.

A military band began a funeral dirge as the casket was carried down the snow-covered chapel pathway and placed aboard the gun carriage. The casket was borne by eight pallbearers — one aide-de-camp and seven honorary aides-de-camp.

A military guard "reversed arms" —muzzles pointed toward the ground—as the casket was placed aboard the gun-carriage. Civilian heads were bared in the crisp, morning air. Then the soldiers presented arms and the casket moved north on Mountain Street to Sherbrooke Street.

Silent Throngs in Streets

Silent thousands thronged the streets of the route, lined with men of the ranks, 700 strong. Veterans, too, were there, medals and decorations gleaming on their breasts. Decorations were not worn by uniformed troops and no bayonets were fixed.

The casket, drawn by 60 ratings of the Royal Canadian Volunteer Naval Reserve, moved east along Sherbrooke Street and then south along Peel and Windsor Streets to the station.

Presented Arms

Soldiers presented arms at the passing of the gun-carriage, accompanied by military units and the bands of the Grenadier Guards, Les Fusiliers, Mount Royal, and the Black Watch of Canada. The bands alternated in playing the dirges, with muffled drums rolling in the intervals.

Men of the Canadian Active Service Force led the procession, followed by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the military bands. Then came the gun-carriage, escorted by officers of various military units of Montreal district.

Following the carriage were representatives of the Dominion, Provincial and municipal governments and foreign consulates. The Dominion government was represented by Senator Raoul Dandurand whose conferes included Senators C. P. Beaubien, C. C. Ballantyne, Adrian K. Hugessen and J. H. Rainville. Mayor Camillien Houde represented the city of Montreal.

R.C.M.P. on Guard

Next in the procession came officers of the headquarters staff of Military District No. 4.

Hundreds of Montrealers crowded the big, rambling station where Lord Tweedsmuir arrived four days ago after undergoing at Ottawa an emergency operation necessitated by the fall last week.

A detachment of the R.C.M.P. stood guard at one end of the platform, near the track where the train awaited before bearing to Ottawa for the last time the remains of the Governor-General.

Slow Progress

The cortege made slow progress down Windsor Hill and arrival at the station was delayed 15 minutes. At 9.30, the head of the procession —an R.C.M.P. detachment—moved into the station, followed by units of the C.A.S.F. and the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Members of the C.A.S.F. and the Air Force lined the platform and stood at "present arms" as the casket was piped into the station by a pipe band which played "Scots Wha' Hae." The crowd stood with heads bared.

The casket was carried onto a special platform beside the train and it was put aboard through a window. The train moved out of the station within two minutes, bound for Ottawa where the state funeral will be held tomorrow.

St. Valentine's Day, An Occasion For Sending Romantic Missives And Holding Gay Parties

Be careful of that mail Wednesday morning for it is St. Valentine's Day, usually associated with lovers and whatnot, when young Dan Cupid is supposed to shoot his amorous darts in the direction of demure damsels and exuberant swains.

But there is another angle to this St. Valentine's Day stuff. Of late years one's friends have under cover of the Love-Saint's natal day, availed themselves of the opportunity of informing you what they actually think of you without divulging their identity.

Usually the communication consists of a horrible caricature that depicts your failings, or overemphasizes your hobbies, and usually comes under the heading of good clean fun.

To the vain, they produce a noticeable extension of the chest measurement. To the sensitive, they are the last words in 'insults' To those fellows or gals who perhaps are 'getting away' with a bit of skullduggery 'on the side' it is horrible realization that one is wise to their frolics.

Cupid's Day as Well

However, the day is usually associated, as has been mentioned before, with the little fellow who has been shooting arrows love-tipped for centuries. Undying declarations of love will be made in the form of gaily-colored cards, some appropriately versed, and others not so appropriate.

Sweet young things will blush in the privacy of their rooms secure in the knowledge that the latest 'big moment' has sent her the be-ribboned, be-laced bundle of cardboard love, when in reality it is the guy next door, or, and this is written guardedly, the girl-friend who suspects she has designs on someone else.

Some of the swains will come out in the open with their St. Valentine contributions. Rosy-faced youngsters will parade tomorrow evening to the front verandah, secure in the knowledge that they are old dogs at this love-stuff, and anxious through the medium of heart-shaped boxes of candy, to show their lady fair that their "amour" has long past left the puppy stage behind it.

A Tip to Husbands

And some of the old "dogs" too, will be in the St. Valentine parade. Friend wife (perhaps) will be on the receiving end of a handsome box of candy or bouquet of flowers at least business reported by florists of the city would indicate that a number of wives are in line for such gifts, although you never can tell.

Socially, a number of parties have been planned where flaming youth will do homage to the god of love, and seek some useful information as to how to deport themselves when the first pangs of Spring fever appear in youthul veins.

According to department and other shops that have sported Valentines of every conceivable shape and color for the past three weeks, Belleville is losing no interest in the birthday of the good old Saint. Plenty of cards have disappeared from counters, while the 'caricatures' likewise have found their way into mysterious pockets.

Muskrat Skins Higher in Price In Coming Season

Increased attendance and higher prices received for furs at the Canada Fur Auction Sale, held in Montreal last week, promises great things in store for local trappers this coming season according to one local Front Street fur dealer.

The absence of Russian imitation furs from the world markets has caused a corresponding reactionary trend towards the domestic market to fill the demand and this has been very largely responsible for the sudden price increase, it is said. French buyers were very much in evidence at the Montreal mart and took up a large share of the Canadian fur stocks which otherwise would have had to be sold to continental buyers.

Muskrats will sell for a much higher price this coming season than for the past number of years, it was predicted, and pre-season indications all point to a bumper rat season. Living conditions have been most favorable throughout the present winter, it was pointed out, and rat houses in the swamps and marshes bordering the rivers, are more numerous this winter than for many years past.

In referring to pelts other than the all-familiar muskrat, it was stated that more than the usual number of fox pelts were being brought in for sale. All these fox pelts are being brought in by farmers residing in many cases, only a few miles from the city, and the report is that foxes are plentiful this winter.

International Night Features Meeting Of the Y's Men's Club

International Night with Dr. H. A. Brace, who is in charge of all overseas activities of the Y.M.C.A., was featured in connection with the weekly meeting of the local Y's Men's Club at their luncheon held in the "Y" last night. Several foreign-born visitors were present to add to the International atmosphere.

"The Y.M.C.A. is endeavouring to spread Christian fellowship in 68 countries throughout the world and the work of the "Y" is still active in spite of war conditions", assured Dr. Brace as he paramountly reviewed the conditions in China, where he spent many years as field-secretary of the Association.

"The year 1940 marks the 50th anniversary of the introduction of overseas work by the Y.M.C.A. of Canada. It was just a half a century ago that two Canadian members of the "Y" left for the Orient, one going to Japan and the other to China. Later other Asiatic and European countries were added to the list until today the Y.M.C.A. helps the young men and boys of 69 countries to become established", assured the speaker, as he later made reference to the efforts of the "Y" in China in particular. Only one per cent. of the population of China has accepted Christianity and of this number over 80 per cent. of the Chinese Government officials are Christians, proving that the Governments of the country appreciate the value of the word of God", added Dr. Brace as he concluded by reviewing the war conditions in China.

Present to add color and fellowship to the Y's Men's International Night were two Chinese of this city, Dan Lee and Frank Thom, two Austrian-born boys employed locally, Carl Wawa and Eric Richter and George Poulos, a native of Greece. Other distinguished guests present to hear Dr. Brace, were Dr. Semple, F. S. Deacon, Dr. Lind, who spent many year in Chinese Hospital work and Dr. J. Marshall.

During the program a two-minute silence was observed in memory of the late Lord Tweedsmuir, following which Y'sman Alec Gordon played Grieg's Funeral March. James Bankier rendered a solo, while President Harold Vaughan was in the chair.

Kinsmen Discuss Plans for Future

Straying from the usual custom of an after-dinner speaker, officers and members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, held an open meeting in the New Queen's Hotel last night, and heard reports from various chairmen. Plans were laid down for an extensive program for functions scheduled to take place here during next month.

Next Tuesday, President Jeff. Marvell told the clubmen, was Charter Night, the anniversary of the formation of Kinsmen Clubs in Canada. An outstanding speaker will be invited to attend and a varied program has been arranged.

Highlighting the month of March will be the District Council meeting at which the local club will be hosts. On that occasion the newly formed Marmora Kinsmen Club and the Kingston Club will be the guests of honor. A high-ranking official in Kinsmen circles will address the three clubs.

There was a fair attendance last night. Kinsmen John Fisher and Don Roe acted as song-leader and sergeant-at-arms respectively.

Titles of Nobility Become Symbols of Democracy When Carried by Men Like Tweedsmuir

Boston, Feb. 13. — (CP)— The Christian Science Monitor said yesterday that "titles of nobility become symbols of democracy when they are carried by such men as was Lord Tweedsmuir".

Paying editorial tribute to Canada's Governor-General, who died in Montreal, the newspaper added: "Lord Tweedsmuir's contribution to better relations between Canada and the United States sprung from two factors: his long friendship with President Roosevelt and his close acquaintance with the United States and its citizens. . . .

"There could have been no more successful Governor-General from the viewpoint of the United States".

Other leading United States newspapers also praised the late Governor-General.

The New York Herald Tribune said:—

"History will have a tough time grading this extraordinary man's many different contributions to the life of his generation in the order of their importance and excellence. . . . Perhaps the whole effort at classification will be given up in favor of the lasting legend of his versatility and prodigious industry and the indelible impression of him as a person whose warmth of human feeling and adaptability matched his great gifts".

Chicago Tribune:

"The death of Lord Tweedsmuir deprives Canada of a Governor-General who was a most capable representative of his King. The people of this country share the loss. . . . The official loss is Canada's but the death of a charming friend will be mourned on both sides of the border".

Philadelphia Inquirer:

"The British Empire has lost a great public servant. The republic of letters, which knows no international boundaries, is also immeasurable the poorer".

Philadelphia Record:

"At 64 he was at the peak of a glittering career as statesman, diplomat, scholar and historian. Yet we think the world will remember John Buchan longer and with more affection".

Lord Tweedsmuir "had a mission to perform in Canada", said the Boston Herald. "It was to bring the Dominion close to the Mother Country, which realized even in 1935 that another great crisis was approaching. He performed the mission with tact, skill and simple precept."

Roy Rickard who gave splendid address on the subject "Come let us go over, it may be that the Lord will work for us for there is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few." He emphasized three points that "we were to prepare ourselves in body mind and spirit, we were to go with other young people and we were to go with a sense of God's presence." Mr. Rickard has specialized in the work of young people for years and his work is greatly appreciated by them.

Mr. Beach of Albert College then took charge of the games in usual capable popular way, after which refreshments were served. Miss Jean Shorey was the convener of this committee and was ably assisted by a group of workers.

While there will be nothing of a ceremonial nature take place at the schools, mention will in all probability be made of the importance of this event in Canadian history at morning assemblies in the various institutions.

Police Blotter

Three minor motor accidents occurred on the streets of Belleville yesterday, all attributed to the ice and snow that had accumulated following the heavy snows and sleet of the week end.

Shortly after 5.00 p.m. an automobile being driven northerly on Front St., by Alfred Evans, 271 William St., skidded into the rear of a truck, driven by George T. Bird, 66 John St., S. The truck had backed out from the east curb as Mr. Evans approached from the south. Despite the application of brakes, the lighter vehicle skidded into the rear of the truck, causing considerable fender, hood and body damage to the vehicle. The matter was amicably settled.

Rear of Car Damaged

An hour later on East Dundas St. an automobile driven by W. J. Davison, 171 Foster Ave., collided with the rear of a parked truck, operated by Harry Brown 32 South George St. Mr. Davison's car was damaged about the rear fender after his motor car also skidded and struck the rear of the parked truck.

Fender Damage Results

Shortly after 9.00 p.m. at the intersection of St. Charles and Strachan Sts. a truck driven by Edward Branton, 12 Grove St., rounded the corner and collided with the rear of a parked automobile, operated by Robert Poole of this city. Fender damage resulted to both vehicles in this case also.

Constables Wm. T. Evans and H Taylor investigated the accidents and no charges were deemed necessary in any of the cases.

No arrests were reported in Belleville of late, while the inclement weather minimized the number of transients entering the city, only seven seeking shelter at the police station last night.

The boys at the lower fire hall have all their personal equipment gathered up and everything is in readiness for tomorrow's exodus.

TRENTON JUNIORS DEFEAT PICTON IN FAST CONTEST

Trenton, Feb. 13.—(Special)—A better passing, better checking, bunch of Trenton Junior 'C' O.H.A. hockey players bested Picton 7-3 at the Quinte Street Arena here on Monday night before a crowd of 300 loyal fans. The win gave the local a one game margin to take to Picton on Wednesday night, when the second play-off match takes place. There was not a dull moment during the sixty minutes of real fast hockey and to climax a hectic affair the players and supporters engaged in an old-fashioned gang fight at the close of the third period. The disturbance developed in the penalty box spreading quickly to the players' benches and then the crowd entered, followed by the police who quickly took the situation in hand and quieted the frenzied participants but not until one of the ring leaders had been escorted out of the rink. Trenton took the lead at 3.10 on an Inglis from Reid counter and stood two up when White beat Martin alone at 19.32 . . Riding on the crest of a two goal margin Trenton swarmed around the visitors net and finally were rewarded with goal number three. Campbell from Orser and Weller at 1.15. Picton's only threat came at this time.

Goalie Outguessed

Pike outguessed Frost at 3.52 with the Prince Edwarder's first and team mate Hicks put his team within striking distance of the locals on Platford's goal-mouth assist. The middle frame ended Trenton 2, Picton 2. The third period was all Trenton's from start to finish but the invaders did give Frost a lot of hard shots to handle at times, when the home town squad was short-handed. Inglis and Watson teamed to chalked-up Trenton's fourth counter and a blueline drive from Burtt's stick at 5.33 buried the enemy deeper beneath the scoring avalanche. Weller added another a minute later skating from his own end of the rink through the entire Picton team to perform his feat. Picton intervened but just for a moment when Helferty sank Pike's pass at 11.40. McColl, and Burtt joined to flick the Picton light at 15.05 and this was the final score of the game.

The teams—Picton, goal, Martin; defence, L. Hicks, and Platford; centre, Mason; wings, Vandusen and Helferty; alternates, Pike, F. O'Neil, J. O'Neil, Roblin .

Trenton—goal, Frost; defence, Orser and Burtt; centre, Inglis; wings, Watson, and Reid alternates, McColl, White, Weller, Woodcox, Campbell.

FRONT STREET CLEARED OF ICE AND SNOW

City workmen are slowly but surely catching up on Old Man Winter and his substantial layer of fluffy snow and hard packed ice which has been deposited on downtown business thoroughfares. Geo. Clark Presented With Gold Watch and Brief Case by Associates

Former Night Foreman of Local C.N.R. Division Honored on Occasion of His Promotion

Combining in their regular bi-monthly meeting, a social aspect as well as an educational feature, the Belleville Enginemen's Educational Club met at the Locomotive Brotherhood Club Rooms last night and during the course of a varied and interesting program, honored one of their fellow-employees, Mr. George Clark, former Night Foreman, upon the occasion of his promotion to a higher service as an employee of the Canadian National Railway.

Mr. Clark had been Night Foreman in the local C.N.R. shops for the past three and a half years before his recent promotion to Assistant Engineer in the office of General Superintendent of Motive Power, Mr. E. R. Battley of Toronto, and his genial personality together with his remarkable ability as a shop foreman had made him a popular and valued member of the maintenance staff of the Belleville division.

The meeting opened with Mr. W. Fairbairn in the chair and after Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. A. G. Cooper, read the minutes of the last meeting, Mr. Fairbairn called the club members and visitors to attention for observance of a one-minute silence in commemoration of the late Lord Tweedsmuir, whose passing has so deeply shocked Canada and the United Kingdom.

Brief Case Presented

Mr. A. H. Jones, Locomotive Foreman, spoke in glowing terms of his promoted associate, expressing the profound well-wishes of his former associates for success in his new promotion. Mr Clark was called to the platform and presented with a handsome brief case together with a gold watch and chain. Inside the case were inscribed the words: 'Presented to George Clark by the fellow C.N.R. employees, Belleville, Ont., Feb. 12th, 1940.'

Mr. Clark thanked his former associates very heartily for the gifts and also for the co-operation, that he had received from the employees of the C.N.R. during his tenure as shop foreman in the Belleville Division. Short addresses by Mr. George Naylor, Mr. Cooper, Mr. Lionel Train, Mr. Archie Duffield, Mr. Ross and Mr. Pringle all spoke clearly of the high esteem in which Mr. Clark was held by his associates.

Mr. Fairbairn then introduced Mr. J. P. Pringle, General Superintendent of Southern Ontario Division as the guest speaker for the evening and Mr. Pringle gave a very interesting paper on Canadian National Railways as a business enterprise, "Railroading is the biggest business in Canada," said Mr. Pringle. "The railroad is essential to the prosperity of Canada and will be as essential one hundred years hence as it is today, and the sooner we make the people of Canada realize this the better.

High Standard of Living

Mr. Pringle spoke of the high standard of living enjoyed by railway employees saying that it compared very favorably with any other industry in Canada.

"With our mass production of raw materials, mass transportation is essential, and rails are essential for mass transportation. We have wheat, gold, iron and silver ores to be transported and rails are essential for their transportation."

"We have four major transportation facilities in Canada," said Mr. Pringle, "the waterways highways, airways and railroads. Waterways are not entirely satisfactory owing to lack of speed, ice condition etc. Motor transportation has its place but it cannot compete with the rails on the long haul. At the present time the trucks are able to give cheaper service to customers over short hauls but trucking costs are bound to increase as wages of their operationg personnel must be increased to higher standards."

Unfair competition between the railroads and motor transports was seen by Mr. Pringle, who stated that the trucks were having a free roadbed furnished them, while the railroads were forced to pay out twenty per cent of their income towards the upkeep of track and equipment. It would be impossible to handle all freight traffic by truck only stated Mr. Pringle. "To handle the volume of freight which passes daily between Toronto and Montreal would require a fleet of three thousand motor trucks."

C. N. R. Pays Taxes

"It is a common belief that the C.N.R. does not pay taxes, but nothing could be more erroneous. The Canadian National pays taxes just the same as any other corporation and their tax bill is over six million dollars annually. Their responsibility to the owners mean, that they must make the business pay but first they must pay the fixed charges and to pay their way without outside assistance it requires an income of over fifty million dollars annually.

"The present Canadian National system was formed in 1919 through the amalgamation of some 19 independent railways. Many of these systems were not paying and some of them bankrupt. They had been allowed to run down during the war and the Government was forced to take them over because they were not meeting expenses, but in spite of its burden of debt, the consolidated C.N.R. would pay its way if afforded fair play.

"We have a responsible, adequate and dependable service," continued Mr. Pringle, as he went on to quote schedules of trains running in Southern Ontario which defied favorable competition from trucks on overnight deliveries between Toronto and Montreal.

Provide Smooth, Safe Service

"Rock ballasted tracks were providing safe smooth service and the use of creosoted ties was lengthening period between replacement. We use from seven to eight million ties each year so the saving is considerable. During the past twenty-five years the weight of rails had been increased from 80 pounds per yard to 100 pounds and to 130 pounds for main track. Automatic signals were permitting faster service and increased power had raised the average passenger speed to sixty miles per hour, while the average freight speed between divisional points had been increased from twelve to eighteen miles per hour.

"One hundred refrigerator cars were under construction and they had passed their test satisfactorily. Their ice consumption is much less than that of older models which is a big factor in securing shippers.

"During war time our home front is essential," said Mr. Pringle. "and Canada is destined to become a great producer of munitions and raw materials. The railroad is a great factor in forwarding these goods to the front line and it is fortunate, that the present war finds Canadian railways equipped and staffed to carry on the work. If the Canadian NaNtional Railways' peace time expenditure for new equipment is not justified, then surely it is justified in our present time of need."

Life Member Cards Granted

After Mr. Pringle's address, life membership cards to the Belleville Enginemen's Educational Club were presented to the following men: J. P. Pringle, Gen. Supt. Southern Ontario Division: Assistant Superintended Mr. A. B. Beardshaw; Mr. W. O. Duff, Superintendent, Belleville; W. K. Rogers, Assistant Superintendent: Mr. A. B. Saunders, Master Mechanic; Mr. A. H. Jones, Locomotive Foreman and Mr. Geo. E. Clark, promoted Night Foreman.

Following are the executive members of the Belleville Enginemen's Educational Club: Chairmain, Mr. Fairbairn: Vice Chairman, Sam Cherrie; Secretary Treasurer, A. G. Cooper; Assistant Secretary, A. S. Duffield; Honorary Pres., A. B. Beardshaw; Honorary Chairmen, A. B. Saunders and A. H. Jones.

ICE CARNIVAL AT STIRLING IS SUCCESS

Girls Hockey Match One of the Features of Interesting Evening

SPLENDID COSTUMES

Judges Have Difficult Time in Selecting the Prize Winners

Stirling, Feb. 13 (Special)— Exceeding previous efforts by a good margin the annual ice carnival held under the auspices of the Stirling Agricultural Society Monday night Feb. 12th climaxed a long and strenuous period of preparation by the capable program committee under the direction of Mr. S. L. Lucas, chairman of the program committee of the Agricultural Society. The ice surface was transformed into a riot of color by the large number of costumed skaters, that gave the judges a real task in selecting winners for the various events. Tiny children dressed as bunny rabbits, cats, tramps, darkies, clowns, old-fashioned ladies, cavaliers, soldiers, nurses and many others appeared. Outstanding in the costumed skaters were Jimmy Armstrong and his dog. Capt. Philpott Discusses the Past, Present and Probable Future of The War at Women's Canadian Club

Editor and War Veteran Believes Most Important Issue of the War Will be Its Peace Terms

UNION OF NATIONS

Urging his hearers to give thoughtful consideration to the idea of a federation of democracies as the only means of securing a lasting peace, Captain Elmore Philpott, M.C. and Bar, discussed in a most interesting manner, "The Past, Present and Probable Future of This War", in an address last evening to the Women's Canadian Club.

Captain Philpott, formerly of Toronto, and now of Vancouver, is a member of the editorial staff of the McLean Publishing Company. He is a keen student of international affairs, and with a background of keen historical research. A veteran of the last Great War, he has a brilliant war record.

Introduced by the president, Mrs. C. E. Argue to the audience in Christ Church Parish Hall, Captain Philpott gave an excellent summary of the contrast between this war and that of 1914-18, gave the probable course of the next action, and showed that, above all, the most important issue of the war will be its peace terms. Unless there is a better peace than the last one there is no guarantee that twenty-one years hence, the sons of the survivors will not have to go to fight a worse menace than Hitler, as Hitler is worse than the Kaiser.

Land War Not as Important as in Great War

War on land is not as important in this war as in the last. There will be no sieges on the western front until the last stages. The great French army and the Maginot Line, the most fortified position in the history of the world, preclude attack by the German army campaign. On sea Germany's submarine warfare has not met with the success of its efforts in the past war. Here, too, the Allies are all powerful. A comparison of the figures for a three months' period shows that in 1917 in the first three months of Germany's intensive submarine warfare the Allies lost 1500 ships, and in 1939, in the same period, they have lost only 158.

On the diplomatic front, Germany has not one friend who would want to see her win the war, not even her ally, Russia. Her alliance with Russia is of necessity, for they need each other more than any two countries in the world. There have been no advances by a great German air armada as has been expected, for the simple reason that against the defence measures and anti-aircraft defences the bombers are not proving as effective as hoped. But it is in the air that the real fighting of this war will take place.

The next move in the war, in all probability, will be over oil. Germany must import three million tons of oil a year. Roumania and Persia are the probable points of attack, the former producing six million tons a year and Persia ten million tons. In Persia ten years ago Winston Churchill completed negotiations whereby the British government owns 51 per cent. of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. This oil supplies Britain's navy. If Germany and Russia turn to Persia they will, if successful, secure plenty of supplies for themselves and also strike a blow at the British navy.

Nationalism Outmoded

Discussing the peace that will come from the present war, the speaker said that it must be based on a recognition of the fact that the age of nationalism is over. The period of 1481-1914 was one in which nations as we knew them reached their zenith of usefulness as separate entities. The next step is federation. War has taken on huge proportions, and countries which formerly settled disputes with little wars, find that there are no more little wars.

Thus to ensure peace there must be world government, a balance of power through union. Some form of union will develop, and it must be of democracies. Clarence Streit's "Union Now" is a basis on which to work to accomplish the ideal of "furling the battle flags in the parliament of man" for a lasting and just peace.

The appreciation of the club [illegible] conveyed to the speaker by the [illegible]sident at the close of his very interesting address.

Simplicity Marks Funeral Service of Lord Tweedsmuir

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Ottawa Filled with Representatives of State, Church, Civil, Business and Social Life of Capital—Sir Lyman Duff Represents the King

CASKET FLAG-DRAPED

Fellow Scotsman, Rev. Alexander Ferguson, Draws on Twedsmuir's Own Words to Emphasize Central Doctrine of Christian Faith.

(By Frank Flaherty Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Ottawa, Feb. 14 (CP)—The simple funeral service of the Presbyterian Church whose doctrines he imbibed as a lad in a Scottish manse was read today over the remains of Lord Tweedsmuir.

Within the grey stone walls of old St. Andrew's Church, Rev. Alexander Ferguson, also a native-born Scotsman, read the service for the Governor-General who died in Montreal Sunday night after receiving a head injury in a fall at Rideau Hall a week ago yesterday.

Mr. Ferguson paid tribute to Tweedsmuir, the Christian, after the great and lowly in the land had delivered their stint of praise to Tweedsmuir, the citizen and public servant.

Carried on Shoulders

The flag-draped casket containing the body of the 64-year-old Governor-General left the Senate Chamber early in the afternoon on the shoulders of eight bearers to be taken under military escort to the church a few blocks away.

The hearse passed slowly through silent crowds on the spacious grounds before the parliament buildings and along the street.

Hundreds of civil servants, released from their labors for the afternoon to pay tribute to the King's representative, swelled the crowds.

Within the church Sir Lyman Duff, Chief Justice of Canada and acting Governor-General, represented King George.

Many Representatives Present

There too, were Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Conservative Leader R. J. Manion, Cabinet ministers, representatives of foreign states, members of parliament, senators, representatives of provincial governments and of learned societies and national associations.

In his short memorial address, Mr. Ferguson drew on Lord Tweedsmuir's own words to emphasize the central doctrine of the Christian faith as well as to bear testimony to the deceased man's nobility of character.

Prior to the service Lady Tweedsmuir visited the flower-banked Senate chamber for a last moment beside the bier of the Governor-General.

ANTHONY EDEN REVIEWS UNITS

Sees Representative Units in Egypt — Ambassador Reads Royal Message

Cairo, Feb. 14 (CP-Reuters) — Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden today reviewed representative units of Indian troops in Egypt. Mr. Eden was accompanied by Lieut.-General Sir Archibald Wavell, Commander of British forces in the middle east, and Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador to Egypt, who read a message from the King.

The parade took place in a desert setting outside Cairo, the Indian troops marching by in full battle equipment.

Mr. Eden will leave tomorrow to visit an Australian encampment at Kantara, near the Palestine border.

BLIZZARD HITS S. ONTARIO

(By The Canadian Press)

A blizzard struck the southern edge of Ontario today and traffic moved slowly in the face of hazardous driving conditions. Snowdrifts piled as high as four feet on icy sideroads in some districts.

In the Toronto district, a strong northeast wind blew light snow before it is a temperature of 18 degrees above zero. The forecast was for continued cold weather tomorrow with cessation of the snowfall.

Driving conditions throughout the Niagara Peninsula were "bad" although reported normal in most sections of the province.

Fort Erie district was blanketed in a violent snowstorm and traffic on main highways was snarled. Due to the storm, a proposed community service in Knox Presbyterian Church, Fort Erie, in memory of Lord Tweedsmuir, was cancelled.

Caledonia district reported its first severe blizzard of the winter and many farmers were all but isolated by drifts on concession roads. The storm was general in Haldimand county and worst in the Dunnville-Port Colborne sections of Lake Erie.

BRITAIN CLEARS OFFICIAL PATH FOR VOLUNTEERS

Making Exception for Britons Wishing to Assist in Finnish - Russian War

HUNDREDS ENLIST

Air Ministry Announces German Heinkle Struck and Driven Out to Sea

London, Feb. 14—(CP)—Britain today gave her citizens formal permission to volunteer to fight for Finland against Soviet Russia.

Ivan Maiky, the Russian ambassador, sat in the diplomatic gallery as Osbert Peake, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs, announced the decision in reply to questions in the House of Commons.

The government's action gives official sanction to the enlistment of British volunteers for the Finnish forces which has been under way on a considerable scale for some time.

Written Reply

Mr. Peake's written reply said: "His Majesty's Government have carefully considered this matter in the light of the resolution passed by the assembly of the League of Nations Dec. 14 last on the subject of the provision of assistance to Finland.

"It would in their view be inconsistent with the spirit and with the terms of that resolution that British subjects who wish to volunteer for service in Finland should be hindered by provisions of the Enlistment Act, seeing that that act contains the power to grant dispensations.

"Accordingly general licence has been granted to British subjects to enlist in the Finnish force and licence has been granted to a recruiting organization which has been established in London."

Men more than 27 years of age, or who for other reasons are unlikely to be called for Britain's own service, are free to join the Finns.

Hundreds Enlist

"Hundreds" of these have been reported unofficially as enlisting, with the first group due to leave soon.

While Britain planned to strengthen coastal air defence forces, the Air Ministry announced a German Heinkel bomber was struck and chased off into the gloaming late yesterday by three Royal Air Force Spitfire fighters at the mouth of the Thames River.

Jews Routed From Homes in Stettin Head for Poland

Berlin, Feb. 14 (AP)—Upwards of 700 Jews, routed from their homes in Stettin on 6 1-2 hours notice for mass removal were on trains today, presumably headed for Poland, although their exact destination was not disclosed.

The sudden removal order included virtually every Jew in the Baltic town. Only the sick and feeble aged were exempted.

At 7.30 p.m. Monday, elite guards and storm troopers began visiting the homes of Jews, telling them to be ready by 2 a.m.

Nazi storm troopers and elite guards took inventories of property in the homes and advised the Jews to prepare final hot meals because they probably would not get warm food for a considerable time. They were permitted to pack only a few necessities.

The Jews, ranging in age from children a few months old to persons of 70, displayed consternation as they gathered in the darkness of one of the coldest days of the winter and were given railroad tickets.

Some were told their homes in Stettin would be needed for Germans returned to the Reich from Baltic States.

Canadians of high and low degree filed past the casket of Lord Tweedsmuir where it lay in the shrouded Senate Chamber of the Parliament buildings in Ottawa. Unopened, by Lady Tweedsmuir's request, it was placed before the throne, where four officers of the Governor-General's Foot Guards mounted guard. Hon. Alastair Buchan, youngest son of Lord Tweedsmuir, shared in the solemn duty of mounting guard over the casket.

Letter Reveals Lord Tweedsmuir Regretted Prospect of Leaving

"I Have Got My Roots Pretty Deep," He Said in Letter Received by His Predecessor, Lord Bessborough, on Day of Governor-General's Death

London, Feb. 14 —(CP—Cable)— The Earl of Bessborough received a letter from Lord Tweedsmuir the day his death in Montreal was announced, expressing regret over the prospect of leaving Canada where "I have got my roots pretty deep."

Lord Bessborough, who was succeeded by Lord Tweedsmuir as Governor-General, disclosed a passage of the letter in a letter to the Times today.

Speaking of his approaching return to England, Lord Tweedsmuir had written:—

"I do not believe in any Governor-General going on too long. Also my health needs a little attention. I begin my melancholy farewell of the west at the end of March; I shall find it hard to leave in many ways, for I have got my roots down pretty deep."

In an appreciation printed in the same paper, Violet Rosa Markham recalls conversations with Lord Tweedsmuir at Quebec in which he declared:—

"Canada never can compete in numbers with the United States. Her job is quality, not quantity; not a vast population but a race of elect and splendid men and women who will be light-bearers in the world and such men and women can be trusted to use for the right ends her incredibly rich natural resources."

The writer of this appreciation is the widow of Lt.-Col. James Carruthers and was representative of the Canadian Government on the governing body of the International Labor Office at Geneva in 1923.

DAVID SPENCE DIES SUDDENLY

Conservative Nominee and Member for Toronto-Parkdale for 19 Years Suffers Heart Attack

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—Stricken by a heart attack, David Spence, 73, Conservative member of parliament for Toronto-Parkdale since 1921 and the riding's candidate for the coming Federal election, died here last night. He suffered the attack just as he completed a telephone call from his home.

Mr. Spence's death was a shock to Toronto Conservative circles. Joseph Harris, Ontario Conservative party organizer, said he had been with Mr. Spence a few hours before his death.

"We attended the funeral of a dear friend of ours and then I left him home at four o'clock and he was feeling fine," Mr. Harris said.

His death will require nomination of a new candidate for the riding he has carried since 1921.

A native of Ireland, Mr. Spence entered the Canadian political world with his election as a Toronto alderman in 1910. He was a member of the Toronto council until 1916 when he stepped out to branch into national politics. He was first chosen Conservative candidate for Parkdale in 1917 but withdrew in favor of the Liberal-Unionist candidate at the behest of party officials.

He ran in 1921 and was elected and since then had been victorious in the elections of 1925, 1926, 1930 and 1935. During the first Great War he helped form the Irish regiment but was over age himself for service.

Mr. Spence is survived by his widow and three sons, Harold, Gordon and Cameron.

DIONNES RECEIVE 25 SPRING HATS

New Straw Finery Upsets Lenten Resolution and They Shriek With Joy

North Bay, Ont., Feb. 14 (CP) — The Dionne quintuplets have broken a Lenten resolution.

Marie, Emilie, Yvonne, Annette and Cecile promised their personal physician and staunch friend, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, that they would be perfect little ladies around the Dafoe nursery at Callander during Lent. Chatter during meals and shrieks during playtime would be toned down, they said.

All went well until yesterday when Dr. Dafoe and Keith Munro, quints' business manager, walked into the nursery with 25 new Spring hats just arrived for the girls from New York. Forgotten was the resolution when the sisters spotted the new finery, which included gay colors in pillbox and part-pancake styles.

Like Scrambling in Bargain Sale

"They acted like a lot of women scramblin for specials at a bargain basement sale," Dr. Dafoe said.

The quints scooped up the hats and dashed into their bedroom to try them on before the mirrors. The shrieking, laughter and general excitement was terrific —and somehow, the lock on the nursery door became fastened.

Munro and Dr. Dafoe scrambled through a window and, entering the front door again, confronted the sisters with the accusation of locking the door.

"Oh, mais mon," said the quints in unison. They were quite agreed that the lock must have slipped in place itself.

Anyway they won't wear the hats for a few weeks yet.

FINLAND RENEWS PLEA FOR AID FROM ABROAD

Relying on Civilized Nations to Relieve Army in This Situation

RESISTANCE UNBROKEN

Russian Command Claims Capture of 23 More Forts of Famous Line

Helsingfors, Feb. 14 (AP) — Russian successes in the Summa sector on the Karelian Isthmus were conceded in today's Finnish army communique, which, however, insisted that the Russians captured only "a few foremost positions" in the eastern portion of the sector.

This advance cost the Red army thousands of dead and dozens of tanks and other equipment, the Finns declared in describing the fighting which they have likened to the battles of the first Great War.

Northeast of Lake Ladoga all Soviet thrusts were reported repulsed and farther north on the Kuhmo sector one Soviet battalion was said to have been destroyed and several Soviet positions captured.

Repulsed Before Dangerous

The Russian advance, which took some Finnish front positions, was repulsed before it reached "our positions farther back," the communique said.

"Thousands of enemy fallen and dozens of wrecked tanks were strewn before our lines."

The communique asserted that numerous Russian tanks attempting to advance over the ice of the Gulf of Finland were sunk by Finnish coast defence guns which shelled and smashed the ice around them.

It declared that 17 more Russian warplanes were downed in yesterday's operations.

"Thus far," said the high command in an oral statement last night, "the Finnish army is able to hold its own, but we really rely on civilized nations of the world to relieve us in this situation."

Finland's soldiers were pictured clinging to redoubts and breastworks in the blood-splotched snow of the Karelian Isthmus and even counter attacking at propitious moments.

Proposed Project Costs $30,000,000 Less Than in 1932

Estimated Cost Will be 243 Millions and Original Plans Were Turned Down by United States Senate

SHARE THREE WAYS

United States, Canada and the State of New York Will Proportionately Bear Cost of St. Lawrence Waterway and Power Project

Washington, Feb. 14.—(AP) — The proposed St. Lawrence Waterway and power project, under the new Treaty virtually completed by United States and Canadian negotiators, is expected to cost $30,000,000 less than the original 1932 plan.

Informed sources said today that the project, as revised to meet the objection which caused the United States Senate to reject the 1932 pact, would cost an estimated $243,000,000 to $248,000,000.

This would be shared by the United States, Canada and the New York State Power authority on a basis not yet made public. Since Canada already has constructed the Welland Ship canal, a part of the project, the United States Government would bear a major portion of the cost of the work yet to be done.

While the treaty has been agreed on in virtually every detail, it has not yet been approved finally by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, or President Roosevelt.

The revised project involves construction of a waterway 27 feet deep around the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence, construction of a main dam near Barnhardt Island with a powerhouse in each country, and a control dam upstream.

A State department announcement said the engineers had agreed the project was "sound from an engineering standpoint, cheaper in cost than the project on which the 1932 treaty was based, and affords full protection for all interests in various sections of the St. Lawrence River."

The United States would undertake development of the International Rapids section, except construction of the Canadian powerhouses, as soon as the pact was ratified by both governments.

The New York State Power authority would develop and utilize the 1,100,000 horsepower which would be the American share of the electric power derived from the project.

Funds for the United States government's share of the project would have to be appropriated by Congress, and would be expended over a period of several years.

Robt. Arthur Convicted Of Manslaughter

Cornwall, Ont., Feb. 14—(CP)—Convicted of a manslaughter charge arising from an automobile accident, Robert Arthur, 21, Cornwall, was sentenced yesterday to 2 1-2 years in Kingston penitentiary. Arthur went on trial yesterday and a Supreme Court jury deliberated four hours before returning a verdict.

Arthur was driver of a car in which Harry Towsley, a passenger, was killed when it left the highway last Oct. 1 and plunged into a clump of trees.

2 NEGRO WOMEN RESCUED FROM THREATENING MOB

Women Being Held for "Investigation" in Connection With Slaying of Elderly Farmer

TROOPERS INJURED

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 14—(AP)—Heavily-armed State police poured into Snow Hill to restore calm today after a night of wild disorder climaxed when four state troopers rescued two Negro women from the hands of a threatening mob of 1,000 men.

After hours of milling around the Worcester County jail, the angry men smashed a window last night, ripped a cell door from its hinges and made away with the woman, held for "investigation" in connection with the slaying of an elderly farmer.

The troopers, taking up the trail, caught up with the crowd at Stockton, where Harvey Pilchard was shot to death Sunday night by three Negro men who seriously wounded his wife.

Dash to Safety Across Line

There they battled apparently hopeless numbers briefly but viciously, seized the women—a mother and daughter—and dashed to safety across the Delaware State line 50 miles away. Sergeant W. H. Weber suffered painful head injuries. At least two civilians were hurt.

Jack Rabbits in Meaford District Weigh 22 Pounds

Meaford, Ont., Feb. 14 (CP) — Jack Rabbits, some weighing as much as 22 pounds and able to leap more than 12 feet, are worth $1 a head alive in Meaford district.

The animals, three times the size of cottontail rabbits, have done serious damage to Meaford district orchards and James C. Pillgrem, Meaford sportsman, has offered $1 a head for 100 of them which will be shipped to the Huntsville district and turned loose there for the amusement of hunters.

So far he has been able to purchase only 24 jack rabbits but now the word is out that a $1 booty has been offered, Pillgrem thinks the complement of 100 soon will be filled. Trappers in the district are using wood traps to catch their victims and the animals are not harmed.

No More Sea Roving For Jr. Third Mate Of City of Flint

Newton, Mass., Feb. 14—(AP)—The voice of cupid overshadows the call of the sea so far as Carl Ellis, 23-year-old junior third mate of the American freighter City of Flint, is concerned.

As soon as he marries the girl he met in Bergen, Norway, during the Flint's recent exciting journeys, he intends to seek the quiet of an office job ashore.

He met Miss Ruth Engelson, 22, during his first shore leave after the Flint had been taken from a German prize crew which had held her since the pocket battleship Deutschland captured her last October.

"Now I'm busy arranging for her entrance to this country," Ellis said last night, "and we'll be married as soon as she arrives here."

"Then I'm leaving the sea. I'm going to look for an office job—preferably with some steamship company."

All Canada Mourns Him as Friend Not as an Official Says Minister Eulogizing Lord Tweedsmuir

Ottawa, Feb. 14 (CP)—Text of the memorial address of Rev. Alexander Ferguson in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at Lord Tweedsmuir's funeral today, follows:

When, just over four years ago, Lord Tweedsmuir stepped ashore at Quebec, he was to us an official—albeit a distinguished one—come to fill the greatest office in this Dominion. Today we do not think of him as an official. The word is inept. Today all Canada mourns him as a friend!

There is not a home amongst us that is not saddened by his passing, not a heart that does not sorrow with his gracious wife and family because so rare a spirit has fled. From coast to boast, from the Arctic Circle to the Great Lakes, our Governor-General was loved by us all, known to us all, as one on whose eager interest we might count, as one who cared for Canada, and made her life his own.

Royally Filled Office

Right royally has he filled his noble office. With dignity, with patience, with humor, and with self-forgetfulness, this great heart has put all his shining gifts of mind and character unreservedly at the service of the Dominion.

How he has travelled over this vast land! In journeyings often, in watchings often, in weariness often, but always with an upspring delight, he has searched out every part of Canada to know it! By such undertakings he has bound us more closely to himself, more closely to one another and to our Mother-country across the sea.

A king among men, he has followed the kingly tradition of ser-

Conservative Leader Attends Woman Hit by Train on Which He Was Riding

Sudbury, Ont., Feb. 14 —(CP)— Dr. R. J. Manion, Federal Conservative leader, rolled up his sleeves Tuesday and went to work—as a medical man. He attended a young woman struck by the locomotive of a train which was carrying him to Ottawa to attend the funeral of Lord Tweedsmuir.

Hurled down a 50-foot embankment as she walked along the railway's right-of-way, 1 1-2 miles east of the Sudbury city limits, Miss Margaret Betts, Sudbury telephone operator was rushed to hospital after being treated by Dr. Manion. She suffered head injuries.

Dr. Manion stepped from his private car which was bringing him from Fort William and bound the girl's lacerations with towels after she had been carried from the foot of the Lake Ramsay embankment.

"It was just after they had stopped the train that we heard a girl had been struck," said Dr. Manion. "Picking up a couple of blankets and some towels from the rack, and calling the porter to do the same, I left the car and ran back up the tracks to where the girl was lying in the snow.

"We lifted her on to a thickness of three or four blankets and I made an examination of her injuries. She seemed to have suffered severe lacerations about the head and there was some injury to her legs. As we picked her up to carry her to the baggage car of the train which had been flagged down on its way to Sudbury, she regained consciousness."

The accident was noticed by engineer Thomas Marshall of North Bay who brought the train to an immediate stop.

Problem of Keeping Warm by B.E.F. In France Solved in Many Ways

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, Feb. 14—(CP-Reuters)—How does the rank and file of the B.E.F. keep warm in their country billets these winter nights—the coldest known for half a century?

Some may find it impossible, but some manage and today this correspondent discovered how they have solved the problem in one remote village of the British zone in France. The unit concerned is an infantry tank battalion.

It is, in the words of the regimental quartermaster who joined the army 28 years ago as a boy of 15, "all a matter of individual initiative."

"When we got here," he said, "we were shown empty cottages, barns, sheds and so forth, in which the men had to live — and they were not much to look at, a bit cold, you know, and broken down and drafty."

He invited the correspondent to inspect one.

Inside what was once a cowshed was a stove made out of an old oil drum, the smoke from which was carried from the shed through a long and tortuous chimney constructed from old petrol tins. The stove burned coal.

"This unit gets 11 tons a week," the quartermaster said.

Most of the inside of the shed was filled by a smaller building, put up by the men of the battalion and looking from the outside like a garden summer house, but inside like a ship's cabin. The walls, the raised floor and bunks all were made of wood. The roof was of corrugated iron. A battery supplied light to an electric bulb fixed on the ceiling.

Sacks stitched together and stuffed with straw provided warm and comfortable mattresses. All the men in the unit have three blankets.

Winter Ice Show Staged by Quinte Skating Club to Feature Canadian Doubles Champions in Fine Program

Outstanding Local Talent Will be Presented in Many Colorful Numbers to be Staged at Hume Arena Thursday Evening

TWO-HOUR PROGRAM

Brilliant skating stars from Belleville and Toronto Skating Club will feature the annual "Winter Ice Show" at the Hume arena on Thursday night when third annual Quinte Skating Club ice carnival will be sponsored by the Quinte Skating Club.

Aside from the local talent, which will add much to the grandeur and spendour of the scene there will be Canada's champion and outstanding doubles—Miss Shirley Halsted and Mr. Michael Kirby, who will appear as a pair to skate as they captured the Canadian figure skating championships and again singly to assure the patrons of the classifications of ice figure skating.

Continuing the night's program will find an early number of "school figures" with a quartette of skaters from the Quinte Skating Club featuring the Misses Judy Scott and Ardell Smith who will couple with Gordon Davies and Clare Ridley in this unique presentation. Miss Scott and Miss Smith will also appear as soloists, along with "Mike" Ridley, to add local color to the evening's performance.

Colorful Pantomimes

Colorfully costumed pantomimes will intersperse the individual and group numbers. The "Cinderella" number will be portrayed by the entire club personnel, and the pantomime will reproduce the age-old fairy tale in all its mystic appeal and glamour. The second club number will be a "Street Scene" centring round the ubiquitous organ grinder.

Culminating the two-hour evening's program will include additional doubles when Barbara Leslie and Ralph Griffin will face their initial test when appearing as the club's first juvenile doubles, while Miss Georgia Scott and Bill Yarrow will also skate as a team. The funny clowns, the "Quinte eights" and the graceful club waltzes are only a few of the features to be presented at the annual Quinte Skating Club "Winter Ice Show."

KIWANIANS HEAR TALK ON INDIA

W. B. Howell Gives History of County and Part Great Britain Has Played

"What to do with India" was the subject of an interesting talk by W. B. Howell before the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon held at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday. In the absence of president Bill Anderson, detained for business reasons, past president "Dick" Flynn occupied the chair. The community singing was led by Harold Carruthers with Leo B. Riggs at the piano. Notice was given of the combined Kiwanis and Rotary luncheon to be held on Monday evening of next week and also the church service on Sunday night preceding. W. J. Cairns, past president of Toronto Rotary Club and former District Governor will be the chief speaker at the service and all Kiwanians are invited to join with Rotary in the observance of their 35th anniversary.

Sid Howell member of the Belleville Club and son of the speaker introduced his father to the members. Mr. Howell, the speaker is the son of a Methodist minister and after graduating from Toronto University in Classics took a post graduate course at the University of Chicago and then taught at Port Arthur Collegiate for a number of years, retiring a short time ago and is now living in this city. Mr. Howell gave a very mature and considered address on the state of India and expressed the opinion, that the great country was better under British rule than under any other system and that he believed the U.S. criticism of that rule was quite unjust when the true facts were known. The speaker dealt with Mahatma Gandhi at some length and believed he was sincere in seeking Dominion status for the country and that probably trouble would come should he happen to pass on before his work was completed.

A Peculiar Country

Mr. Howell stated that India was a peculiar country with its many different languages and its complicated social system. "It is a country of great contrast having the largest mountain in the world and the widest valley," said the speaker. "Some of the people are highly intellectual but others live in complete poverty. The richest man in the world lives in India, being an Indian Prince with an income of 50 million dollars a year." The speaker stated the country was 90 percent agricultural with 200 million cows of which 60 percent are liabilities. "Cows are sacred in India so nothing can be done about it," the speaker declared. Mr. Howell traced the origin of the Indian nation stating it went back for 4,000 years but approximately 1,500 B.C. the Ayrans came, who were light skinned and they adopted Hinduism, who believe in the transmigration of souls and that it is a sin to eat meat and drink. The Hindoo cannot marry out of his own caste but can be reborn into another caste. The life of the country was traced through Alexander the Great, the Moguls and the English Traders, latter known as the East India Company, which ousted the French and Dutch. Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India shortly after this uprising.

The speaker explained the government of India by Viceroy, a representative of the English Crown, and stated that at the present time, Britain was the dominant power. The rise to power of Gandhi was traced by the speaker, who stated that Gandhi had always dealt with a very humane government in Britain and that the stumbling block to Dominion status of India at the present time was the Moslems, a minority group in the country. The appreciation of the club was expressed by Fred Deacon.

PAPERS IN OVEN CAUSE SMOKE CLOUD

Smoke rilling out of an electric oven in an apartment above the Belmont Restaurant on Front St caused city firemen a short run at about 9 o'clock last night. The trouble was caused by papers having been stored in the oven and becoming ignited when the current was accidentally turned on, stated Fire Chief Lynch this morning, but there was no fire and no smoke damage resulted.

A chimney fire at 71 Geddes St. this morning caused firemen another run but with the arrival of the reels the trouble was soon put under control.

CHINA REQUESTED TO SEEK PEACE

Japanese Claim 50,000 Chinese Killed and 200,000 Wounded in Kwangsi Province

Hong Kong, Feb. 14 (AP)— Declaring 50,000 Chinese have been killed and 200,000 wounded in Kwangsi Province fighting the Japanese high command for South China suggested today to General Chiang Kai-Shek that he seek peace under threat of further slaughter.

In messages to Chiang and other Chinese Generals, the Japanese command added that 50,000 Chinese had deserted or been captured, and asked careful consideration whether "you should add to the depletion of your fighting forces or seek peace."

The Japanese operations in the south, the messages said, "though not necessarily on a vast scale, are unprecedented in brilliance."

The Chinese leaders were urged to note that "in proportion to the earnestness and vigor of your counter attacks, the results gained by our forces increase."

Should the Chinese attempt a reported spring offensive, they were warned that "Japanese troops will employ the best tactics and add another brilliant chapter to the annals of world warfare."

Chinese dispatches today reported that 3,000 Japanese soldiers had been killed in the southern province since Monday, and that Chinese airmen had repelled a raid by 27 Japanese planes on the Hanoikunming railway. One Japanese bomber was reported shot down and others damaged.

GAS LEAKS SOUGHT BY WORKMEN

Frozen Gas Pipe Lines Thought to be Responsible for Leaks

With frost having penetrated the ground to considerable depth the Public Utilities Commission of the city is experiencing innumerable complaints of gas leakage throughout the city this year. In efforts to combat the leakage and the continued loss of gas the Public Utilities have been busied night and day since last Saturday excavating in various sectors of the city in efforts to lessen the loss.

"The frost has penertated below the level of the gas pipe lines and it is the worst situation we have experienced since we took over the gas plant three years ago," stated O. H. Scott, Manager of the Public Utilities when discussing the seriousness of the situation today.

Frozen Mains Suspected

"By the increased volume of gas going out of our plant we realize there is leakage undoubtedly caused by frozen gas mains," added Mr. Scott as he revealed that department employees have been labouring under floodlights, working feverishly 24 hours in the day in an effort to halt the situation. On Charles Street alone four excavations caused by gas leakages were necessary during the past 48 hours. The department feel they have the matter well under control, unless increased sub-zero weather continues, however.

Employees of the local gas works worked all night last night in an effort to locate a broken gas main on Victoria Avenue near Front Street. Armed with a huge gas torch shooting a lurid three-foot stream of blue and yellow flame the men were endeavouring to thaw the frozen macadam in order to facilitate digging operations but this morning still showed little impression having been made in the hard pavement.

PROBLEM OF KEEPING WARM

Many Find Billets with French Populace

Some other billets have not been improved so elaborately as this one. But the men have found another still more effective way of defeating the cold.

About half of the men of this battalion have made friends with the French inhabitants of the village and have obtained "private" billets on their initiative. Some billet at their own expense. But two or three men get the use of a warm and furnished room in one of the cottages for a sum of 20 francs—less than 60 cents—weekly.

The men gladly contribute this money from their pay and the local householders — quoting the quartermaster—"dive for it."

In the evenings parties of soldiers go to the village entertainments, which have become little military clubs. "The same gang go to the same place night after night, sit around and talk, and drink coffee and play cards," the quartermaster said. "You always know where to find them."

Many of the men in their spare time do something to repay the many kindnesses they receive from the French, by taking on jobs, farmwork and so on.

"There is only one snag," said the quartermaster. "There's no bath in the whole place. We have to motor the men to the nearest town, seven miles away, for a weekly bath. You can't have everything, can you?"

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

NEW LIGHTS NEEDED FOR FRONT STREET

In these days of easy and rapid travel by motor car the smaller cities and towns must "put their best foot forward" if they are to attract a share of the flowing tide of tourists. External appearance at a glance usually decides whether the visitor stops or moves on in search of a more attractive place.

This situation applies in particular to Belleville where the main highway passes briefly along the lower end of Front Street. A fleeting glance up the main business thoroughfare is all that the visitor has to guide him as to the merits of the city.

Certainly the present widely-spaced street lights do not contribute much to the first impression. Because Belleville should attract its share of tourists, and because the modern business street calls for bright lights, there is sound reasoning behind the campaign of the Retail Merchants' Association to have better lighting on Front Street.

It is unfair to suggest that the merchant is the only person to benefit by a well-lighted business street. During the tourist season the street lights are turned on hours after most of the stores have closed for the night. There may be some benefit to theatres and restaurants, but in the main street lighting is a matter of civic enterprise and pride.

It is to be hoped that the City Council will give favorable consideration and prompt action to the new lighting plan for Front Street.

DOMINION PAYS ITS TRIBUTE

Today this nation expressed its sorrow for one of the great men of this age whose presence in Canada for over four years was the good fortune of the Dominion. In the national capital at Ottawa and in innumerable places throughout the land services were held for the late Lord Tweedsmuir, her Governor - General, whom Canada and the rest of the Empire mourn with a genuine sense of personal loss.

His Excellency had through his fine personality attracted the admiration and love of the people because he was so genuinely a man. Great as he had been in the field of politics, statecraft, scholarship, literary creation, law, criticism and the novel and in the service of his country as a soldier an ddiplomat and a sa business man, he was, as the New York Times says, a "pro-consul" without fuss or feathers." All his greatness was wrapped up in the kindly personality of the man who mixed with Canadians in all walks of life, assumed a certain amount of pomp which is associated with the office but never allowed it to dominate him. He was always John Buchan, the sympathetic companion and noble spirit.

He has passed from this earthly scene and these tributes of farewell are the spontaneous and natural outpouring of the emotions of a people, bereft of one for whom they had deep affection.

Soon he will sleep in his native Scotland, which he loved so well and from which he came to make an undying contribution to civilization.

HIS ADDRESSES WILL LIVE

Among the treasures of memory of the late Lord Tweedsmuir for Canadians will be the addresses he delivered during his four years and more of residence in this country. These cover a vast field of interest, they are expressions of wisdom and knowledge of life clothed in music of the English words he could so well put together.

Not all public speeches of a public man are worthy of preservation. So many are apt to be topical and for the moment but through every utterance of the late Governor-General there was woven the thread of a life philosophy together with a real knowledge of practical methods, which make these works pieces of statuary of thought in words, living expressions which will mould the minds and hearts of the people of any age. They are the utterings of a man who had thought long and deeply upon life, not from the standpoint of a mere philosopher but of one who was taking a vital part in the life and era in which he lived. His utterances were no mere cold pieces of logical thought, they were the living fruition of a life spent among human beings, a life spent in action, and in helping to mould the life of the community and the nation for the better.

So these addresses possess a vital quality and will bear re-reading in any age for their wisdom and their inspiration.

These speeches will be a fit part of any library.

They are masterpieces of expression in English and will endure the passage of the years. They form one of his many bequests to his heirs, the people of Canada.

GAY-HEARTED AND DETERMINED ARE CANADIANS

Canadians at Aldershot have shown themselves light-hearted. If there were any persons who did not know this, the broadcast from that camp one night recently was proof enough that in the Canadians are lightness of heart and other fine characteristics which give the soldiers of the Dominion place among the best in history.

This broadcast was a broadcast with the soldier spirit dominant. It gave an insight into the mind and character of the Canadian when he goes to war.

British newspapers spoke of this rollicking gaiety. The broadcast was a hint to Herr Hitler that he and his group had erred when they thought that he had but to give the word for war and the British Empire would crack up. Germans that night had the opportunity to listen in on the Canadians and try and psychoanalyze the Canadian temperament. As in so many other ways the Nazis cannot discover what makes a Canadian what he is. How could the Nazis who thought the Empire was to go to pieces with the fear of the German Fuehrer, decide what makes a Canadian one of the gayest of soldiers and one of the best fighters in the world?

The joy of laughter, good-natured fun and the decisive swing of the lines "We're on Our Way" must have made the militarist brethren of Adolf Hitler knit their eyebrows and then give up the guessing contest and say they could not understand it. It was too much for German philosophy though it was just a demonstration of the Canadian spirit. Germans have recollections of what these Canadians did in another war.

Then the songs of the Australians and New Zealanders on their arrival in the Near East must have given proof again that there is something deeper than the depths of Nazi German philosophy. Well might the Nazis ask "What is there in this British democratic system of Empire which makes free nations come to the aid of Great Britain and every part of the Empire?"

From the far Dominions the men have crossed the oceans to stand side by side with other Britishers to end the Nazi threat not only to Britain and France but to the world of nations. Never was an Empire so loyally supported before as Britain in the last war and in this second German war.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Stomach and Intestinal Symptoms May Be Due to Allergy

When we think of allergy—sensitiveness to various substances—we have in mind hay fever due to pollen of plants, asthma due to various substances in the air, and perhaps hives (urticaria) due to some food eaten. The percentage of people with allergy is said to be about 5 to 10 per cent.

As a matter of fact, research workers tell us that at least 50 per cent of the population are allergic. Dr. W. Lintz, Brooklyn in Gastroenterology (stomach and intestine) states that everybody is allergic to some extent but it is only recognized when the symptoms are outstanding as in hay fever, asthma and hives.

"While 10 per cent of the population suffers from major, allergy more than half of us show mild and infrequent allergic symptoms at one time or another."

"Who does not know of some food or other substance that gives him clogged nose, sneezing spells, colds, coughs, breathlessness, headaches, rashes, itching mild hay fever, asthma, migraine (one-sided headache) and skin irritation?' '

Of all the different evidences or symptoms of allergy, Dr. Lintz states the stomach and intestinal form is most frequently found. The history is the most important point in locating the offending substance and in the treatment. Thus the patient has other symptoms besides the stomach and intestinal upset—head cold, hives, asthmatic attacks, and has also a family history of allergy.

It is overstimulation of the large nerve—vagus—controlling digestion, that causes the symptoms, just as it is thought that overstimulation of this nerve causes sea-sickness and why a tight wide abdominal belt often prevents the nausea and vomiting of sea-sickness. The overstimulation of this vagus nerve causes increased flow of juices in stomach and intestine, spasms, excessive formation of mucous, colic and other symptoms.

The thought then when there are abdominal symptoms which are found not to be due to appendicitis or gall or kidney stones, remembering that food allergy may be the cause may prevent operation or prolonged treatment.

It is in such cases that keeping a food diary is so helpful; it will show that these attacks occur following the eating of certain foods.

Yesterday afternoon between five and six o'clock an exciting game of hockey was played at the Arena between the high school juveniles and a team representing the public school. The final score was 1 to 0 in favor of the Juveniles. The following composed the teams—Juveniles—Hart, Bongard, Yeomans, Collins, McCullough, Lloyd. Subs — Sherry, Wrightmeyer, Bowyer. Public Schools—Weir, Jefferies, Wardhaugh, Watts, Dennis, Jefferies. Subs—Hibbard, Kerr, Hardy. The stars of the winning team were Bongard, Hart, Yeomans and Collins and Wardhaugh, Watts and Jeffries showed up well for the Public School team. The Juveniles had a fine goal tender in Lloyd who showed up like an old timer. Bongard scored the winning goal after he had stick-handled his way down through the whole crowd. Mr. Buchanan of the Y.M.C.A. was referee and he gave entire satisfaction.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

As the Finnish war passes through one of its most critical stages new reports of German activity in the Finnish area reach London and Paris and bring the question of aid to Finland more forcibly to the attention of the Allies.

Earlier reports that German experts were aiding in the reorganization and direction of the Russian armies attacking Finland were denied in Berlin and Moscow. Now from Norwegian sources come reports of German ships carrying war supplies to the Arctic ports of Petsamo and Murmansk. Both are under control of Russia, the Russian armies having seized Petsamo from Finland.

This does not mean direct German intervention in the Finnish war but it may well be an example of the military collaboration between Germany and Russia contemplated when the two aggressor states made their first agreement.

Murmansk served as a port of refuge for German ships hunted from the high seas by the British navy. Will it now serve as a fueling and supply base for German submarines which prey on British shipping? A base in the Arctic probably would widen the range of German submarine action.

Should Germany take possession of the ports and shores of Northern Russia and Finland either openly or secretly those areas would definitely become belligerent territory for Great Britain and France, and Allied aid to Finland would be in all respects action against Germany as well as against Russia.

Post Office Keeps Ocean Mail Going Smoothly

The sinking of the Canadian Pacific freighter S.S. "Beaverburn" by enemy action off the south coast of Eire brings closer to Canadians the perils of the war at sea, and at the same time it draws attention to the problems confronting Honourable C. G. Power, Postmaster General, in his efforts to continue the safe flow of mail from this country across the Atlantic.

Few people realize the intricacies of Trans-Oceanic mail service even in normal times, and fewer still appreciate the enormous difficulties confronting the Post Office Department in times of war. In spite of the new problems to be faced, regular mail despatches across the Atlantic continue with scarcely a hitch and with practically no loss or delay. No effort will be spared to continue the excellent trans-Atlantic mail service now operating under existing adverse conditions.

Mr. Power states that loss in the transportation of Canada's mails to the United Kingdom have been kept at a minimum, and that the public may rest assured that the Canadian Post Office Department is doing all in its power to safeguard the ocean mails.

Canadian Legion War Services

Today the Canadian Legion War Services will launch a drive across Canada for $500,000 which will be employed in providing educational, personal, entertainment, recreation and other services for the men in the fighting forces. The Legion is convinced that this is very necessary work, in that the object is to impress upon the soldier the need of preparing himself as far as possible for his return to civilian life after the war is ended. Many of the youths have recently left school and others have given up promising jobs and it is eminently proper that they should not neglect opportunities to improve themselves in the ranks. The Canadian Legion War Services intends to make available educational facilities and vocational training and direct the activities of the men in their leisure hours. There will be advice, guidance and actual personal help while they are away from home.

The Legion, with its 1,100 branches in cities, towns and villages, is eminently suited for this task. As the war develops, there will be questions of pensions, medical treatment and re-establishment to be handled, and the Legion's agencies are prepared to meet all such problems for the individual. The approval of the Government has been secured and other institutions are sympathetic The Legion's War Services do not overlap those of the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Y.M.C.A., and other helpful organizations. The definite purpose is to help the soldiers without infringing upon the work of others. In due course the Dominion Government will devise schemes for the re-establishment of the fighting men, but in the meanwhile there is plenty that a voluntary organization can do to keep in the soldier's mind the idea that eventually he will have to resume his civil occupation. The Canadian Legion of War Services, Inc., is organized for this very necessary work, has had plenty of experience, and may be depended upon to spend i's time, energy and funds to the best advantage of the fighting forces. In the circumstances, the campaign for $500,000 should meet with a hearty response throughout Canada.—Ottawa Journal.

INDIAN DISGUISE FAILS TO HELP

George Precious, 26, Arrested for Attempted Robbery of Toronto Bank

Toronto, Feb. 14—(CP)—An Indian disguise failed to help George Precious, 26, of Toronto, in an attempted armed bank holdup. Today he is confined to hospital suffering from a flesh wound in the right arm and several bumps on the head.

Precious, wearing a black wig to conceal his red hair, walked into the Yonge and Gould streets branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce shortly after closing time Tuesday. "It's a stick-up," he told Manager William Gerald. "Don't say a word or I'll let you have it."

Gerald grabbed his wrist and other bank employees and customers came to his aid. Precious was shot in the wrist and knocked unconscious with the butt of a gun. He is charged with attempted robbery while armed.

Police investigation showed the gun used by the bandit had been stolen from a Scarboro bank in a holdup last September. A charge also was laid in connection with that holdup, based on the accused man's possession of the stolen gun.

Police suspect Precious of several "lone wolf" bank holdups in York County and western Ontario during the past year. In several of these robberies the bandit was described as looking like an Indian.

FOR months he has undergone intensive training for war. Soon, we hope, the war may be over. Shall he be turned loose with no training whatever in the pursuits of peace?

The minds of our boys who have enlisted must be kept focussed on the life they left behind. Their training as good Canadian citizens must continue. Education to fit these men for the pursuits of peace must be made available to them in Canada, in England and on active service.

Educational and Vocational Training for Men in Our Service Forces

The Canadian Association for Adult Education has offered its complete facilities; and its long experience in work of this kind will be invaluable. The departments of education, universities and vocational bodies throughout Canada are lending their support. The co-operation of British and French educationists is assured.

Enlisted men will be able to continue their education, to take courses in agriculture, economics, technical subjects, various trades, bookkeeping, stenography, secretarial work, etc. Courses leading to matriculation and college degrees will also be available.

We Will Help Him in His Personal Affairs

The Canadian on service far from home frequently has troubles of a personal or business nature on which he needs trustworthy advice. Representatives of the Canadian Legion will be present wherever Canadian troops are quartered. Through 1100 Legion branches located in all parts of Canada they will be able to have such matters investigated and corrected.

Entertainment and Recreational Services

The Legion will assist in providing entertainment and recreation, and in organizing sports activities wherever the need arises. Leave hostels and travel bureaus will be provided in England. Cooking Forum at Capitol Theatre Attended by Many Homemakers

Conducted by Miss Crawford and Miss Muir, H.E.P.C. Home Economists

Sponsored by the Belleville Public Utilities and held under the auspices of the Parish Guild of Christ Church, the Cooking Forum being conducted by Misses Ruth Crawford B.A. and Edithemma Muir B.A., home economists of the Hydro Home Service Department, was attended by an eager crowd of homemakers who filled Capitol Theatre to capacity yesterday afternoon. Not only were cooking methods described but the talented young ladies in charge discussed the use and care of electrical appliances which have come to be regarded as vital pieces of equipment in the modern kitchen, correct lighting and placing of furniture.

Mr. E. Smith of the Belleville Utilities, opened the Forum, and introduced Miss Crawford and Miss Muir. He welcomed the large gathering and asked the ladies to feel perfectly free to discuss homemaking problems with the young ladies in charge.

The stage was interestingly decorated with Spring flowers and ferns while the arrangement of the stage kitchen showed the almost countless electrical servants that today serve the homemaker of the most moderate means. The demonstration was begun by Miss Crawford whose charming manner soon won the friendship of her audience who entered whole-heartedly into the "Forum" spirit and talked over their cooking problems with her from their places in the theatre. The whole afternoon developed into a happy and interesting social hour.

The recipes, for an oven dinner, were all planned with economy, convenience and the time element carefully considered. They were practical, everyday recipes and gave many helpful hints to those who prepare three meals a day, for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

Cooking vegetables with less water, the healthful way, is possible with electrical cooking and Miss Crawford showed how beets can be cooked without any water, with skins and tops removed. The peeled, raw beets are allowed to stand well salted for two or three hours. Sufficient water is thus drawn by the salt from the vegetables, with the addition of three tablespoons of butter, to cook them, thus retaining all their mineral and vitamin value. In the preparation of the oven dinner the meat is first considered. It can be placed ,uncovered, in a shallow pan in a cold oven and cooked at a temperature in accordance with the kind of meat selected. Miss Crawford gave an interesting chart for the cooking of meats. If the meat has been thoroughly chilled by being left in a refrigerator allow longer baking time.

Apple crisp dessert was prepared to complete the dinner and Miss Crawford discussed the factors in successfully making frozen desserts. As she prepared the foods she also discussed various aspects of the modern kitchen and urged her hearer to consider the proper lighting of this and other rooms in the house, to guard that priceless possession, their eyelight.

Miss Edithemma Muir in her part of the Forum, was an interesting and delightful speaker. She prepared an appetizing vegetable salad. She brought to the attention of the ladies the advantages of their electric refrigerator and showed how to keep it in its sparkling white condition. Such well known kitchen helps as the toaster, mixer and coffee or tea maker were all used during the afternoon while the electric washing machine was demonstrated.

The speakers and Mr. Smith explained to the ladies, the Hydro Homemakers' Club which is being organized in the city and through which advice will be sent to each member on the proper operation and care of electric appliances, and well-balanced meal planning. Membership blanks were distributed and it explained that there was no charge for membership.

With the assistance of Mr. Lake of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, the splendid array of prizes for attendance at the cooking school were presented. The winners were as follows:

Mrs. Ross Bush Addresses Ladies' Conservative Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Ladies' National Conservative Association was held at the Club rooms, Front Street, Monday evening, February 12, with a large attendance.

Mr. R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., was called upon to introduce the guest speaker of the evening, Mrs. Ross Bush of Consecon, who gave a very timely address on woman's place in the political world and stressed our leader's proposed platform for a National Government to best serve the country's need at the present time.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Why Not Take Another Bus?

Dear Miss Fairfax

If anyone had told me I would be capable of writing this letter a year ago I would have thought he was insane. But here goes:

I'm a repectable married man of 43, excellent wife, thrifty, own our own home, four children, everything to make life worth while. Now, old fool that I am, I find myself head over heels in love with a school-girl 17 years of age. We take the same bus every morning. I gave up my seat a couple of times and then we became acquainted.

I suggested taking her to the movies, having tea afterwards, and now she seems to feel toward me the same way I feel toward her. With shame I confess I'd be willing to throw everything overboard, marriage, home, children, prospects, for a year of perfect bliss with her. Her parents know nothing of this, and would probably consider me a scoundrel if they did.

My wife knows that something has happened, but I've never confided in her. Is there any way out of this dilemma? I know it's insanity, and yet I can't bear the thought of losing these moments of happiness with this schoolgirl.

Husband and Father.

Let's be realistic. Have you ever thought of taking it on the chin and to begin it by taking a bus which leaves earlier or later than the one taken by this young schoolgirl? I'm not going to give you a Victorian lecture. We all know that love is a species of madness, and ecstatic madness, if you will. But there is such a thing as good old fashioned common sense. And for a man of 43 to chuck aside everything for an affair with a girl of 17 would be madness plus.

Besides, think of the girl. You wouldn't be able to make her happy after the first few months. She'd compare you with youngsters of her own age. She'd want to go out and dance evenings, and you'd be thinking of warm slippers by the fireplace. That kind of marriage just doesn't go. Perhaps one in a million might go, but not the average run-of-the-mill citizen can contrive a happy relationship, when one of the parties is 17 and the other 43.

Don't be selfish, think of the girl and spare a thought to your wife while you're thinking. This may not sound sympathetic, but indeed I am.

Shall He Put An Offering in the Plate For Her?

Dear Miss Fairfax,

Sometimes I take my girl to church, and I'm often puzzled to know whether it's proper for me to put an offering in the plate for her or not. I notice that she ups with her own quarter.

Puzzled

Girls now put their own offering in the plate, as the majority of them pull down their own pay envelopes. In your great, great granddad's day, when it was customary to take a rifle to church to scare off skulking Indians, then great granddad put a copper in for the lady for whom he cherished strictly honorable intentions. But those days have "gone with the wind".

Attention! Parent! You Were Young Once

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I am 16 years of age, and like all girls my age I want to go to parties and have a good time, but my dad is one of those hard-boiled men who won't allow it. I don't drink or smoke, but he seem to find fault with everyone I know and fusses at my sister and me continually.

I dread coming home from school. He knows I'm afraid of him, and I haven't the nerve to tell him I don't like to be around him on account of his fussing. If something doesn't turn up soon I'm going to run away and not ever come home again.

He used to be the best dad anyone could ask for. I have talked it over with mamma, but she agrees with him, and won't listen to me, and threatened to tell dad if I didn't stop saying things about him.

I am so unhappy and can't go on much longer. I would rather be dead than go through 1940 the way I did 1939. So please help me and tell me what to do. I need your advice badly.

L. H.

When I read a letter like the foregoing, I hope devoutly that it may meet the eye of dad who inspired it, and mother who backs him up. The trouble with such well-meaning parents is that they're trying to improve on the mold in which the Creator cast their children. Were they never 16? Do they never want to go out and have a good time? Why impose conditions on children that insure secrecy, or, as this girl says, the temptation to run away from home and never come back?

The sensible thing for parents to do, especially when children are bubbling over with the joy of living is to co-operate. Know the friends your boys and girls associate with; "be it ever so humble", let them bring the young people home to entertain them. Yes, I know it's a nuisance to get out extra cups and saucers and let them make cocoa, coffee and sandwiches. But you parents had better do that than let these youngsters take the bit in their teeth and find yourself frantically invoking the Bureau of Missing Persons to inquire if they know anything about "Mary" age 16, or "John" age 17, who has left home. Don't imagine because you're parents that all the forces of creation stopped with you.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Let Your Beau Take Care of His Own Hat and Coat

When your beau comes to call and you receive him at the door, you should have nothing to do with his hat and coat except to tell him where to put them. If there is a guest closet in your entrance-hall, you say, "Won't you please put your things in here?" If there isn't indicate a convenient place for either that courtesy or hospitality them.

Don't have the mistaken idea demands that you help a man take off his coat or help him on with it when he is leaving. A man who has even a vague idea of what's what will resent this and will be definitely uncomfortable at your misguided attentions. A man doesn't want to have a girl have anything to do with taking care of his hat and coat. The only exception to this rule is when a man is very old or ill. Then your courtesy is appropriate to the need.

This rule applies too to public place. Let his hat and coat be a "man's world". This means, young lady, that you mustn't coyly hold your beau's hat on your lap when you are at the movies or a concert or in any other place.

Which Initials?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Please tell me which of the three initials are correct to use on linens, bags and so forth, if one's name is Mary Elizabeth Leroy Haines, the "Leroy" being the maiden name?

M.

Customarily, when a girl marries she drops her middle name, and for her informal name uses her first name, her maiden name and her married surname. So Mary Elizabeth Leroy would, if she followed the general custom, drop the Elizabeth, and adopt, for her informal name, Mary Leroy Haines. That is, most girls consider their middle name of less importance than their first name and maiden name.

However, this is by no means a definite rule since, in the question of names, the personal choice takes precedence over all rules . . . as it definitely should. Therefore, Mary Elizabeth Leroy may, if she has a special fondness for all of her names keep them all in her informal married name, although this obviously usually makes a pretty cumbersome array.

Or Mary may have more fondness for her middle name than she has for her maiden name, and so may keep the Elizabeth and drop the Leroy. This isn't usual and isn't very practical, since often the maiden surname serves for many purposes of identification.

Therefore, unless this Mary of ours wishes to step out of the usual custom, she uses the initials "M. L. H." on her linens and on her personal accessories.

Courtesy Tip

If a person asks you to pass anything —a roll, a piece of celery, or anything else—saying, "Don't pass the dish; just hand me one", even so, pass the serving-dish, so that the person handles his own food.

An exception to this rule is when we ask for some fruit from a heavily-laden centrepiece of fruit. Usually this dish is too heavy to pass.

How You Look—You Feel!

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU LEAP out of bed in the morning, look in the mirror to see if you feel well? Some girls are like that. It's sure that if you resemble a grand old ruin, you won't feel very good. Pouches under the eyes, a drawn look, temporary furrow because you have slept with your hand under your cheek. No girl likes one bit.

VIRGINIA BRUCE. . .regular habits keep her feeling, looking well.

Maybe the merry evening was too exciting. Or the good things you had for dinner the night before made your digestive organs mad at you. Perhaps you cut down the necessary hours of sleep and nature did not have a chance to do her repair work. The temple of beauty is built on health, vitality and animation. Remember that, even when you are out stalking face paint and a new hairdo.

The human machine will endure just so much activity and no more. Fatigue fills the system with nasty little poisonous bugs that will go away and die when you have had sufficient rest. Let the woman who works hard all day and dances most of the night put that in her cigarette holder and smoke it.

Fresh air, sunshine, nourishing groceries, the daily bath, a cheerful outlook are beauty builders. Without them you're pretty likely to collect pulchritude ills that prove stubborn.

Eye shadows are fun to play with. Nice little messy things put on with the precise, right touch give the countenance an air of mystery and enchantment. She who uses them has the courage of her cosmetic convictions.

She knows that the complexion can't carry more than a light load of pigment so, if she tints her eyelids, she lets her cheeks get along as best they can without the help of the rouge pad. She also tones down the lip smear. Then the eyes are the dominating feature, which they rightly should be.

MEN'S CLUB HEARS ADDRESS ON METHODS COMBATING PARASITES

Members of the Christ Church Men's Club heard a very interesting discourse on the methods of combating parasites given by A. B. Baird, of the Dominion Entomological Bureau, in the Parish Hall last evening. Mr. Baird told in a graphic word-picture the efforts of the Entomological Department in its battle against the common parasites, which feed on the growth of the land.

Entertainment was provided by George Cornish, who gave several humorous readings and Bert Hanks, who not only led community singing, but added to the evening's mirth with two comic songs. Ray Lennox most capably acted as pianist. President Horace Wright occupied the chair and introduced the guest speaker. A social half hour and refreshments concluded the night's program.

2 NEGRO WOMEN RESCUED FROM

The officers said the women probably would be brought to Baltimore for safe-keeping.

By the margin of some 30 minutes, Sheriff J. William Hall and his deputies spirited away a Negro man, who had been held as a suspect in the jail battered open by the mob.

He was taken to Salisbury, Md., and held there with a fourth Negro while the crowd demanded that Hall give up his prisoners. Refusing to accept the sheriff's word that the man was not there, four civilians were designated to look over the jail.

Taunted Women

Cries of "You've been bought," greeted assurances of the quartet that the men had been taken away. Hall invited them all in, two-by-two, and they marched through the jail, taunting the freightened Negro women. Momentarily the mob dispersed, only to gather in larger numbers about an hour later. This time they brought hacksaws and crowbars to effect an entrance. The jailer and his wife watched helplessly a dozen men bearing a rope crawl through a window and terrorize the women, saying: "How would you like to have this around your neck?"

The screaming women, booked under the names of Martha Blake, 31 and Lillian Virginia Blake, 14, were dragged out and loaded into cars for the ride to Stockton. Police said the crowd did not harm them.

GIRL CAGERS BEATEN BY COBOURG FIVE

The local girls' basketball team journeyed to Cobourg last evening to play an exhibition game with the Cobourg cagers coming home on the short end of an 18-10 score. The Belleville contingent put up a real good game however against a speedier quintette of intermediate "A" players. The Belleville girls lined up as follows: Forwards, M. Hitchon, M. Miller and "Peg" Rowbotham; guards, M. MacLean and I. Corby; subs, H. McLaughlin, R. McClelland, H. Richardson, G. McLachlin, J. Muir, H. Garrow, J. Sherry, M. Cross and O. Fraelick.

BRITAIN CLEARS OFFICIAL PATH

Ship casualties yesterday included a large unidentified steamer, wrecked and floating bottom up off the Norfolk coast last night from unexplained causes. A rescue boat picked up some survivors from two lifeboats.

A labor motion critizing the government's recent agreement with the four main British railroads and calling for outright government control of all transportation systems for the duration of the war was rejected by the House of Commons by a vote of 186 to 119.

Railways Guaranteed Profit

Under the terms of the agreement the government guarantees the four railways a profit of £40,000,000 (about $160,000,000) annually and provided for pooling of receipts and expenditures of the railways. The guaranteed profit under the agreement is based on the railways' profits during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937 and is approximately £6,000,000 more than in 1938.

Labor members attacked the agreement because 1938 was not included, and charged that stock market speculation had increased the value of railroad securities by more than £100,000,000 in recent weeks.

Transport Minister Euan Wallace and H. F. C. Crookshank, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, spoke for the government during the debate. They insisted that outright government control, which was effective during the First Great War, would not be practical at present and that the government's scheme would assure the best and most economical method of operation.

FINLAND RENEWS PLEA FOR AID

Mannerheim Line Bent

Military authorities acknowledged that the Mannerheim line had been bent—but not broken—by the Reds' efforts to break through in the Summa sector to strike Viborg (Viipuri), Finland's second largest city, just behind the line.

Major dents in the line, these quarters insisted, had been removed by recapture of steel and concrete fortifications, leaving only a few outlying machine-gun nests in Russian hands.

(The Russian command early today claimed capture yesterday of 23 more forts of the Mannerheim line, making a total of 84 such positions seized within a week.)

Russian air raiders carried the war into southern Finland again yesterday, attacking Borga (Porvoo), Sortavala, Viborg, Laati and Heinola. Up to midnight, however, only two air raid fatalities were reported.

Property Damage Heavy

As in previous raids, property damage outdistances human casualties. For example, the Associated Press correspondent who visited Borga, near Helsingfors, found the centre of the city a scene of devastation, with 28 buildings burning last night. Borga's normal, pre-war population was 7000.

It appears only Finland's air raid shelters and the removal of civilians from cities could account for the almost negligible casualty reports.

The Finnish command likened the defence of the Mannerheim line to the battles of Verdun and the Somme in the first Great War and termed the resistance in the Summa sector "The Summa Miracle."

It estimated Red losses at Summa at 30,000 to 50,000 men — presumably including wounded.

Finland's Need Pressing

The high command's informal statement said Finland's need was pressing for "help in all forms, men, material and especially airplanes."

A monster tank, 70 tons, according to the Finnish high command, was used against the Finnish line at Summa. The Finns said it was disabled and forced to return to the Russian line.

Finnish reticence as to losses among the defenders persists. An officer questioned on this point, said, "we can tell you that the Finnish losses are exceedingly small, and you will find it hard to believe.

"You've seen and acknowledged the ease with which the phantom skiers disappear against the snow with their capes as camouflage. Our losses are small. Our men know how to conceal themselves."

Dr. F. C. Wilson May Accept P. E. - Lennox Liberal Nomination

A well-informed source today reported that Dr. F. C. Wilson, of Napanee, has agreed to accept the Liberal nomination for the riding of Prince Edward-Lennox, if it is tendered him at the adjourned convention scheduled for Thursday.

Failure last week to nominate a candidate to contest the seat held during last Parliament by George Tustin, Conservative, forced an adjournment.

Dr. Wilson is a son of the late Rev. J. P. Wilson, formerly a minister in Prince Edward County.

Car Found Abandoned

Duncan Lewis, Dunbar St., reported the theft of his motor car to city police last night. Subsequent investigations by Constables Evans and Taylor resulted in the vehicle being found abandoned and wrecked on Station St., where the motor car had collided with a tree.

Jack Beer, service station attendant at Bourk's gasoline station later informed police he had seen two men leave the vehicle and run westerly across Cannifton Road towards Reid St. Later Ray Woods and Gerald Connors, both of this city, were apprehended and taken to the police station for investigation. The pair were detained today by the authorities on nominal charges of vagrancy.

Fender damage resulted, when an automobile driven by W. G. Mercer, of the R.C.A.F., backed into a parked truck while waiting for the traffic light to change at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets shortly after 5.30 p.m. yesterday. The matter of damages was amicably settled between the parties, E. G. Green, 292 Charles St., being in charge of the truck, which had driven behind Mr. Mercer's car awaiting the change of traffic lights.

Nine transients were given shelter at the police station last night.

X-RAYS FAIL TO REVEAL PIN

Rushed to the Belleville General Hospital after it was thought he had swallowed a pin, teen-aged Jerry Stojan, of Frankford, caused his parents considerable anxiety yesterday. At the hospital, however, when X-rayed no trace of the pin could be found. Attending physicians were of the opinion the lad coughed the pin up during his excitement, but without the knowledge of others.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 14 —(AP)— A tendency of Steels, Motors and "Blue Chips" to give ground overshadowed quiet strength of specialties in today's stock market.

Inclined to softness the greater part of the day were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, General Electric, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Du Pont and Allied Chemicle. Rails, Coppers, Oils, Rubbers, Aircrafts and Utilities were narrow.

Loft touched another new 1939-40 high and support was accorded Dow Chemical, Cluett Peabody, Studebaker, Martin-Parry, Anaconda, Sperry, Celotex and Celanese.

In the Canadian group Dome Mines and Hiram Walker improved fractions while Lake Shore Mines eased as much. Canadian Pacific, Distillers Seagram and Canada 4s in the Bond Market, were stationary.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP) — Trading was quiet on Toronto exchange today. Volume was only 110,000 shares. Industrials led the decline. Other groups were steady.

Steep Rock was the only active issue of the base metal list and the price firmed to a new high at 2.65. In the golds Preston developed some activity on recovery to 2.10, up 3 cents. The market declined for Wright Hargreaves and MacLeod Cockshutt.

Steel and utility issues led the decline in the industrial section. Western oils were steady but for losses of 2 to 5 cents for Foothills and Home Oil.

Top-Grade Eggs Show Improvement

Toronto, Feb. 14 — Lighter offerings and slightly better inquiry combined to strengthen prices on top quality graded eggs during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Butter held unchanged on a nominal market.

Although receipts decreased on the egg market, supplies appeared to be sufficient to satisfy the improved demand. The tendency was for higher prices, but it was only the two top grades in the graded section that showed any price appreciation.

Brokers reported that buyers showed no interest in offerings on the butter market, and prices remained nominal at previous levels Holders asked in the range of 27¼ to 27½c per pound.

Canadian Forces Overseas in Mourning For Seven Days

(By Edwin Johnson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Feb. 14 — (CP-Cable) —In tribute to the membory of the late Commander-in-Chief, Lord Tweedsmuir, the Canadian Overseas Forces have gone into service mourning for seven days.

During the period all officers of the Canadian Active Service Force in training here are wearing black crepe bands of mourning on the left arm of their jackets and greatcoats while the flag at divisional headquarters flutters at half staff in the wintry breeze.

No service will be held within the divisional area today but plans are under consideration to hold a memorial service either in London or Aldershot when the remains of Scotland's distinguished son are brought back home.

Special functions, concerts and sports events previously arranged have been cancelled for the duration of the mourning. Normal training exercises, however, will be carried out according to schedule.

Fixed Cheese Price Expected S. L. Joss Tells Producers

Points Out Canadian Cheese Enjoyed Price Premium During Last Year

INDUSTRY REVIEWED

Ottawa, Feb. 14—(CP). — Canadian cheese producers expect that the British Government will institute government control of cheese in the spring with a fixed price for that product, S. L. Joss, of Belleville, Ont., told the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association today in his report to the annual convention as Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Joss, reviewing the United Kingdom market in the war months, pointed out that Canadian cheese enjoyed a price premium of some seven cents a pound compared with New Zealand and Australian cheese. British buyers were willing to pay the higher price for Canadian cheese because a shortage threatened and they considered it would be better to have a stock of cheese on hand even if they had to pay more for it.

However, if government control goes into effect in the spring, a fixed price may be expected and it likely will be more in line with what Canada's competitors have been receiving.

Reviewed Industry

For the benefit of the 250 delegates representing some 24,000 Ontario farmers selling their milk to the cheese factories, Mr. Joss reviewed the industry in recent years and suggested that whole milk and cheese could increase greatly the consumption of butter-fat.

Domestic consumption of cheese, he said, is "ridiculously low compared with many countries, and it seems there is a field here for increased consumption." Of recent years, statistics would show that it would be more profitable to put the milk surplus into cheese rather than produce butter.

Mr. Joss recommended formation of a board or committee representing the industry to study possibilities of increasing Canada's butter-fat production.

"Something of this kind seems more imperative today than ever before, as production, because of our war requirements, is likely to be increased, which may have the effect of aggravating our present difficulties when peace returns," he said.

QUEBEC BEAVERS, AND SHAWINIGAN OUT OF PLAYOFFS

Both Teams Defeated by Verdun and Valleyfield Respectively

RAIDERS WIN

Sherbrooke Squad Just About Clinched First Place With Victory

Montreal, Feb. 14 (CP)—The Provincial Senior Hockey League race, as far as playoffs are concerned, is over today for Quebec Beavers and Shawinigan Falls Cataracts.

These teams, which have been in or close to the cellar all season, dropped from contention last night. Quebec's 7-2 defeat by Verdun Bulldogs and Shawinigan's 2-0 loss to Valleyfield Braves removed the last mathematical chances either team had of reaching the playoffs.

While there may be some changes in position between now and the end of the season the playoff teams, with the exception of Valleyfield and Verdun, likely will remain where they are now. Sherbrooke Red Raiders are leading the circuit followed in order by Boston Olympics, Lachine Rapides, St. Hyacinthe Gaulois and Valleyfield and Verdun.

These last two teams are tied but the Bulldogs have two games in hand and are favored to finish fifth.

Raiders just about clinched first place last night with a 4-2 victory over St. Hyacinthe.

Great Goal-Tending

Great goal-tending by Johnny Lascelles spelled the end for Shawinigan. At that Lascalles' work was overshadowed by young Maurice Courteau's performance in the Shawinigan nets. Although Johnny Huguet and Henri Matte beat him with goals, Courteau could have allowed half a dozen other shots to go by and still been a star. The Braves, carrying most of the play, showered him with shots from start to finish.

Different players accounted for all the Verdun goals but Conrad Bourcier was the leading point collector with a goal and three assists. Verdun took the lead in the first period and increased it in every session.

Sherbrooke's ace line of Hank Harris, Howie Peterson and Jack Forsey picked up five scoring points as they led the attack against the Gaulois. Harris and Forsey had a goal and assist apiece and Peterson an assist.

VOLLEYBALL

The Bata volleyball quintette of Frankford remained undefeated in the Y.M.C.A. volleyball league following last night's trio of games played at the "Y" when the Bata team defeated the O.S.D. 15-3 and 15-0.

In the second game of the night the St. Michael's "Irish" won from Albert College 15-7 and 15-2, but the final game of the evening proved the most thrilling as the issue was forced to three games before the "Y" Seniors triumphed over the City Firemen by the score of 15-6; 13-15 and 15-9.

The line-ups:

Firemen: McDonald, O'Brien, Ko-Kesh, Post, Meldrum and Thompson.

Y.M.C.A.: Clare, Brown, Cole, Atkins, Townsend and Hitcheon.

O.S.D.: Bartu, Kiniski, Robertson, May, Graziano, Hazlitt, George, Quinnell, Cork and Brown.

Albert College: Waever, Burlet, Jones, Bushman, Blaker and McDonald.

BASEBALL MOGULS AND JUDGE LANDIS "COMPROMISE"

Baseball Commissioner Demonstrates Perfect Sense of Timing in Conference

TWO RULES OUT

Belleair, Fla., Feb. 14.— (AP)—Again demonstrating a perfect sense of timing, Baseball Commissioner Kensaw Mountain Landis has reached a "compromise" with the embattled big league club owners and told them, in effect to jump into their plans for another happy, prosperous season.

Only yesterday, with the start of the training camps only a matter of days away, club owners who maintain "farm" systems were wandering around in a quandry. Today they were at least mollified and looking to the future with some hope.

It all came about yesterday when the group of officials who were here for the meeting of the Rules Committee were invited to confer with the Commissioner. The owners pleaded that the Judge tell them where they stood in the delicate matter of controlling minor league teams.

Landis, though still determined that all ball players should be protected from a career of bondage, yielded a trifle from his furious "seven points" of January 15.

Two Points Suspended

He agreed to suspend temporarily two of his "seven points" to which the magnates object most strenuously, having to do with a club losing a minor leaguer completely after three year and requiring that the major league clubs make all working agreements directly. Then the club officials agreed to submit an amendment of one of their most cherished rules to a vote of their members.

The amendment, in the words of Leslie O'Connor, Commission Secretary, "merely prevents extension of the period of three years in which minor league clubs or major league club could option a player." Under the old condition, he said, clubs got around this merely by controlling the club that held the player. He said that adoption of the amendment would remove "about 99 per cent of the commissioner's objections to present conditions".

CLAYTON JACKSON LEADING SCORER OF THE REDMEN

"Speedy" St. Louis and Will Jackson Finish One Point Behind the Leader

TEAM SCORE 25

The Redmen Served Total of 42 Minutes in Penalty Box During Season

For the second consecutive year Clayton Jackson, veteran centre player with the Belleville intermediate O.H.A. hockey team, led the Redmen in the official scoring averages, leading player-manager "Speedy" St. Louis and brother Will Jackson by a scant one point. Clayt Jackson scored four goals and had four assists in five O.H.A. group games played, while St. Louis rapped home four goals and counted three assists, with Will Jackson duplicating St. Louis' scoring average for the 1940 season.

23 Players Used

The Redmen used 23 different players throughout the season, including two goalkeepers, the majority of whom played less than three games, however. The Redmen scored 25 goals during their seven games with 18 assists being rendered in all but seven of the counters. Harry McCreary, the Redmen's hard-hitting defenceman, was the club's badman, serving ten minutes as the result of five minor penalties imposed. Windsor followed with four minor rests.

Defensively the Redmen had 67 goals scored against them in their seven group games. In four games Ab Hinton fished no less than 38 pucks from behind him, while in the remaining three group games Ken Watt saw the red light flash behind him exactly 29 times.

The individual scoring records of the Belleville Redmen for the year 1940 are:

Bridges Thinks Outfield Problem Of Tigers Solved

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 14.—(AP) — The shift of Hank Greenberg from first base to the outfield and the purchase of Bruce Campbell has "solved" the outfield problem of the Detroit Tigers in the opinion of Pitcher Tommy Bridges.

He expects those two moves and other changes to enable Detroit to improve its position in the American League this season but—"I don't see how anybody is going to stop the Yankees from winning the flag again this year."

"There's no question in my mind whatever", said Bridges, "that Hank will make good in the outfield. It will be great to have both Rudy York and him in the lineup every day with their big bats."

Bridges envisioned an infield composed of York on first, Charley Gehringer on second, Dick Bartell, obtained from the Chicago Cubs, at short and Pinkey Higgins at third, and an outfield made up of Greenberg, Barney McCosky and Campbell or Pete Fox.

Ronnie Hudson of Indianapolis Capitols Is Leading Scorer

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 14. (AP)—Ronny Hudson of Indianapolis Capitols has gone right to the top of the International-American hockey league scoring pile on the wings of his one-month rampage, displacing Hemmerling of New Haven Eagles.

In 19th place right after the new year opened, Hudson's two assists last week broke his first-place tie with Hemmerling and raised him to forty-three points. Hemmerling second with 42.

Two pairs of teammates, Fred Thurrier and Norm Schultz of the Springfield Indians and Jack Toupin and Norm Locking of the Syracuse Stars, were all tied for third place at 39 points each.

FIGHTING IRISH FROM IVANHOE DEFEAT FOXBORO

Win Second Game in Playoffs 6-4 and Round by a 7-6 Count

MEET GLEN ROSS

Teams Will Play Three-Out-of-Five for Title of the Hastings Loop

Stirling, Feb. 14 (Special)—Going into the final game of their semi-final two game series for second place honors in the Centre Hastings Rural Hockey League Robin Dulmage's "Fighting Irish" from Zion Hill were down one goal. The teams were closely matched and though the Foxboro "Foxes" had a one goal edge by virtue of taking the first game 2-1. No big bets were offered either way as the teams squared off last night to finish the battle—The Zion Hill "Irish" fought like Irish terriers to overtake the "Foxes" who went home singing anything but ya ya ya, for in this case the fox was caught and it was no song. The game was fast and clean with referees E. Wallace and J. Hulin handing out only two penalties in the sixty minutes of real speedy hockey.

Edging out Foxboro by the scant margin of one goal was a real chore and the Irish still have a real job to do before they "lug the mug." Watching their hard fought series with interest were the Glen Ross "Riversides," the team they must now meet in a best two out of three series for the championship. The first of this series and the finals will begin "next Friday night" instead of Thursday as previously announced. Glen Ross finished at the head of the league and have had a ten-day lay-off. It might be a rest but the way they hunt for a practice hour shows they are a bit worried. Any of these three teams however, are worthy champions and will earn the praise of all when they reach out for the cup.

The crowds are increasing with each game and the series between the fighting "Irishers" and the "Riversides" should pack the house.

Foxes Lead Shot Early

Going into the game one goal up Foxboro had an edge that was soon lost. In less than three miuntes of play Simms scored to tie up the round with Tummon and Ray in on the play. Less than a minute later Simms put the Irish in the lead and the crowd went wild. Foxboro seemed slightly disorganized and Simms got his third counter before they broke into the scoring this time on a pass from Ray Thompson and Wright combined for the Foxes only tally in the first period with the former scoring. Ray Dickey made it 4-1 for the Irish midway through the period to make the score on the round five to three. From this point the Foxes settled down but it was pretty late.

Increased speed in the second frame with Foxboro carrying the play gave the crowd plenty of real thrills. After ten minutes Wright scored on a pass Thompson climaxing a nice combination play and Foxboro had the edge for several minutes trying Gifford with shots from every angle. With only three minutes of the period left Thompson scored from Elder to tie up the series. Play was held up briefly, when Elder, snappy wingman of the Foxboro crew was hurt in a crash along the boards. But the play was fast and clean and no penalties were served in this frame.

Gifford Good in Goal

Starting the final period on even terms Foxboro turned on the heat and on the first play Gifford came ten feet out to beat Elder, who was right through alone. At the three minute mark Wright put Foxboro in the lead scoring from Elder. The Foxes steamed in in an attempt to sew it up.

After 12 minutes Brough bagged in a pass from Simms to tie up the series again in a game, that see-sawed back and forth to give the fans on both sides the jitters. Foxboro sent every man up and the power play cracked up, when Ray Dickey making the best play of the night went through the entire Foxboro team to draw Guay aside and score the winning goal of the game and the series. Score on the game 6-4 and on the round 7-6. Guay brothers, Walt, Spencer, Gough and Elder were next in line to Thompson for effectiveness on the Foxboro team and for the star of the evening with three goals and an assist. Tummon, Ray and Dickey were next in line for honors on the Zion Hill crew.

The official scoring averages of the Belleville Redmen as released today are not exactly what might be referred to as impressive, but taking into consideration the stormy seas over which the scarlet-clad Belleville hockey ship sailed this winter they did as well as could be expected. At that the Redmen scored as many goals throughout the group as did the Air Force "Flyers." Again we find the name of Clayt Jackson as leading scorer of the Redmen, Jackson getting four goals and the same number of assists in five games played. "Speedy" St. Louis and brother Bill Jackson followed the leading scorer, only one scoring point behind Clayt. The Belleville intermediates dressed 23 players during the season, whereas one half of that number would have been sufficient had they been quality pucksters. The curtain has rung down on the 1940 edition of the Belleville Redmen and before there is another local puck curtain-raising, several tried and proven hockey players will have to be forthcoming if Belleville is to return to the O.H.A. wars and hope to cope with either the Air Force or the Petes another season.

The S.R.O. sign is expected to be hung out at the Brock St. rink in Peterboro tonight when the Flyers and the Petes open their fourth consecutive group play-off in as many succeeding seasons. Incidentally it was brought to our attention, via the grapevine route, that Coach Toots Holway had applied for his amateur card and his application had been favourably received. Whether or not Holway hopes to get into this year's O.H.A. puck battles or not is still a mystery, as Toots refused to comment on the matter this morning. There is one thing certain, the Flyers' forwards will have to cover their checks more strongly if they expect to battle the Petes with any success, while the odd heavy bodycheck on the part of the Airmen's defence might tend to slow the speedy Peterboro forwards down somewhat.

Regarding the Petes-Flyers series that opens in the Liftlock City tonight and continues here on Friday, the Peterboro scribe has the following to say: "If the Petes can again rub out Trenton Fliers to win group honors this winter—the locals have three or four more group winners to meet in quest of an O.H.A. intermediate "A" title. Collingwood or Owen Sound will win the northern group, Kitchener has a bye into playdowns, Port Colborne has an intermediate "A" squad in a "B" group, and the T.A.H.A. has the right to send a team into intermediate "A" playdowns—though they don't always do it. However, the Buckland bunch will have to knock off the Airmen first, before worrying about the others."

No effort is being spared by the Quinte Skating Club in making their 1940 Ice Frolic a spectacle of grandeur and splendour. Tonight a dress rehearsal will be held prior to the big show at the Hume Arena Thursday evening, when the feature presentation will include the Canadian junior doubles champion, Miss Shirley Halsted and Jack Kirby, of the Toronto Skating Club, who will skate as a pair as well as singly. A complete ice variety show of two full hours has been arranged by the Quinte skaters with solo presentations by Miss Judy Scott, Miss Ardell Smith and Mike Ridley, all of the local skating organization. The Quinte Skating Club is one of Belleville's lone self-sustaining organizations that provide good clean and wholesome recreation for this city's youth.

Do you remember when in happier days for both Finland and Poland, Juho Kurikkala, of Finland won the 18-kilometre langlauf in the world ski championships at Zakopane in Poland one year ago today? Kurikkala's time was 65 1-2 minutes. Christel Cranz of Germany won the women's slalom event in 2:36 3-10, and also won the combined event.

Bill Calladine, Peterboro's gift to the U.S.A. amateur puck business and well known hockey and baseball player here in Belleville, is going great guns with the Baltimore "Orioles" this season. Bill scored the winning goals for two Oriole victories last week and is said to be heading towards the New York Ramblers professional club. Incidentally Calladine recently married a Baltimore girl, which may account for his improved puck efforts of late.

Apparently Kingston sport scribe Bill Walshe doesn't think too much of the Limestone City juniors. Recently he reminded his readers that "all signs point to an early spring and the sooner the better, as far as Kingston's winter sports are concerned." (Better be careful Willie, or the hometown boys will be taking your comments seriously.) However, as far as the local juniors are concerned they feel they'll emerge winners over the Kingston kids in their series that opens in Kingston Friday and continues here next Tuesday. The series will be decided by the total goals on the round.

It appears as though the suggested rowing race between Joe Burk, the world's amateur champion, and Bob Pearce, the professional titleholder, will never reach the stage of realization. The National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, of the U.S.A., prefers that Burk "pass up" the proposed race. In all probability the idea would have been quite practical had it been suggested from "south of the border." However, Burk indicates he is not through with the matter as yet, but for this year at least—the show is off.

SPORT SPICE — For once the Peterboro pucksters haven't got the type of referee they like, as M. J. "Mike" Rodden, the dean of hockey referees, has been named as the chief official for tonight's Air Force at Peterboro play-off game. All of which reminds us that the Air Force hockey team in the Ottawa City League is out of the running, if that suggests anything to Coach Holway ... We understand that Eric McNeely, twin brother of Ernie, is a patient in hospital and will never play hockey again and the Bata team remains undefeated in the city volleyball league. Hope to have the names of the city juvenile team soon, that is if the juvenile loop gets the promised support it needs.

Joey Catlin Declared Eligible to Play

Montreal, Feb. 14 (CP)—Secretary Alphonse Therien of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association confirmed yesterday eligibility of Joe Catlin, former Cornwall (Ont.) Flyer, to play with St. Catharines of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Catlin, given his release recently by Flyers of the Quebec Senior Hockey League is under no suspension by Quebec Branch of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Therien said. He was later signed by St. Catharines in accordance with the rule that allows replacement of player in the armed forces, who is transferred from the district he added.

Lajoie's Big Bat Thrilled Ball Fans for 20 Years

By Central Press Canadian

Up in Mentor-on-the-Lake, a suburb of Cleveland, O., a big man with steel-gray eyes and powerful frame is looking forward to his 65th birthday. He is Napoleon (Larry) Lajoie, probably the greatest second-baseman baseball has ever seen.

Brilliant and long was the career of Larry Lajoie. A great batsman, the incredible, flowing grace of the Faultless Frenchman in the field thrilled a generation of baseball fans, from 1896 to 1916.

Born in Woonsocket, R.I., Sept. 5, 1875, Larry was driving the village hack for a living 19 years later when a Fall River, Mass., baseball scout, one Charley Marston, became his passenger one day and by the end of the ride had signed Larry to a baseball contract.

Charley must have changed his mind about Lajoie's potentialities as a baseball player, because when, during the 1896 season, a Phillies' scout sought to buy Phil Geier, a Fall River outfielder, for $1,500 cash, Marston generously included Larry Lajoie in the deal.

Lajoie burst upon a delighted Philadelphia fandom in a blaze of brilliance. In that first season he played the final 39 games of the schedule as a Phil and, in addition to proving immediately he was one of the greatest ball hawks of all time, Larry carved out a .328 batting average, a very fine showing for a rookie 19-year-old.

The next season Larry batted .363 and continued to improve until he attained his masterpiece as a hitter, in 1901. That season the human gazelle carved out a .405 average and fashioned 13 home runs—an almost impossible feat in that era of dead baseballs.

With the formation of the American league and the tempting offers to National league players which were made by magnates of the new circuit, Larry became restive. He was unable to resist a particularly attractive offer by the newly formed Philadelphia Athletics club, and so he made the switch, as did many other National league stars of that time.

The roar of rage uttered by the Philly fans almost shook down Independence Hall. Lajoie was barred from playing in Philadelphia during the now historic war between the two clubs, so the Athletics turned Lajoie over to the Cleveland club. This, however, failed to shake the poise of the Fall River Frenchman.

Lajoie's batting form

Larry Lajoie

Larry led the American league in batting for the years 1901, 1903 and 1904. As a reward for such excellent stick work the Cleveland so great was his popularity that the team immediately became ownership turned over the management of the club to Larry, and known as the "Naps" — an abbreviation of the "Napoleons."

Lajoie shares with the late Wilbert Robinson the honor of having the club he piloted nicknamed in his honor. During Uncle Wilbert's Brooklyn sojourn the Dodgers were widely known as the Robins.

Lajoie almost won the American league pennant for Cleveland that first year as manager. The Naps probably would have won if their great star, Lajoie himself, had not suffered a spike wound which developed into blood-poisoning and almost cost the great second-baseman a leg.

By 1914 those marvellous limbs were beginning to feel the cold breath of age and Cleveland sold Larry to Philadelphia. There, in 1916, in the city where he first played major league baseball, Napoleon (Larry) Lajoie ended his diamond career.

As Lajoie walked off the field that late September day in 1916 he entered retirement, but not oblivion. The Fall River hack driver was already one of baseball's immortals.

AT THE BELLE

"Everything's On Ice"

Revealed as an enjoyable screen comedy romance, ornamented by elaborate ice-ballet numbers. "Everything's On Ice" comes next to the Belle Theatre, with little Irene Dare in the leading role.

The charming six-year-old Miss is an ice-skater of remarkable grace and skill. Her prowess is demonstrated when she leads several beautifully staged ice ballets, which comprise the floor-show of a fashionable Palm Beach Cafe. Such flawless execution by a child of her age is almost beyond belief, but she glides through the most intricate manoeuvres without falter. As an actress, too, the surprising Irene shows skill, giving hint that she may soon rank high among juvenile players.

The cast supporting little Irene Dare includes many such favorites as Roscoe Karns, Edgar Kennedy Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden, Mary Hart and Bobby Watson.

"The Saint in London"

A clever blending of tense drama and exhilarating action and romance "The Saint in London", third of a series of renowned Leslie Charteris stories to be filmed by RKO Radio is announced as the second feature attraction.

George Sanders, recently seen in "The Saint Strikes Back", again interprets the popular hero of mystery fiction with Sally Gray in the leading feminine role; Gordon McLeod as a puzzled but kindly Scotland Yard inspector; and Henry Oscar as the ruthless chief of a notorious criminal gang.

"The Saint", arch-enemy of crime, is called to London, where he pits himself against Oscar and his confederates, who are planning a vast currency fraud. The struggle between Sanders and Oscar is intensified when Miss Gray is made the target for the gang's activities.

Cleverly stealing a paper necessary for the successful conclusion of the fraud, Sanders returns to his flat to discover that Miss Gray has been kidnapped. David Burns, playing the role of a former confidence man befriended by Sanders, manages to free the girl from her enemies.

Enraged, the gang murders a foreign embassy official, with circumstantial evidence pointing to Sanders as the guilty person. How this modern Robin Hood evades arrest, simultaneously gatherings the evidence to indict the real murderers; protects Miss Gray from the ruthless activities of Oscar, and successfully brings the arch criminal to bay provides the background for the suspenseful plot.

The principal characters are supported by a splendid cast including David Burns , Gordon McLeod, Henry Oscar and Athene Seyler.

On the same program the March of Time presents the dramatic up-to-the minute story of Heroic, Finland—today. The film history of the brave, unyielding people of Finland —fighting to defend their 21-year-old Republic!

On our stage this week Ken Soble's new True-False Game will be presented, easy to play, and for splendid prizes. This weekly stage innovation has proven popular with Belle Theatre patrons.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Oh, Johnny How You Can Love"

Picturing hilarious adventures of a traveling salesman and a runaway heiress in a story which blends music with gay romance, Universal's "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love", the next attraction at the Capitol Theatre.

Tom Brown and Peggy Moran carry the love interest in the film, which brings to the screen the song sensation, "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love", sung by glamorous voiced radio songstress Betty Jane Rhodes.

The added special attraction exclusive motion pictures of the World's heavyweight championship fight. The wild cat Arturo Godoy versus the brown bomber, Joe Louis, —the greatest fight since Dempsey-Firpo. Taken at ringside, Madison Square Gardens, New York City. Come early and get a ringside seat.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Miracle on Main Street"

A truly exciting entertainment . . . a picture of everyday life, abounding in romance, drama and comedy "Miracle on Main Street" starring Margo , of "Lost Horizon" fame, also with Walter Abel, William Collier, Sr., Lyle Talbot, and Wynne Gibson, is now closing at the McCarthy Theatre. Charley Chase in "Teacher's Pest", "Screen Vaudeville" and a beautiful scenic in technicolor, completes the program and is highly recommended to all.

"Reno'

"Haunted Gold"

For the balance of the week the McCarthy Theatre will present two outstanding feature hit, Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Anita Louise, Paul Cavanagh and Laura Hope Crews in the exciting drama "Reno" also John Wayne, star of "Stagecoach" in a western with the fastest action and the biggest thrills . . . you've ever seen . . . "Haunted Gold". "Kit Carson" chapter play will also be shown in addition.

"I Was a Spy"

BRITAIN SWIFTLY EXPANDS COASTAL FIGHTER BASES

London, Feb. 13—(CP) — The Royal Air Force was disclosed today to be expanding its coastal fighter commands swiftly to end the German bombing attacks on merchant shipping and to be prepared for any aerial offensive this spring.

The air force, already with a big airplane construction program in progress, is buying planes—mostly of the heavier type—in the United States and from a nation cautiously described as "at least one other air-skilled neutral," and is training fliers of the Empire in Canada.

To balance this development of men and machines, the air force issued a call today for radio experts, said to be wanted especially for the elaborate air defence system, which is coordinated through complicated signalling methods.

British contentions that their planes already are superior to Germany's in quality, were given support by a highly-authoritative source, which said the R.A.F. had shot down 59 German planes over the North Sea and coastal areas since the war began and damaged 20 others so that they were probable losses.

On the other side of the ledger, British losses in these encounters have been 18 bomber and one coastal reconnaissance plane, but not a single fighter (pursuit) craft the source said.

The German's losses were placed at about $4,000,000 worth of planes and 200 fliers.

The figures were supplied to show Britain's efforts against the aerial bombardments by which Germany is attacking British sea supply lines. These attacks have averaged one a day since Jan. 1.

Preparations for enlarging the coastal air defences were understood also to provide for intensified counter-attacks.

Britain would be at a disadvantage on this score, however, for she has 900 miles of threatened coastline, while Germany's exposed coast is only a little more than 100 miles long, much of it guarded by seaplane bases on islands.

Giving point to the coastal air patrol was the rescue last night of the 10-man crew of the British trawler Theresa Boyle, sunk by a German bomber Saturday.

A British plane sighted a lifeboat and directed a minesweeper to it off the northeast coast.

A mine or torpedo was blamed for the sinking of the 1,213-ton Estonian steamship Linda, reported last night. She was en route from England to Gothenburg, Sweden. The Linda's assistant engineer was reported injured fatally.

Librarians scanned Riley's book. There were no takers.

CHAPTER 27

Filling the Larder

Rene stirred on his bed of boughs groaned a bit and then slowly raised himself on the elbow of his good arm.

"Where's Bill?" he asked.

"I don't know, Rene", Claire told him. "I was just wondering myself. I just woke up now, expecting to see him where he was last night when I dropped off to sleep, sitting out there. I suppose he's under a bush somewhere, getting caught up on his sleep, too. Poor man, he's had less than either of us in these last few days".

"You don't suppose—anything's happened to him do you?" Rene's tone was casual but Claire sensed a feeling of alarm back of his words.

"Of course not," she assured him with an enthusiasm she didn't feel herself. After all, there was no need of worrying Rene. "How's the wound?"

"Oh, fine, fine. But where can Bill be?"

"Now don't get yourself into a stew about him. I'll go and see if I can find where he's sleeping. Probably dead to the world, and I wouldn't blame him after what he's been through."

Claire got slowly to her feet, stretched and yawned, and walked slowly down to the bank of the mountain stream. She plunged her hands into the cold water and scrubbed her face vigorously. The icy water was like an electric shock but as she rubbed her cheeks and the blood rushed into them they suddenly began to tingle. Soon she was glowing and any remaining fog of sleep had vanished.

After she dried her face as best she could with her handkerchief, she started to look for Bill. She called softly at first, and then raised her voice a bit, but there was no answer. She quickened her steps as she half ran from one clump of underbrush to another, any likely place where he might have found shelter for the night. There was no sign of him.

Satisfied at last that he was nowhere near the little clearing where they had camped, she turned and walked slowly back to the shelter where Rene was now sitting up. The girl carried a helmet filled with cold water.

"Well, where is he"? the French officer demanded. "Did you find him?"

"No—he's not here. I brought you some water. Have a cold drink and then I'll wash your face for you. That will wake you up."

"Where in the deuce do you suppose Bill is? You don't think . . ."

"Of course not", Claire interrupted, assuming a confident air she was far from feeling. "He's out foraging again, of course. Looking for something for breakfast."

Rene's face, which had worn a worried frown, suddenly smoothed and wrinkled into an anticipatory grin.

"I hope it's another partridge. That was great, last night, except I could have eaten three or four of them myself."

"Don't worry. Bill will come back with something".

Rene fished in the pocket of his leather jacket and produced a package of cigarettes.

"I must have felt low yesterday. I'd forgotten I had these. After Bill comes back and we have breakfast, think of how good a cigarette will taste! That mountain water certainly gave me an appetite."

Claire had finished bathing his face and was carefully removing the bandage from his shoulder. He winced slightly as the last of it came free, and glanced curiously at the reddish wound edged with blue from the bruise of the bullet's impact.

"How's it look to you?"

"Swell, Rene. I think you're going to get out of this now without any more infection. That cognac Frau Weber gave us must have a powerful antiseptic power. How do you feel—stronger"?

"Fit as a fiddle. The sooner we get back to Paris, the better I'll like it. I have a date with Maria tonight. Do you think we'll make it?"

Claire was deftly fashioning a clean bandage from the remains of Rene's shirt, and finished it before she answered.

"I'm not afraid not—not tonight Maybe tomorrow night or the next one—if we're very lucky."

"We've been fools for luck so far, so why shouldn't it hold out?"

"You're pretty fond of Maria, aren't you?" Claire asked, pulling his jacket back over the bandaged shoulder and buttoning it up about his throat. "Have you known her long?"

"Oh, seven or eight months, I should say. She's very fascinating—charming—lovely. In fact, Claire, I'm madly in love with her. Or had you guessed?"

"Well," she laughed, "I rather suspected it. Are you—are you engaged?"

"As you would say in your very expressive language, you've got me there, pal. I don't know. I consider myself engaged to her, but I don't know for sure how she feels about it. I've been begging her to marry me for the last five months, but she keeps putting me off. What do you think of her?"

Claire turned her head away, afraid that the doubts she had about Maria Herczek might show in her eyes. How could she tell this man who had saved her life, and Bill's too, that she suspected the woman he loved was in the pay of the Nazis? She had nothing to back up her suspicions except intuition and the warning she thought she had read in "Z.Y.'s" eyes when Maria was urging her to stay the night in her flat. She knew, too, that Maria was a friend of the Rolands and knew now that George Roland was not the American he pretended to be, but a secret agent of Germany. A powerful figure in their espionage service in France.

Rene had asked her a direct question, and she had to answer.

"I think," she said, "that Maria is very lovely. I hope she is everything you think she is and that you will be very happy."

Rene nodded and then as if tired from the exertion of talking, lay down on his bed of pine boughs.

"I do hope," he sighed, "that Bill brings back something good to eat I'm starved!"

Where was Bill? What had happened to him? Had he wandered too far in his search for food and perhaps been recaptured? Claire was panic-stricken as she wondered what she would do alone, with the wounded Rene. Just when her feeling were getting the best of her, she heard a soft call from the trees. Then Bill came striding toward her, a bundle under one arm and two fair-sized fish, secured by a forked stick thrust through their gills, in his other hand.

"Meat on the table!" he laughed "Aren't they beauties?"

He proudly exhibited his fish, which turned out to be trout, and tossed his bundle on the ground. Hearing his voice, Rene sat up and volubly congratulatory over the catch.

"Hope you snagged a nice bottle of wine, too. Is that what you have in the bundle?"

"Sorry, Rene, but no wine. You'll have to get along on water. I brought some clothes for Claire—so [illegible] clothesline several miles from here, on the [illegible]."

As he used Rene's [illegible]fully preparing the fish, he told them briefly of his adventures during h's absence.

"I was up as soon as there was a glimmer of daylight and headed eastward on a hunch", he told them. "I must have walked three miles before I came to the top of that ridge over there. I looked down, and low, and behold, not far away was a little farmhouse. I sneaked up on it, to see what I could find, and on the clothesline were a pair of trousers and a sweater. Probably washed last night and left out to dry. Just as I was grabbing them, a dog started to bark and I beat it back into the woods.

"I heard a woman's voice and from my hiding place saw her come to the door and look around. Then she told the dog to be quiet. There was a small squadron of planes far overhead, and apparently she thought they were what the dog was yapping at. When things quieted down, I started back."

"But where did you get the fish?" Claire asked.

"In a pool up the stream a ways. They were lying there in the clear water, a dozen of them. I broke off a sharp stick from a tree and speared one. Then I had to wait half an hour for them to settle down and come back to the pool. Then I got the second one. Sorry I couldn't wait for more."

"Better go into the bushes and put on these clothes", he suggested to the girl. "You'll attract a lot less attention as a boy than as a girl. Your hat will do nicely for a farm boy's if you muss it up a bit."

"But my high-heeled oxfords!" Claire protested.

"I thought of them, too. That's why I snagged this piece of old brown sacking. We'll leave your shoes here, and wrap your feet in the cloth, peasant style."

"Have you any idea where we are"? Rene asked.

"Yes. I crossed a road, which winds over the mountain, about two miles from here. There was a neat little milepost saying, seven kilometres to Emsburg. Does that mean anything to you, Rene? You said you knew this country like a book."

"It means everything! There's an army airfield just outside Emsburg. The Nazis are using it as a scouting base."

"Good. As soon as you're able to travel, we'll be on our way."

"I'll be ready tonight, Bill".

Cameron looked at him and shook his head. Rene was much weaker than he realized. It would not be tonight that they would go to Emsburg, steal a plane and be on their way to Paris.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning ma gave pop a letter to mail with special instructions to mail it, and tonight at supper she said, Willyum I hope you remembered that letter?

Yee gods, pop said. Meaning he hadn't and ma said, Now really, Willyum, I mean really, sometimes you seem to have an empty sieve instead of a mind for a brain, I dont see how you can call yourself a successful business man and still not be able to keep a little thing like that in your mind for 5 simple consecutive minutes, she said.

I dont call myself a successful business man, I leave that to others and content myself with a modest bow, pop said, and ma said, Trying to make a joke of it is just adding flames to the fuel, because forgetfulness carried to that extreme borders on the verge of criminal negligents.

O now come come, we're all human, unfortunately, and you forget your own many lapses of memory, pop said, and ma said, Now none of that, because if there's one thing I pride myself on it's my memory and it's no empty baseless boast either, because everybody elts prides me on it too.

Then they dont know you as well as I do, because for instants how about the time I reminded you 3 times to take the spoon out of your coffee cup but each time it slipped your memory right there under your very nose, and finely you stuck yourself in the eyelash and came within a hair of a serious eye injury, pop said, and ma said, There never was such a fabricated time and you know it, and I'll thank you not to accuse me of drinking coffee with my spoon in the cup, and if you haven't a leg of your own to stand on, please don't try to stand on a woman's apron strings.

By gollies I forgot, I mean I remembered after all and stuck that letter in the mail that was leaving the office, pop said.

And he stuck his hand in his empty inside pocket to prove it, ma not knowing whether to feel madder or just partly mad and the rest relieved.

vice! His is a great reward—the love of the Canadian people.

There are many excellent qualities in Lord Tweedsmuir's character on which one might dwell—his profound learning, his literary talents, his ability in business, his statesmanship as shown in his distinguished war service with the British cabinet, and later in his remarkable grasp of Canadian affairs. Today I feel I must emphasize one unique and very personal quality—his victorious spirit.

Man Who Knew Pain

Lord Tweedsmuir, like many other great men, was one who for many years knew pain as an almost constant companion, yet he was able, by a supreme effort of the will, to guard undimmed that liveliness and charming gaiety that so endeared him to all. Life always seemed more radiant when one had been in his company.

His career is a great record of achievement, of diligence, application and conscientious work. But it is a record too, of cheerful fortitude in the face of physical frailty.

Courage! Ah, there's a quality men most admire. We saw it exercised daily in this life now finished. We salute in death that gallant heart, that victorious spirit.

Of one thing more I shall speak—deep-rooted in our governor's life—his religion. It formed the background in which his life was set. It was the rock-like base of his character.

His was no feeble, sentimental faith, but something robust, pure, and unshakeable, that accepted in deepest humility the great gift of Divine atonement for human sin.

Listen to his own words: "Today there is a tendency to smooth away all concrete Christian dogmas into a vague theism, or a vaguer pantheism, and to flatten out the firm lines of Christian ethics with a pious sentiment. But the foundation of our faith is not only 'God is love.' It is still more the tremendous historical fact that 'God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' "

"We need a quickened sense of sin," he adds; a profounder realization of the majesty and purity of God.'

Such words reveal this good man's heart. His life of grateful, joyful service to his Lord and of his fellows bore out his strong convictions.

No slackness ever prevented him from seeing his duty; no self-indulgence from doing it! If he was among us as one who served, it was because he was deliberately following the pattern set for men on earth by Jesus Christ Our Lord. The Christian way of life was to our governor the only right way.

"There is still for every man," he once wrote, "the choice of two paths, and 'conversion' in its plain evangelical sense is still the greatest fact in any life."

Chose Christian Way

He chose the Christian way and kept to it, loyally, frankly—loving the church of his fathers with a straightforward simplicity that warmed the heart.

The lines of the old Scottish paraphrase might have been written of him:

"I'm not ashamed to own My Lord,
Or to defend His cause,
Maintain the glory of His cross
And honor all His laws."

His life, both in home and state, was graced with Christian discipline and Christian love. His death was died in the great Christian hope.

"So he passed over—and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

"O Death, where is thy sting? Thanks be to God, Who giveth us the victory through Our Lord Jesus Christ."

SIMPLICITY MARKS FUNERAL SERVICE

Accompanied by Mrs. George Pape, her Lady-in-Waiting, Lady Tweedsmuir stood in silent mourning beside the flag-draped coffin.

Her youngest son, Lieut. Alastair Buchan, stood nearby with head bowed over his reversed sword as one of four officers on guard about the casket.

There was no public lying-in-state during the morning.

Lieutenant-Governors of the provinces, members of the diplomatic corp and members of the Governor-General's staff were among those who filed past the bier in the Senate Chamber.

Senate Chamber

Outside a dull, overcast sky was in sharp contrast to the brilliant sunshine of yesterday when the 64-year-old Governor-General's body was brought to Ottawa from Montreal where he died Sunday night.

The near-zero temperature meant a chill time for the soldier who must stand for more than an hour along the route from Parliament Hill to nearby St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and from the church to Union station whence the body will be taken by special train for eventual interment in Scotland.

The Senate Chamber remained open until 12.30 o'clock when Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who formally welcomed Lord Tweedsmuir when he came to Canada in November 1935, was the last official to pay tribute.

Many Floral Pieces

More than 175 floral tributes had been received this morning. They overflowed the ante-chamber of the Senate into the rotunda, filling the air with their heavy perfume.

One of the floral pieces came from Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the young motion picture actor who visited at Rideau Hall within the past year.

In addition to Lady Tweedsmuir and her Lady-in-Waiting the government house party included Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Willis O'Connor, Sir Shuldham and Lady Redfern.

Others among official callers were James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister and Mrs. Cromwell; Sir Gerald Campbell, British High Commissioner, and Lady Campbell; Lieut.-Governors Fiset of Quebec and Matthews of Ontario; and Dr. H. A. Bruce, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Double Doors Closed

Immediately after Mr. Mackenzie King entered the Senate Chamber the great double doors closed, not to be opened again except for the guard changes at 15 minute intervals, until removal to the church at 2.10 o'clock.

From the hundreds of floral tributes received just three were to accompany the casket to the church and the station. They were the red and white carnation wreath from Lady Tweedsmuir, the wreath of violets, lily-of-the-valley and freesia from Prime Minister Mackenzie King and a wreath of tulips, iris and carnations from John, William, Alice and Alastair Buchan, his Excellency's children.

Following the funeral the baskets of flowers were to be sent to the hospitals and charitable institutions in Ottawa.

Government Offices Closed

No public holiday was proclaimed but all government offices closed so civil servants might watch the last journey of His Excellency through the streets of the capital.

Among late arrivals in the city were J. W. McConnell of Montreal and Dr. Lewis Douglas, former principal of McGill University.

Those admitted to the lying-in-state this morning included Conservative Leader Manion who interrupted a political campaign tour at Fort William and returned to Ottawa when he heard of Lord Tweedsmuir's death.

The Apostolic Delegate, Most Rev. Hildebrando Antoniutti, and other members of the Ottawa clergy, called during the morning.

At two o'clock the bearers entered the senate chamber and lifted the casket, covered with a Union Jack, to their shoulders, starting the short, slow, procession to the church.

A solitary wreath, the plumed headdress of the Governor-General and his scabbarded sword and sword harness, surmounted the casket.

Outside, where the sharp cold of the morning had softened somewhat, the soldiers lining the route sprang to attention.

A plain motor hearse received the body at the entrance beneath the peace tower. Chief mourners from Government House, high government officials and other dignitaries fell in behind as the cortege moved down the slope and along Wellington street to the church entrance.

Behind the hearse an aide walked bearing the insignia of His Excellency's various orders and honors.

TANKER SUNK BY GERMAN ACTION

London, Feb. 14 (CP)—The sinking of the British tanker Gretafield 10,191 tons, off the northern coast of Scotland was reported today. Twenty-eight of her crew was rescued by trawlers; 13 were reported missing. The tanker was sunk by German action and burst into flames before going down.

First accounts did not give the cause of the sinking, but it was reported that the Gretafield burst into flames before going down.

Her home port is Newcastle.

CAPITAL IN MOURNING AS LORD TWEEDSMUIR BROUGHT HOME

The Great of Canadian public life, headed by Sir Lyman Duff and Prime Minister King, waited in hushed silence as the train bearing the body of the late Lord Tweedsmuir drew to a stop at Ottawa's Union Station. From the station the body was carried, Above, to a waiting motor hearse and taken to the Senate Chamber to lie in state. Hon. Alastair Buchan, the Governor-General's third son and Sir Shuldham Redfern, secretary to the Governor-General, followed immediately behind the casket as it was carried from the station.

INSTINCT REQUIRES RESCUE FROM SEA OF DROWNING MEN

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill So Declares in Answer to Question in House

ADMIRALTY ACTIVE

London, Feb. 14—(CP)—Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today that the "ordinary instincts of humanity require rescue from the sea of drowning men or castaways should they be observed by His Majesty's ships in the course of their duties."

The First Lord of the Admiralty was replying to a question by Colonel Josiah Wedgwood, Labor, who asked if Mr. Churchill would consider refusing to send ships to rescue German airmen brought down in the sea after "murdering unarmed seamen."

Mr. Churchill said the Admiralty is "ceaselessly engaged" in the defence of British trawlers and fishing boats and hoped that within a month or six weeks "a very great measure of protection will be afforded to our men" in the North Sea.

This was taken as an indication that every British vessel in the North Sea soon would be equipped with anti-aircraft guns for defence against German bombers and aerial machine-gunners.

White Paper "Less Effective"

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House he considered publication of a white paper less effective "than the present methods" of informing the public abroad of the inhumanity of German attacks on British and neutral shipping and lightships.

Mr. Churchill asked how five German merchant ships now loading at Rotterdam had escaped detection by the British blockade, said the question was not in accord with his information but that in any case the House must be aware that the coasts of Germany and Holland are contiguous and that it is not because of a lack of British zeal or thought that any German ship had escaped.

"I think no one would expect us to be able to maintain a close patrol or a close blockade off the German coast having regard to the enormous development of shore base aircraft since the last war," he said.

Lord Tweedsmuir 4th Representative Of the Crown to Die in Canada

The Three Others Served Before Confederation — Accidents End Career of Three Governors

TWO DIE AT KINGSTON

A survey of Canadian history reveals that the late Lord Tweedsmuir was the fourth Governor of British Canada to die in this country and the third to come to his death through an accident. Other Governors to die here were the Duke of Richmond, Lord Sydenham and Sir Charles Bagot, the latter two meeting death in Kingston.

Canada's late beloved Governor-General, however, was the first Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada to die in this country. The other three served before Confederation.

The Duke of Richmond, who became Governor in 1818 died of hydrophobia in 1819, a month after he contracted the disease through the bite of a pet fox in Sorel, Quebec. The Duke lived for a month after being bitten and died at Richmond near Ottawa while still Governor.

Lord Sydenham was fatally injured in a fall from his horse on King Street, Kingston, Ont., on September 10th, 1841. He had become Governor-in-Chief or Governor-General of British North America in 1839 and was the victim of the fatal riding accident before his term expired. History states that his horse shied at a pile of rocks beside a road where a house was under construction.

Lord Sydenham's successor, Sir Charles Bagot, also died at Kingston. He was one of the fathers of the Rush-Bagot Treaty which limited the armaments between the United States and Canada. He was forced by ill-health to relinquish his office in 1843 and died shortly afterwards.

Canadian Legion War Services Campaign Opens in City Today

Twenty-Two Teams Start Out on Effort to Raise $2,000 as Belleville's Allotment

FOR TROOPS' WELFARE

Twenty-two teams composed of prominent men from all walks of life in the city, members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch, swept into action today as the campaign to raise funds for the Canadian Legion War Services Inc. officially got under way.

Team captains and their crews were selected at a special meeting held in the Army and Navy Veterans Club rooms last night, where allotments of the various sections of the city were made.

The Dominion drive will seek one-half million dollars for the fund. Belleville's allotment is $2,000.00.

The late Lord Tweedsmuir in a letter to Brig. Gen. Alex. Ross, Honorary Chairman for the drive expressed his wholehearted support for the cause.

"The distress which followed the last war," the letter said, "is still vivid in the minds of most of us, when many men intensively trained for war found themselves without the equipment necessary to earn a living in a world of peace."

"It is most gratifying to me to learn that active steps are being taken to prevent the recurrence of a similar condition at the close of the present war. Your object of fostering the development of our men as Canadian citizens while for a short time they must also serve as soldiers and of keeping alive their interest in civil life during their sojourn in the army, cannot be too highly commended."

"It is fitting that this task be undertaken by the Canadian Legion, composed as it is, of a body of staunch Canadian citizens who have themselves passed through the bitter experiences of war and its aftermath."

"The work you are undertaking is vital not only for the men themselves but also for the country as a whole. Your appeal for funds deserves the support of every loyal Canadian."

Officials of the Army and Navy Veterans Club of Belleville last night expressed the hope the campaign would be a success here. The local branch does not receive one cent of benefit from the venture, in fact they readily granted the sum of $200.00 to start off the campaign.

The work of the Canadian Legion War Services Inc. will not in any way overlap that of the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus or other similar war-working organizations. To the contrary these organizations, have strongly endorsed the Legion campaign.

Educational and personal services will be the first charge on the money raised. Entertainment will be provided and recreation established where required. It will also be the duty of experienced personnel, under proper authority, to do such things as may seem reasonable and necessary to contribute to the welfare of the troops. The Legion desires to be ready to meet any emergency which may arise.

The Belleville Campaign Committee respectfully asks that a generous citizenry, always ready to respond to a worthy cause, endorse the Canadian Legion campaign with generous contributions, so that the "boys over there" will get the opportunity to prepare themselves for the day when peace once again rules over the world.

Twenty Airmen From Canada To Aid Finland

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP) — A Kingsley Graham, Finnish consul in Toronto, announced today that 20 Canadian airmen, who will be picked from more than 50 volunteers, are scheduled to sail for Finland within the next few weeks to aid the Finns in their fight with Russia. None of the fliers actually have been accepted as yet because qualifications still are being checked.

All the men volunteering for the Finnish air force have attempted to join the Royal Canadian Air Force without success, they said.

R. O. Rittwage, Toronto, in his application, said he served in the Bolivian air force and also in the Chinese national air force. In the meantime, however, he was accepted by the Canadian army and is with an artillery unit at Kingston.

Another volunteer is Anastasios Bakogeorge of Barrie, 19, this month. His parents formerly resided in Hamilton and Brantford.

Sheldun Gunn, 19, North Bay, is anxious to join the Finn air arm, he said. He was a passenger on the torpedoed Athenia and was taken to Ireland by a rescue ship before returning to North Bay.

It is more than 20 years since John LeMee of Hamilton, handled a regular assignment in combat flying, but he has volunteered with other Hamilton flyers to fight for Finland. He formerly held the rank of lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps in England.

Other Hamiltonians who have volunteered include H. W. Marshall, H. McElroy, Russell B. Street, and John F. Murphy, 26.

British Freighter Reports By Wireless Of Being Torpedoed

New York, Feb. 14.—(AP)—The 7,684-ton British freighter Sulta Star reported by wireless today that she was torpedoed 230 miles southwest of Land's End, England, and that the crew was abandoning ship.

The S.O.S. received here by MacKay radio gave the position as 49.48 north, 10.06 west.

The Sulta Star's radio operator gave notice that he was going overside eight minutes after the S.O.S.

The ship was last reported out of Buenos Aires on January 17.

FORESEE AERIAL WAR EXPANDED BY HITLER

Air Force Chief Anxious Public be Not Led Into Feeling of Incautious Security

OFFICERS' VIEWS

London, Feb. 14.— (CP)—Chiefs of the Royal Air Force are convinced the war will not end without large-scale day and night bombing raids on the United Kingdom—nerve centre of the Empire's effort to wipe out Hitlerism.

When they may come is something no competent authority will attempt to guess. However, the general feeling is that if Chancellor Hitler finds his forces balked on other fronts he may be expected to gamble on an aerial blitzkrieg.

Because the air force chiefs consider the problem of Nazi raids is not if they will come but rather when they will come, they are anxious that the public be not led into a feeling of incautious security by the fact five months of war have not brought concerted aerial activity over civilian centres.

Some persons seek comfort from the low percentage of casualties Russian airmen have inflicted on the Finns. An answer to this is that the much smaller population of Finland is not jam-packed the same way the people of England, Scotland and Ireland are in the "tight little isles". Also Russian bombers are notoriously bad marksmen.

A senior R.A.F. officer, who finds it difficult to believe inactivity in the air will go on much longer, summed up his view of the future this way:

"When 300 or 400 enemy machines come over to drop bombs we shall succeed in stopping a large percentage of them, but some will get through. If the people are too optimistic and expect too much their morale is liable to be rudely shaken when the first air raids take place.

"We expect to be able to make German losses on their raids so heavy that they will be compelled to discontinue them after a time."

The officer stressed that the Allies do not intend to start widespread bombing warfare. However, any such Nazi campaign will bring instantaneous retaliation.

Another officer high in the councils of Britain's armed services told The Canadian Press:

"If Hitler strikes through the air we can repay him ten for one. We have the equipment to do it and we know our aircraft are superior to his. If he didn't know that, too, we likely would have had mass air attacks before now."

Election Enumerators Complete Canvass Of Voters' Lists in City

Election enumerators have completed their canvass of the city and preliminary voters' lists are now in the hands of the printer, according to announcement made today from the office of Colonel W. R. Rierdon, returning officer for this city.

Copies of preliminary lists have been posted in prominent places in each city sub-division. Every person on the voters' list will receive a copy of the voters' list for his sub-division, which entails a considerable amount of work not only for the returning officer but for mail-carriers as well. Lists will be in the hands of all eligible voters no later than March 2nd.

Some people have been under the impression that they will receive a voters' list for the entire riding. This is an erroneous impression. Lists received personally will include voters in the recipient's sub-division only.

Citizens whose names are not on the voters' lists may appeal to a Court of Revision to have the error remedied, if such is the case. These sittings will be held on dates to be announced later. Comparative figures of eligible voters for this election and of the 1935 election will be available within a few days it was announced.

Lord Tweedsmuir's Memoirs to be Issued Later This Year

More Than 40 Years of Historical and Literary Reminiscence May be Included in 'Pilgrim's Way: An Essay in Recollection'

New York, Feb. 14 (CP)— Lord Tweedsmuir's American publishers disclosed last night that the late Governor-General completed his memoirs shortly before his death and that they would be published later this year.

The publishers (Houghton, Mifflin Company) said the autobiography would carry the title: "Pilgrim's Way: an essay in recollection."

It was not indicated whether the volume would cover the period of the late Governor-General's office in Canada, but the book was expected to provide a fund of literary and historical reminiscence, since Lord Tweedsmuir, for more than 40 years, knew the leading literary figures of the old and new worlds and was intimately associated with many of them.

As reader for London publishers, when he was still at Oxford, the former John Buchan came into contact with the foremost writers of the late Victorian era. Later, when he entered parliament he came to know statesmen and parliamentarians as well.

Volumes published by Lord Tweedsmuir while he was at Government House included "The Island of Sheep," 1936, and the historical biography "Augustus," 1937.

Acts as His Majesty's Special Representative at State Funeral

Debate Features Home And School Club Session

Queen Alexandra Home and School Club held a very interesting supper meeting last evening in St. Thomas Parish House where a delicious supper was served by members of the ladies of the church. Over one hundred attended. Community singing, led by Mr. James Bankier, was an enjoyable part of the program into which all entered with enthusiasm. A brief business discussion was held during which reports were received and Mrs. Wishart read a letter of sympathy the Association is sending to Lady Tweedsmuir in the death of her husband. A year ago Lady Tweedsmuir had visited Belleville as a guest of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association to open the Book Fair and the many friends she made during her visit sympathize deeply with her in her sorrow.

Mr. R. Moncrieff, chairman of the Board of Education, acted as chairman for the evening. Mr. Rollins expressed appreciation of the gathering to St. Thomas' Church ladies for the wonderful supper served. Dr. A. C. Locke, chairman of Queen Alexandra School, was among the guests. Mr. J. D. Bankier delighted the gathering with two vocal numbers.

An original entertainment was the "Let's Disagree" discussion on the subject "The parent is more trouble to the child than the child is to the parent". Three minute addresses were given by Mr. G. Wishart and Mr. Gordon Barclay for the affirmative and Mr. P. C. McGuire and Mr. Harold Seldon for the negative. Mr. G. Anderson acted as timekeeper, allowing each speaker a further two minutes for reply. An interesting general discussion followed.

The attendance prize was won by Miss Lockhart's room nineteen parents with children in her class being present. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Madeliene Carroll, called by many the most beautiful star on the screen has the title role in the Gaumont picture, "I Was A Spy," which comes to the McCarthy Theatre next week with Herbert Marshall co-starring and other prominent parts played by Conrad Veidt and Nigel Bruce.

Sir Kingsley Wood, British Air Minister, is pictured inspecting the Polish air personnel now serving with the Royal Air Force in England. Although their country has been taken over by Germany and Russia, hundreds of Poles are now serving in the armed forces of England and France. "Or Else—"

By VIC YARDMAN

"I reckon," said old Nate Hurst, "that you two are a couple of these gangster fellers I bin hearin' so much about. "You" he added, nodding toward the chubby-faced young man, "must be Boris Picato. An' you little jigger, must be Sammy, Picato's bodyguard."

The chubby-faced man grinned, but said nothing.

Sammy sneered:

"Now ain't he smart, though? What else do you know about us, gramp?"

Old Nate ran a hand through his tousled gray hair.

"You're bad-uns," he continued placidly. " I reckon right now you're hidin' out after stickin' up the Fenmore bank an' shootin' a couple o' clerks. You're awaitin' out here till things quiet down, an' while you're awaitin' you figure mebbe you can pick up a little extry change by makin' me tell where 'tis I got my gold mine an' my little pile o' dust hid away."

Sammy opened his mouth in mild astonishment.

"Well, by jingoes," he began, but the chubby-faced man cut in on him.

"Shut up, Sammy!"

He turned to old Nate.

"Mister, either you're a plumb damn fool or you're plenty smart. Anyway you guessed right. We heard you struck it rich and we aim to relieve you of some of that dough. It'll make our stop in this stinking desert less irksome, more profitable."

The chubby-faced man was no longer grinning.

His right hand was thrust in the pocket of his jacket.

Sammy's hand was likewise concealed, and there wasn't any doubt in old Nate's mind what those pockets contained.

He scratched his head again and looked dubious.

It was part of his plan to look dubious and plenty dumb. Otherwise he wouldn't stand a chance.

He was thinking already that that remark the chubby-faced man had made about him being plenty smart showed that already they might be on to him, and that was bad.

After a moment he said:

"I guess you jiggers got ways to make a feller talk. Leastwise I heard tell an' I'm an old man an' ain't hankerin' to have my ears shot off."

He looked worried and seemed to consider.

"Tell you what I'll do, boys. I'll agree to show you the mine if you'll promise to leave me a share fer to grub-stake myself. Ain't no use in me wantin' to live 'less you do, so—"

"Sure," the chubby-faced man cut in.

He was grinning again.

"We'll leave you your share, Pop. Where's the cache?"

Old Nate nodded and squinted toward the mountains that reared their naked peaks out of the desert to the north.

Sammy and the chubby-faced man took advantage of the moment to exchange winks.

"She's over there in the mountains," Nate said.

He glanced at the shiny, black coupe in which the gangsters had overtaken him and shook his head.

"You'll have to leave that there ottermobile here an' follow after me an' Lou-ears," he told them. "There ain't no road."

"No road?"

The chubby-faced man looked serious, but Sammy said: "Why, hell, them mountains ain't more'n five miles away, Boris. Reckon we can walk it if this old coot can."

Nate didn't wait to hear Boris' reply, but picked up a pebble and shied it at Lop-ears.

The burro tossed its head, brayed once and then started off at a shambling gait toward the mountains.

Old Nate plodded along behind, occasionally shying a pebble at the animal.

Behind him the chubby-faced man and Sammy hesitated for a doubtful minute.

"It looks," said Boris, "as though we've either got to follow, or shoot him down for nothing. And shooting now won't do any good at all. Come on, Sammy."

It was early morning when the strange cavalcade began its trek across the desert.

Before two hours had passed the rising sun had burned away the last trace of the previous night's coolness.

The air was like the inside of an oven, mercilessly hot.

The two men in store clothes and low-cut shoes were suffering.

They had discared their coats and loosened their collars.

They staggered rather than walked, and their mouths were open.

No sweat poured from their faces, because the sun absorbed any excess moisture as soon as it appeared.

Their skins, pasty-looking to start with, were burned a brilliant red.

Blisters were on their feet.

Every movement of face or body was agony.

Presently Sammy, lagging several feet behind the chubby-faced man, sank to his knees.

Picato turned at the sound, and then swung back toward Old Nate and his burro, now some distance ahead.

"Hey you!" he called huskily. "Come back here!"

It was the fifth time he had demanded a halt, and no whe held a blue automatic in his hand, and there was threat in his eyes.

Old Nate turned with a questioning look on his tanned and wrinkled face.

He took in the tableau behind him, and came shambling back.

"Shucks," he said mildly. "The little feller looks plumb tuckered."

"We're both tuckered, you danged old chiseler!"

"Now get this: Either you turn up at this mine of yours within the next ten minutes, or else—"

Old Nate cackled.

"Or else—" He repeated the words to himself.

He grinned, remembering that once a city chap had explained that "or else—" meant something pretty bad in gangland.

But presently he stopped grinning and turned to look at the mountains.

They appeared to be as far away as they had back on the automobile road. Ten minutes, he reflected. Ten minutes wasn't very long, but—He looked critically at Picato, then at Sammy. The latter was babbling incoherently, asking for water.

Nate said, indicating the gun:

"You'd better put that thing away, son. It won't do you no good to shoot me. You can't find the mine yourself, an' without water you couldn't get back, so I reckon I got you about where I want yuh."

Picto snarled in as ugly a manner as he could without causing too much pain to his face.

"Listen, you shriveled up little desert rat, I'd just as soon shoot you as—"

But Old Nate was pladding back toward the burro.

His attitude was disinterested, confident.

Pictto raised the automotic, and lowered it again. An oath escaped his lips.

An hour later Old Nate's attention was attracted by a shot.

He stopped and turned.

Two hundred yards behind, the chubby-faced man was on his knees in the desert sand.

As the old man watched, Picato half lifted the automatic, swayed, straightened again and then plunged forward on his face.

He moved once, half dragged himself to a sitting posture, but the hand which held the automatic was needed to brace his body.

A minute passed, and then the gangster slowly sank back, curled up on the blistering hot sand as one does who is terribly tired and has at last found a restful place to sleep.

Far, far behind another speck on the desert floor indicated the prone, almost lifeless figure of Sammy, the bodyguard.

Old Nate sighed.

"Now wouldn't yuh think," he muttered, "thet two smart jiggers like them woulda known better? Wouldn't yuh think so, though?"

He sighed again, picked up a pebble and lifted it at Lop-ears. "Git along with yuh, yuh good-fer-nothin' bag o' bones. We gotta reach them there mountains by sundown today, or else—" He chuckled, plodding contentedly along after the old burro.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1940

HEPBURN ANNOUNCES DEFICIT OF $4,500,000

Unanticipated Expenditures Due to Ontario's War Effort Given as Cause for Deficit

No Reference Made in Budget to New Taxation Excepting a Suggested Change in Corporation Tax Which Will Increase Revenue by $5,500,000 Annually

RELIEF COSTS DOWN

Premier Pledges Government to Policy of Strict Economy to Help Dominion in War Effort and Province Ready to Stake Last Man and Dollar to Remove War Threat

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Ontario was presented today with its first budget of the present war which helped swell to nearly $4,500,000 a deficit for the fiscal year ending next March 31.

It was the sixth provincial budget presented to the Ontario Legislature by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, who reported an increase of $24,482,239 in gross debt; pledged strict economy to help the Dominion in its war effort and declared the people of Ontario were prepared "to stake their last dollar and furnish the last man, if need be, so that the world may be rid of this constant threat of war."

Surplus Previously Estimated

The previous budget had estimated a surplus of $150,000 for the fiscal 12 months but unanticipated expenditures, some due to the war, had helped increase the deficit. No reference was made to new taxation except a suggested change in the corporation tax for which a bill already has been presented in the Legislature. The increased corporation tax, a temporary measure, was estimated to increase the treasury department revenue by more than $5,000,000 annually.

Relief Reduced 40 Per Cent.

Reduction of 40 per cent. in the estimate for direct relief was announced by the premier who also revealed that subsidies to municipalities would be reduced by one-half mill. The subsidy, increased ½ mill last year to 1½ mills, will be set back to one mill.

Savings in various departments were outlined by Mr. Hepburn who said the province would not "embark on any program of new capital expenditures whatsoever, even though such expenditures could be justified on sound economic grounds."

It was the government's intention, he said, "to leave the borrowing markets free and unhampered by provincial financing so that field may remain clear for the Dominion Government to finance the successful prosecution of the war."

With this economy planned, the premier, who also holds the portfolio of provincial treasurer, budgeted for an estimated surplus of more than $350,000 for the new fiscal year ending March 31, 1941. Ordinary revenue for the coming 12 months was estimated at $89,051,209 with ordinary expenditure at $88,694,970.

Revenue Decreased

The revenue estimated for the coming year was more than $9,000,000 less than the $98,456,000 for the closing fiscal year (10 months actual and two months estimated). Budgeted expenditure for the coming year was shown at $88,694,970, compared with the current year's budgeted expenditure of $102,900,929, a decrease of $14,205,959.

"Far be it from me," said the premier, "to paint any dark picture. I realize, as do we all, that we are in the second phase of the Great War. There is no need to emphasize this point today, but, realizing the responsibility that rests upon Canada, a responsibility that must be shared largely by this province, it is the considered opinion of the government that Ontario must give leadership to the rest of the Dominion.

"This richest, most prosperous, most progressive part of the Dominion must not betray any faltering in this time of testing. No greater disservice could be rendered the Dominion or the cause of the Allies than that this province should forecast a deficit either in ordinary or capital accounts; and no greater disservice could be rendered than by a government attempting to deceive itself by allowing estimates of revenue to be founded on optimism.

Budget for Surplus

"We must be sure, and I believe that we are certain—as certain as human foresight makes it possible—that we budget for a surplus for the year on which we are about

Success of Convoy System Credited to Secret Device

Enables Warships to Detect U-Boats After They Dive

4 SUNK IN 6 DAYS

London, Feb. 15. — (CP)—The Admiralty's scoreboard today showed four German submarines sent to the bottom in the past six days, raising the unofficial total close to 50 since the start of the war.

An Admiralty statement last night announced the destruction of two. One British destroyer was credited with sinking a pair last Friday.

Of the new ones, the Admiralty said vengeance came within a half hour against an undersea raider which torpedoed the 12,306-ton freighter Sultan Star, bound for Great Brtiain with 6,000 tons of frozen Argentine beef.

The other was sent down in the North Sea where two other large British merchant ships, the 10,191-ton Gretafield and the 8,501-ton British Triumph, both tankers, were sunk recently.

Five of the British Triumph's crew of 47 and 13 of the Gretafield's crew were missing. The first capsized and sank after an explosion in the North Sea and the other went down in flames off the Northern coast of Scotland.

Seventy-two survivors of the Sultan Star landed today at a west coast port. Captain W. H. Bevan said only one man was lost and two injured.

German Vessel Captured

The success of Britain's convoy system against submarine attack is credited largely to the navy's secret "asdic" device which enables warships to stalk undersea raiders with depth bombs even after they dive—once they have been spotted.

One German merchantman and two neutrals also were new victims of war at sea.

A French communique announced yesterday that "a German cargo boat has been captured and taken into a French port." No other details were disclosed.

Reuters News Agency reported from Oslo that the Danish ship Martin Goldschmidt, 1,095-tons, was sunk off the west Scottish coast and that only five of her crew of 20 had been picked up.

The owners of the 1,503-ton Norwegian steamship Elka were said to have been notified that the ship was sunk on a voyage from Spain to Norway and that a submarine had landed two survivors at Wilhelmshaven, Germany. The Elka carrying a crew of 18, had been unreported since Jan. 26.

Britain May Speed Up Issuance Of Permits for Service in Finland

London, Feb. 15—(CP) — The Government was authoritatively reported today to be considering special government machinery to expedite the issuance of permits in large quantities for the departure of British volunteers to fight for Finland.

Men of any age may volunteer, this source reported, since no age limit has been set thus far. Previously it had been understood that only men over 27 or otherwise outside Britain's conscription calls could volunteer.

The matter of setting up an organization to speed issuance of exit permits on a mass basis was said to be 'receiving the attention of the appropriate departments'

THIRTY AIRFIELDS BEING SURVEYED IN THE PROVINCE

Work is Being Done Under the Department of Highways, Premier Tells House

10 FIELDS COMPLETED

Mr. Hepburn Announces Building of New Road Into Camp Borden in Early Spring

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Ontario's Department of Highways is co-operating with the Dominion Government in surveying thirty airfields, presumably in connection with the Empire Air Training Scheme, Premier Hepburn announced in his budget speech in the legislature today.

The premier said that immediately after war was declared the department approached the Federal Department of Militia and Defence at Ottawa, undertaking to carry out any work that might be required to further Canada's war effort.

He went on:

"About the middle of October we were approached with a view to determining as to the possibility of our staff making surveys of airfields that would be used in connection with those already in existence. We undertook that we would carry on any work they had in mind.

Started Surveys At Once.

"Under date of Nov. 8, representatives of the Department of Transport advised us that several locations had been decided upon and asked that we commence surveys at once. We immediately did so. From that time up to the present various locations have been decided until now thirty fields in all have been considered. Ten plans covering these fields have been turned over to Ottawa. Sixteen additional are over 50 per cent complete, with four fields yet to do.

"To facilitate the speedy return of the plans to Ottawa, our staff is working night and day that they

PRIMARY LOAD IN N. ONTARIO UP 16 PER CENT.

Development of Northern Mining Industry Responsible for the Increase

50 COMPANIES SERVED

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP).—Development of the northern mining industry was responsible for an increase of 16 per cent in the primary load of the Northern Ontario properties held and operated by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Premier Hepburn reported today in his budget speech.

He said some 50 mining and large industrial properties, together with fifteen townsites and permanent communities, are served by the commission.

During the fiscal year to end Mar. 31, more than 13,000 customers were added to existing districts, necessitating construction of 2,300 miles of primary lines. Special attention was also given to serving new rural territory in Northern Ontario.

The premier said the commission's 18,000 miles of rural lines serve about 113,000 customers, more than half of which represent service to individual farms.

For the coming year it was estimated 1,900 miles of primary line will be constructed at an expenditure of about $4,500,000 Of this amount the province will contribute $2,250,000 In addition to the grant-in-aid, the province has advanced to the Hydro Commission $320,000 to enable it to make loans to farmers for wiring premises and obtaining electrical epuipment.

KING BORIS ASKS BOGDAN PHILOFF TO FORM CABINET

Bulgarian Cabinet Reorganized for Eighth Time in Less Than Four Years

BITTER FIGHT

Sofia, Feb. 15 —(AP)— The cabinet of Premier George Kiosseivanoff resigned today. King Boris immediately called Professor Bogdan Philoff, Minister of Education, to form a new Bulgarian government.

Kiosseivanoff, a close friend of the king, had reorganised his cabinet for the eighth time in less than four years only last Oct. 23, retaining the portfolios of premier and foreign minister himself.

Philoff, also a close friend of King Boris, is a professor of archeology and president of the Bulgarian Academy of Sciences.

Political circles expected Kiosseivanoff's foreign ministry portfolio to go to Ivan Popoff, Bulgarian minister of Yugoslavia.

This was interpreted as meaning that the king desires further to intensify Bulgaria's close relations with Belgrade.

Kiosseivanoff's resignation was caused by a bitter fight with Ivan Bogranoff, Minister of Agriculture, reportedly over relations with Soviet Russia.

Bogranoff, a popular member of the Kiosseivanoff government, was said to favor further tightening of relations with Moscow.

GOV'T HOLDS TO FIXED POLICY ON FARM LOANS

Not One Mortgagor Under Settlers Loan Act Dispossessed in 1939

LIQUIDATE LOANS

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP).—There is no justification for "a mistaken impression that the government's policy with regard to settlers' loans is driving people off their Northern Ontario lands to become relief charges in the city," Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today in his budget address to the Ontario legislature.

Not one mortgagor under the Settlers' Loan Act was dispossessed in 1939, and very few, if any, before that, said Mr. Hepburn. It was true that 700 farms were repossessed in the north in the year ended Mar. 31 last, but none was repossessed unless abandoned, or unless the government had been asked to accept a quit claim deed, or unless the government had been compelled to pay insurance premiums and taxes.

"It has been the fixed policy of the Agricultural Development Board that no mortgagor is to be dispossessed unless he has fallen into arrears of interest for at least four years," he said. "As long as the interest has been paid, we have given the mortgagors every consideration as to principal sums overdue and unpaid."

Liquidation of loans made by the Agricultural Development Board in all parts of Ontario from 1922 to 1935 was continuing. At Jan. 31 there was principal of $39,584,144.77, interest of $2,348,592.04, and sundries of $28,327.68 outstanding. Total collections in the ten months ending Jan. 31 were $3,469,109.89.

UNIVERSITY GRANTS LEFT UNTOUCHED

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—University grants were untouched in the estimates tabled today by Premier Mitchell Hepburn along with his budget address. In the fiscal year to begin April 1, Toronto University will receive $1,746,000, Queen's University, Kingston $250,000 and the University of Western Ontario, London, $235,000.

50,000 LINE ROUTE AS TWEEDMUIR'S CORTEGE PASSES

After Funeral Service Body Was Sent to Montreal Where it Was Cremated

SENT OVERSEAS

Time and Manner of Transporting Ashes Will Not be Disclosed at Present

Ottawa, Feb. 15—(CP)—The capital returned slowly today to wartime problems and election issues after honoring Lord Tweedsmuir in one of the most impressive state funeral in the history of Canada.

The funeral ceremonies ended when the body was placed on a Montreal-bound train yesterday after service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church but official mourning will continue until Sunday. Flags on all government buildings remain at half-staff and officers of the armed forces wear black arm bands until then.

In Montreal, where the Governor-General died Sunday from the effects of a fall at his official residence here, the body was cremated and the ashes will be sent overseas. Owing to the wartime secrecy concerning all ships and their movements the time and manner of the transporting of the ashes will not be disclosed for the present.

Not since the King, whom Lord Tweedsmuir represented in Canada, and the Queen visited the national capital have such crowds been seen on the streets.

Occasion of Sorrow

Then it was an occasion of joy under the bright skies of May, yesterday it was an occasion of sorrow and the weather was cloudy. The raw chill in the air, however, failed to keep indoors the men and women who knew Lord Tweedsmuir as a fellow-townsmon as well muir as a fellow-townsman as well rank.

The sizable crowd which appeared to witness removal of the body from the Senate Chamber where it lay in state to the church swelled to monster proportions, when the body was removed from the church to the station.

It was an impressive diplay as the funeral procession moved down Wellington Street before the huge throng, the flag-draped casket born on a gun-carriage, pulled by blue-clad ratings of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer reserve. Uniformed officers and men of the army air force and Royal Canadian Mounted Police marched behind to the notes of a band and the subdued rumble of muffled drums.

Son Represents Family

Lieut. Alastair Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir's youngest son, represented the family and marched alone behind the coffin, clad in the service uniform of a cavalry officer The official mourners, Sir Lyman Duff, Chief Justice and acting Governor-General, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Conservative Leader Manion, members of the cabinet and representatives of foreign and commonwealth governments rode in automobiles.

Japan 'Stops Winning War'; Invaders, Men, Material Running Out

(By Clarke Lee Associated Press Staff Writer).

Shanghai, Feb. 15 (AP)—Foreign military sources said today they saw unmistakeable signs that Japan had reached the limit of her ability to win and hold Chinese territory.

In their view, the Japanese "have stopped winning the war without achieving their objectives" and are incapable of striking an effective blow to China's resistance.

The invaders' men and materials are beginning to wear out, they said, and their strength is so scattered over thousands of miles of China that their punch has lost its snap.

These statements were made in comment on the Japanese proclamation yesterday urging General Chiang Kai-Shek to surrender. Foreign sources regarded it as a significant admission that Japan already has made her maximum military effort.

"Confession of Weakness" Say Chinese

The part of the proclamation declaring that Japan will not extend her operations further "but will await your offensive," they interpreted also as a confession that the invaders were unable to carry out their oft-repeated vow "to crush Chiang even if we have to pursue him to Tibet."

Take 2 Japan stops seede-j

Through the proclamation and Japanese Premier Mitsumasa Yonai's statement to the Diet, it appeared to foreign observers that Japan would be more willing to deal with Chiang if a face-saving formula could be found.

One expert, who has followed the fighting since the first shots in July, 1937, declared that "from a strictly military point of view the Japanese have almost shot their bolt and have stopped winning the war."

The Chinese have not started to win but, in his opinion, their chances of ultimate victory are improving.

Heavy Japanese Losses

From the standpoint of power, the Japanese are estimated to have lost about 1,000,000 men killed, wounded and invalided so far and still to have another 1,000,000 spread out on active duty protecting occupied territory south of China's Great Wall.

Wherever the Jaapnese weaken garrisons, the Chinese attack. The Japanese, therefore, cannot take large forces from any important area for concentration against new objectives. In addition, they lack the reservoir of manpower at home to use for a drive inland.

Class of Reserves, Second in 24 Hrs., Called to Colors

Furious Fighting on Karelian Isthmus Reported With Russian Dead Placed at 3,500—Helsingfors Bombed by 27 Red Planes

NO BOMBS DROPPED

Finns Report Capture of Tanks at Muolojaevri, Which Are Turned Around and Used Against Russian Hordes — Some Parts of Mannerheim Line Abandoned

Helsingfors, Feb. 15 — (AP) — Finland called another class of reserves to the colors—the second in 24 hours — today as furious fighting on the Karelian Isthmus was reported to have cost the invading Red army 3,500 dead.

The class of 1896—men 43 and 44 — was called up for service against the Russians who sent a squadron of 27 planes droning over Helsinfors today to cause the capital's first air raid alarm in weeks. No bombs were dropped, however.

A Finnish communique described heavy fighting on the Isthmus front, now in its 15th day of battle, and declared Russian attacks had been repulsed on numerous sectors.

1,000 Killed in One Attack

A thousand Russians were killed while attacking over the ice at Muolojaervi and 2,500 in a series of blows near Taipale, at the eastern end of the isthmus front where the two armies have been engaged for 15 days.

In one of the attacks the Finns said they captured two tanks, turned them around and put them into immediate service against the Russians.

Thirteen Russian tanks were said to have been wrecked in the attack.

On the Summa sector, where the Russians have concentrated some of their heaviest blows against the battered Mannerheim line, continued enemy attacks were repelled as were other assaults northeast of Lake Ladoga, the communique said.

Admit Some Withdrawals

In the 10-mile strip of inferno at Summa, the Finns acknowledged that relentless Russian assaults, now in their 15th day, had caused abandonment of some of the Mannerheim line's advance fortifications.

(A Soviet army communique today reported capture of 16 more Finnish positions, bringing to 100 the number claimed within a week. The Finns are falling back with heavy losses, the communique claimed.)

The main line still holds, the Finns reported, and everywhere else, on the Isthmus, north of Lake Ladoga and on Finlands waistline front, the Finnish story was one of success.

The Russians bought the Summa outposts at high prices in men,

BRITAIN OFFERS PROTECTION OF CONVOY SYSTEM

Offer Will Apply to Any Neutral Ship Passing Through Contraband Controls

London, Feb. 15—(CP)—Great Britain was said authoritatively today to be prepared to offer convoy protection to all neutral shipping passing through her contraband controls whether bound for a British port or elsewhere in view of Germany's latest pronouncements on sea warfare.

Authorized spokesmen in Berlin yesterday and the day before claimed that German submarines had a legal right to sink any neutral ship bound for a British contraband control port, whether voluntarily or under British compulsion.

This was said to apply to any ship, including United States vessels, touching a British port such as Gibraltar.

A spokesman asserted Britain views the German claim of the right to sink any neutral ship even though proceeding between neutral ports if it goes through the Allied contraband control as "a boast of the illegal policy of sea warfare which Germany already is pursuing."

This spokesman said the British view is that it is unlawful to sink such a merchant vessel at any time Britain is not surprised by the Berlin announcements, he said since "we have known that the Germans have been sinking the merchantships of neutrals indiscriminately without either regard for the lives of the men aboard or destination."

Homemakers' Forum Concludes Two-day Session in City

The Hydro Homemakers' Forum conducted for two afternoons in the Capitol Theatre with splendid success by Miss Ruth Crawford and Miss Edithemma Muir, home economists of the H.E.P.C., was concluded yesterday. Sponsored by the Belleville Utilities the Forum was held under the auspices of Christ Church Guild.

Many of the ladies who filled the main part of the theatre brought their Red Cross knitting with them, and busy fingers didn't lose a stitch while the homemakers followed with eager attention the demonstrations of the afternoon.

The session opened at two o'clock and at two-thirty a two minutes' silence was observed. The gathering stood in reverent silence with bowed heads in tribute to the memory of a beloved figure, whose passing an Empire mourns, the late Lord Tweedsmuir.

Yesterday afternoon devoted to cookery and homemaking problems of every kind, stressed a well-cooker meal and the advantages of this type of utensil were ably explained by Miss Crawford. In this manner were cooked, mock duck, buttered carrots, spice onions and cup custards.

Miss Crawford emphasized the importance of the diet in maintaining the health program of preventive medicine. To preserve the value of minerals and vitamins in vegetables, over-cooking, must be avoided. For this reason electric cookery, requiring very little water in the preparation of vegetables is so healthful. The homemaker in the vital position she occupies in maintaining family health should be a specialist in the matter of planning meals with the utmost food value. This is just one of the fields in which, the homemaker must specialize.

Inexpensive cuts of meat are made most appetizing with the long, slow cooking which this method utilizes. Miss Crawford carefully explained each step in preparation of the afternoon's menu. The speaker also drew the attention of the audience to the advantages of storing foods in an electrical refrigerator. Meats are stored at a temperature below 50 degrees, the point at which bacteria, yeast mould cannot develop. In fact foods can be stored indefinitely without spoiling.

Proper methods of using an electric washing machine and the principles of successful laundering were also discussed.

Miss Muir continued the afternoon's discussion and demonstrated the versatility of the electric mixer which, with additional equipment can also chop foods and even peel potatoes. Miss Muir prepared a delectable Devil's Food Cake. She advocated the use of a tray in keeping ingredient containers together. She reminded her hearers to remove eggs and butter, to be used in baking, from the refrigerator twenty minutes before using.

Fine points in successful broiling of steaks were explained. The speaker advocated placing the broiler about three inches from the top element which is on full broiling of an inch steak requires twelve minutes for each side. A complete dinner, with par-boiled vegetables placed in the pan and apples for baking on the broiler rack when the steak is turned, was suggested.

Miss Muir gave an interesting talk on the use of an electric ironer and concluded her address with a discussion of proper lighting for proper quality and quantity of light for work and recreation. Today the diffuser type of lamp is advocated for safeguarding eyesight.

At the conclusion of the class Miss Muir expressed appreciation for the welcome extended to her and her colleague. Miss Crawford explained the newly organized Hydro Homemakers Club through which the homemakers of Ontario can learn the latest trends in cookery and can exchange recipes and household hints. Miss Crawford thanked her hearers for the gracious way in which she had been received on her first visit to Belleville.

Mr. E. Smith, on behalf of Mrs. F. B. Sprung, president of the Christ Church Guild conveyed sincere appreciation for the splendid support given the school, to the manager and staff of the Capitol Theatre and to Miss Crawford and Miss Muir who so efficiently conducted the Forum. Mr. Lake, eastern representative of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, was presented yesterday and it was announced that any requests for Home Service would be answered.

Prizes for attendance were drawn at the conclusion of the afternoon's program and were won as follows:

Belleville Presbytery of Bay Of Quinte Conference Meets

The February meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the Bay of Quinte Conference United Church of Canada was held on February 13 in the Holloway Street United Church. Two sessions were held, one in forenoon and one in afternoon and were ably presided over by chairman of Presbytery, Rev. H. B. Herrington, of Thomasburg, and secretary Rev. Jas. E. Beckel, of Stirling.

The morning session consisted of devotions, roll call and minutes of last Presbytery also the report of the executive meetings since last Presbytery meeting. In reading the communications Secretary Rev. J. E. Beckel read the names of the following ministers requesting pastoral changes: Rev's. H. F. Sanders of Consecon, H. B. Herrington of Thomasburg, W. J. Davis of Bancroft, G. A. Puttenham of Adolphustown, W. J. Scott of Stirling, R. T. Richards of Napanee, (Dr. Richards has received a call to a London church), Geo. A. Adamson of Cressy.

Rev. A. Armstrong is asking to be superannuated for one year on account of ill health.

Statistical Report

In the statistical report it was revealed that this Presbytery consists of 58 pastoral charges, 181 preaching places, 47 ministers in active work, 10 superannuated, 1 principal of college, 1 editor, 3 student ministers, 3 lay ministers, 2,079 members of official boards, 690 elders, 962 stewards, 9,824 families, 15,017 members.

Laymen's Hour

Mr. Percy Holland of Madoc, chairman of the Laymen's Association, had charge of the Laymen's Hour, conducting a brief but inspiring worship service using that inspiring hymn "The Churches One Foundation, Is Jesus Christ Her Lord," and prayer by Rev. A. J. Wilson.

Rev. P. L. Jull, B.A., special Speaker

The 110 delegates in session were fortunate in having as their guest speaker the Rev. P. L. Jull, B.A., president of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Mr. Jull chose as his subject "Christianity."

In outlining his subject the speaker stated that his talk was not gleaned from books but from his own experience.

He used that coupling of words that the recent war has brought to light, "black out" to emphasize his remarks. "Black out," he said, "seems to mean nothing to us." He thought on the contrary "we were in danger of making light of it. "Black out" is symbolical of security and safety of our homes. Mr. Jull was under the impression that perhaps we were in a spiritual depression and if the Christian church has no message who then has?

He challenged his fellow ministers not to waste time on the non-essentials. This is our day and if we fail, what then?

In closing his remarks the speaker sought to impress the delegates with the seriousness of the present age. What is needed is not so much college education but a personal knowledge of God. The church should not use the term foreign missions, but world missions would be much better. All need to give confidence to the youth of the land and make the church news as interesting as war news and sport news or any other news, the speaker concluded. The announcements for the afternoon session and benediction closed the forenoon session.

The W.A. of the Holloway St. Church served dinner to the delegates in the basement of the church.

Miss N. Semmens Addresses Afternoon Session

The religious education committee hour had for their special speaker, Miss Netannis Semmens, of the Religious Educational Council of Toronto. Her theme was "Christian Education in Times Like These."

Possessed of a winning personality and having a wide experience in her chosen work as worker among the youth of this province, Miss Semmens gave a most heart-searching address that no doubt will result in much reflection.

Value of Child Life Stressed

The value of child life was stressed by the speaker. She deplored the fact that in a large per centage of church services there were not many children present. "This," she said, "was depriving the children of a fellowship which they needed. We must never overlook the fact that children are never too young to teach."

Miss Semmens urged the ministers to be careful of stories told in church service to children. And never to say "and now we will sing the children's hymn."

Children should be taught to contribute to the funds of the church. The Christmas spirit was spoiled by too much Santa Claus talk. It created too much selfishness. Let the home take care of the Santa Claus parade.

Miss Semmens was under the impression some time ago that the children were not given as much attention as they desired in the public worship and to settle the argument she attended 36 different churches in Toronto and in only one of these churches was there any prayer offered especially for children. In many churches, stated the speaker, there is too much carelessness in selecting Sunday school teachers.

A vote of appreciation was extended to Miss Semmens and Mr. Jull for the messages they brought to the presbytery gathering.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in receiving reports from the various committees and discussing some important phases of the work. An invitation to hold the May meeting at Bloomfield was accepted.

After a hymn responsive reading was presented by all, then followed Scripture readings by Miss Florence Glover. A hymn and prayer in unison after which Mrs. G. Perkins opened by prayer, Mrs. J. Dafoe for all in service, Mrs. E. E. Ketcheson for all sufferers, such as oppressed Jews and Mrs. G. Johnson for national help. After a hymn was sung, a short devotional address was given by Mrs. Wm. Summers and a Biblical recitation "What is in the Hand" by Miss Florence Glover. Dedication of the offering followed. A hymn was sung. A short prayer by the leader followed. NAVAL COMMITTEE APPROVES PLAN

Two-Year Expansion Program Costing $655,000,000 Discussed Fully

Washington, Feb. 15—(AP)—The House of Representatives Naval Committee gave final, unanimous approval to a two-year $655,000,000 fleet expansion program less than 24 hours after another house committee slashed $111,699,009 from President Roosevelt's budget for the naby yesterday.

The expansion program, specifically approved by the president, would permit the navy to construct 21 additional combat ships and 22 auxiliary vessels in the next two years.

The committee received a letter from Secretary Charles Edison asserting the navy would have preferred the original 3-year $1,300,000,000 expansion it recommended "because it would permit better planning and because of the deterrent effect of such a program presented to the world at this time."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being vegetable soup to start and liver and onions in pop's honor to finish, and ma said, I think I'll take another plate of this nice hot soup, I had the most gassly shock downtown today and I'm really not over it yet.

What happened for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, A woman grabbed my handbag. I've heard of such things and I've read about them in the papers, but never supposed they actually happened to me. I tell you it was gassly, it was like dreaming something impossible and waking up to find it's solid reality do you know what I mean, Willyum? she said.

Yes, it must be worse than waking up to find you're still dreaming, pop said. Do you mean to say you were carrying your bag at the time? he said, and ma said, It was under my arm to give me more room for my packages. She was a terrible looking woman with an awful red face that you wouldn't put anything past. It just proves that there's no truth in all this talk about invironment, I mean a woman like that is simply born with wicked instincts, because a face like that must be inherited. It was only a matter of chance that I really had her bag, ma said.

You what, yee gods? pop said, and ma said, The idea of a woman stupid enough to lay her bag down on a counter right next to another one as much like it as P's, except for the color. And she not only grabbed, she screamed. She shouted Here's your bag, that's my bag and it has a hundred dollers in it, and I said to her, Well madam, if this is your bag I'm sure you're quite welcome to it without the necessitty of boasting about the contents, I said to her, and with that I took my own bag and quickly walked off on my laurels without giving her time for another word, ma said.

It's a womens world, I'll take more liver and onions, pop said.

Wich he did.

Habitual Constipation Is a Danger Signal

Constipation is always bad enough . . . it drags you down; makes you feel headachy, dull, irritable. But when constipation becomes a habit, look out! It usually tends to get worse and worse. Frequent resort to harsh purgatives and other emergency treatments only makes you the more dependent on them.

The one sensible way to treat constipation is to get at the cause. Common constipation often results from not getting enough of the kind of food that will help form a "bulky" mass in the intestine.

If this is your case, you should eat Kellogg's All-Bran. It only takes a small amount—an ounce a day is enough for most people—but you must have it regularly and drink plenty of water. Get a package at your grocer's today and just see what a world of difference it makes when you keep "regular." Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

FINNISH ATHLETE DIES FOR COUNTRY

In the inspiring fight the Finnish people are putting up for their freedom, all classes are bearing their share of the blows of war. Those who have always admired the sportsmanship and the athletic attainments of the Finns have learned with sorrow of the death in action of Gunnar Hockert who had made new world records in the 3,000 and 5,000 metre runs in the 1936 Olympics at Berlin. He fell in the fighting in the Karelian Isthmus. Earlier in this brief war Birger Wasenius, speedskater, lost his life leading a ski patrol.

This hardy race has produced great athletes and when war has come the entire nation becomes a nation of heroes and heroines. The spirit of the people is the same in its origin, its love for freedom and for healthy development of mind and body.

HITLER'S 'SHOPWORN MAGIC'

"When the godlike leader of a 'fanatically' united people, 'possessed of discipline and insight' has to be smuggled before a picked audience, with a heavy guard around him and the spotlight turned on the listeners, in order to speak his mind, it is evident the godhead must be wearing very thin. There is no doubt that the oratory is." This was the remark of the New York Herald Tribune on Hitler's recent public appearance and on the 'magic' of his words which has worn out abroad and is beginning to wear out at home.

The Herald Tribune says that Mr . Chamberlain's reply to Hitler's recent speech was the simple remark that there was no necessity for concealing the time or the place of Mr. Chamberlain's address. But that was in England and Hitler is in Germany.

CLAIMS PART OF GERMANS ARE GERMANIZED SLAVS

Racial purity of the Nazis is not so much heard of now. However a famous anthropologist from the University of London, Dr. Malinowski, speaking in Montreal the other night, declared that Aryanism did not exist and that "a large slice of the German population is just Germanized Slav, and the one type of blood they are really deficient in is Germanic."

Knowing that the eastern part of Germany is land that has been a battleground for many centuries, and that some of the Slavic branches were in that territory in the course of history it is not so difficult to accept the opinion of Dr. B. Malinowski.

He also claims that the German people have been the victims of magic which he calls "a form of crystallized optimism promising success in circumstances of stress and strain," which they were in the mood to accept. He said that the German middle-class people were very dull, easily led but no good at leading themselves and that "the desire was for some sort of mystical help." That help came—it was Hitler, who, the professor said, was a "nasty piece of work, all said and done."

Nazi magic is built like all other magic on myths. Hitler gripped the Germans with the theory of Germany as a divine state, incarnated in the divinity of himself. The professor explains that collapse of the Treaty of Versailles, the Rhineland occupation, the Rhineland iscite, were all quite natural but they were changed by Nazi propaganda into "miracles." The worst result was the complete indoctrinization of a whole people with a set of absurdities for the purpose of preparedness for war, aggression and actual warfare.

The scientist expressed the view that the mistake of the Versailles treaty was that the Germans had not been punished in a dramatic sort of way and asserted that "we should see to it that the same mistake is not made this time. I do not mean the whole German people, but I would like to see the Nazi leaders 'liquidated' preferably by their own people."

HOW A PERSONALITY ENDURES

The neighboring Republic this week marked the anniversary of the birth of one who occupies one of the most prominent niches in the hall of fame of the world. Abraham Lincoln, a man of unique personality with a human touch and sympathy as wide as the world, called upon in one of the greatest crisis in American history, performed his duty and fell a martyr to his devotion. A man who would have avoided war had there been any possibility passed through the war years at a task he did not like and was not ever privileged to see the return of peace he and all Americans so much sought.

In this man was a heart of pity. In the casualties of the Civil War he died many times a thousand deaths, suffered in spirit wounds with the many thousands of soldiers on either side who fought, bled and passed through ordeals. How that noble heart bled in those four awful years he lived through as the armies of the North and South battled for supremacy is told in innumerable stories of his love for the individual soldier or parent of either side as well as for the state.

The heart of the world must be right for it has accepted Lincoln as a type. He is known throughout the world except in one spot or so where today elimination of the individual soul seems to be aim of the dictator, who fails to recognize that where there is no love for the individual, there can be no corporate soul or national soul, that where the individual is made to suffer through the blindness and ambition of an individual or a group, there can be nothing but mass degradation.

Lincoln stands as one of the world's great brothers, the man who places brotherhood before all, because it means all.

Lincoln had the gift of expressing himself in words and thoughts but chiefly in actions. These three expressions revealed the man. It is no wonder that there are so many stories, pictures and statues of Lincoln, the great emancipator, all pointing to men the love of this man for his brother man.

Physical Defects and Standing in Class at School

If your youngster is not going as well at school as you know or think he should, it would be well to take another look at the health report, if the school he attends has an examining physician and nurse. Aside from defects of hearing and even of eyesight, there are a number of conditions that keep youngsters back in their school work.

Dr. A. C. Woofter, Parkersburg, in West Virginia Medical Journal, records his study of the relation of diseases and defects to the standing in studies of 460 unselected students near the same age in the primary schools. The grades were obtained for the previous term and classed accordingly as excellent, good, fair and poor. A separate list was compiled showing the physical defects of each child.

It was found that excellent students were absent an average of two and one-half days while poor students lost twelve days during the term.

The number of excellent students with infected tonsils was 10 1-2 per cent., whereas there was over 30 per cent of the students with poor grades with infected tonsils.

In a group of 230 students with small defects—teeth, posture—there was 26 per cent more defects among the poor grade students than among those with excellent grades.

In the case of eye defects, there was 24 1-2 per cent among the excellent grade students and 40 per cent. among the poor grade.

Underweight (6 pounds less than the average for height) was found more often among the poor grade than among the excellent grade.

Among the students of the poor or failure group, from 50 to 75 per cent were found to have poor vision. Where the studens had normal vision about 17 per cent was among the excellent students and about 17 per cent among the poor grade, showing that eye defects interfere with the school standing.

Parents should study these figures and see that their children visit their dentist and physician regularly. It will mean not only better health but it should improve the child's standing in school and raise and maintain his morale. A youngster who stands well up in his class is going to be happier at school than if he stands toward the foot of his class.

Don't let any physical defect lower the school standing of your child.

Britain's Army Grows Steadily Following Plan

(This is one of a series of war commentaries by Sir Charles Gwynn, British soldier of many wars, commandant of the Camberly Staff College for four years prior to retirement in 1931)

x x x

Written for The Canadian Press by Major-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn.

x x x

London, Feb. 14 —(CP)— Since the outbreak of war, something in the neighborhood of half-a-million fully trained men have been added to Britain's fighting strength. And there are indications the stage has now been reached when the rate of expansion can be accelerated still further.

What follows is the story of the most systematic and most successful mobilization of her fighting man-power Great Britain has ever undertaken.

Up to the present, expansion has been going on steadily, but without any sign of the feverish activity of 1914. The reasons for that are not everywhere understood. The fact is that expansion is being carried out on a preconceived plan, based on the principles of quality mass-production, and not by "ad hoc" improvisation.

This is true not only of the processes which regulate intake of material but also of those that convert the raw human material into fighting men. It is the output of the finished article and not the intake of raw material which governs procedure.

Only Trained Men.

The governing principles followed are:

1. No man should be sent into the fighting line until he has been adequately trained, not merely in the manipulation of his weapons, but in how to make intelligent use of them.

2. Influx of raw material should be regulated so as to prevent congestion which might affect the steady flow of output.

These principles have been adopted because the immensity of the task undertaken is fully realized, and because bitter experience has convinced us it is both cruel nd wasteful to send men into the ring without having developed their fighting instincts and intelligence.

It would be the greatest mistake to suppose the deliberate procedure adopted is in any way due to the unexpected course the war has so far taken, or because Britain means to limit the extent of the effort she is prepared to make. The ull before the storm has merely enabled the nation to carry through without interruption a predetermined policy.

Nothing has so convinced Britain's enemy of her grim determination to see the struggle through, or has so encouraged her French Allies as her departure from the amateur expedients of 1914. I do not mean to slight the wonderful voluntary effort then made, or the spirit shown. But I am acutely aware of the consequences of the improvization then unavoidable; consequences which increasingly made themselves felt as the war dragged on.

Results of Plan.

It may be asked what has been achieved by the system adopted this time.

Firstly, existing units, including those formed shortly before the outbreak of war, have been mobilized and are either at their war stations or training in this country.

Secondly, all existing training establishments have been kept in full operation, dealing with raw materials for officers and men. Thirdly new plant for dealing with an increased influx of raw material has been laid down, and much of it has reached production stage.

The greatest difficulty which had to be faced was the provision of new training plant. Until this was ready, only the first annual class of the Militia and a limited number of volunteers could be dealt with. Before the end of the year, however, the first Militia class of about 200,000 men had completed its training. Moreover, an increased number of training camps are coming into operation.

The number of volunteers accepted by now probably exceeds 100,000. So it has come about that around 500,000 well-trained men have been added to Britain's fighting strength since the outbreak of war.

Eleventh Hour List Printing Freshens Roll

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 14 —(CP)— Canadians go to the polls March 26 under a thoroughly revamped elections act, the result of two years' work by the House of Commons elections committee.

The biggest change in the new act is abandonment of the "permanent" voters' list inaugurated with questionable success for the 1935 election. The previous system of creating a new list by enumeration for each election is being restored.

There are also many changes regarding the printing and distribution of the voters' lists, limitation of the use of radio, the banning of written pledges by candidates, immediate payment of election staffs (where they formerly might wait months), prohibition of disorderly conduct at election meetings and premature publication of results.

The much-argued question of election expenses, the feature of extensive and heated debates in the House of Commons and in committee, remains in the same position it has occupied for 20 years.

The purpose behind the permanent voters' list introduced by R. B. Bennett, then prime minister, was to permit the calling of an election within four weeks. But the system was discarded after one trial, although somewhat similar systems are in use in Britain and Australia.

The 1935 list was established in October, 1934. After revision, the roster of almost 6,000,000 names was printed at the government printing bureau at Ottawa. Then in April, May and June of 1935, the "annual revision" took place, but the initiative for changes rested on the elector.

The work developed upon volunteer workers generally and changes reached as high as 15,000 in some ridings, confirming the view of Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, that city voters' lists become practically obsolete in six months.

New and Plentiful.

So the list this time will be strictly fresh, collected by enumerators during the seventh week (Feb. 5-10) before polling day under the terms of the act. It must be printed by the 26th day before polling day, and copies distributed to every elector in cities of more than 25,000, and posted in other areas. Sittings for revision of the preliminary list will be held in urban ridings on the 14th, 13th, and 12th days before the election and in rural ridings on the 13th day.

After that revision, a city voter has no further chance of having his name included. In the country an "open list" will apply, a qualified voter whose name was omitted being able to vote on taking an oath, supported by the oath of another elector of the same subdivision. The 1935 act closed the rural list, although it had been open since 1920.

The enumeration this time also includes all those who will reach 21 years of age on or before polling day, whereas previously they had to be 21 at the time of enumeration. Those becoming 21 after that and before election day could apply for revision of the list.

Reversion to the former system of establishing the list is expected to be cheaper than the so-called permanent list. The 1930 election cost about $2,200,000 while the 1935 election, with 5,918,207 names on the list, cost approximately $4,000,000. This current election, with an additional 500,000 voters enumerated, will cost between $2,500,000 and $3,000,000.

In the past employers have been asked to give workers two hours, apart from their lunch hour, in which to vote. Now under section 45 of the new act, a penalty is provided for an employer failing to comply.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Isolated successes of lone German bombers in sinking ships along the British coast are not necessarily an indication of correspondingly greater success in massed raids by scores or hundreds of bombers.

British air defences are being steadily keyed to meet intensive bombing, the kind of aerial lightning war Nazi leaders are known to have in mind. An important element in the defence preparations is the maintenance of secrecy as to the location of anti-aircraft batteries and squadrons of fighter aircraft.

These secrets are not being given away by unloosing the full power of anti-aircraft defence on every lone German bomber which may come within range. In fact one of the purposes of the German command in sending lone bombers over almost daily may well be to draw the fire of anti-aircraft guns and lure British fighting planes into the air, thus disclosing their location.

Then when mass raids begin the enemy would attempt to surprise and destroy the air stations of British fighter squadrons before the fighters could get into the air, or at least the enemy raids would be directed in such a fashion as to avoid the more heavily defended localities.

Germany's present more or less guerilla tactics in the air never can achieve the large objective believed to be set before the German air force. That objective is the fighting power of the British armed forces and the fighting spirit of the British people.

The Train's in

The languor of winter settles down over our little country town these afternoons The elevators rear up into the immensity of sky, shouldering the wind; the houses huddle into banks of snow; the trees along the creek are shivering naked. Far away in each direction the fields stretch in undulating masses of snow. Behind the town loom the Riding Mountain hills, winter-blue, touching heavy greyish clouds. Quietness hangs over us like a mist, broken only by the creak of wood sleighs coming down from the mountain, heavily burdened; or the roar of an occasional car going through on the highway, or the whine of a distant saw-machine. Few people are on the street.

But at three o'clock the town stirs. The drayman flies by on his squat sled, heading for the station. Soon the postal clerk follows, pipe in mouth, laden with mail bags. Teams gather near the post office, the horses champing impatiently. Men along the street look expectantly southward.

First a faint web of smoke is seen. Then a low rumble is heard, growing louder. The whistle blows. Loud and shrill it sounds above the roar of the engine and echoes over the fields, shattering the winter calm. The locomotive looms nearer, passes the mile corner, swings around the bluff into the town, its wheels whining along the steel, smoke spewing from its stack, twisting, climbing, whirling white and cloudy into the cold air. With a shriek of powerful brakes it stops.

The train's in! The town is galvanized into life. There is hustle and bustle at the station, men shouting, lifting, running. Then the postman, the dray and the travellers head for Main street. Now there is a crowd in front of the post office. People gravitate from their houses along the street towards it. Soon the school vans draw up, a long caravan of covered sleighs, puffing smoke. Children drop out, join the crowd in the office, eager for mail.

But already, with a clang of bells and a shriek of the whistle, the train has departed, and is now girdling the bluish hills, bearing life and excitement to other towns. The people wend homeward; the vans and sleighs set out over snowy trails. Quiet settles once more.

Oh, the whistle of trains! It is a sound as western as the honk of wild geese, as the lusty paean of frogs in spring sloughs. For the history of the West is the history of the railroad. It existed before these towns began. In the wake of the ox-trains the mighty god thundered, holding the destinies of the towns in iron fingers. Sometimes it cut them off altogether, destroyed them; sometimes it made them powerful beyond their wildest dreams. It was the brightener of life. Year by year it built up a mighty western nation, carrying in eager hordes of immigrants, implements, supplies, carrying out the produce of a teeming land.

Day and night, summer and winter, through fields of blowing grain, over snow-swept plains, the trains roar in and out of prairie towns. And still, as in historic days, they are the bringers of life.—Margaret Morton in the Winnipeg Tribune.

Dial Telephones for Stirling District; New Exchange Office Being Built

Dial Telephone System for Stirling District; Building Operations for New Exchange Office Now Under Way

Stirling—The latest addition to the modern facilities enjoyed by the citizens of Stirling will be a new dial telephone system. Building operations for the new exchange were set in motion Monday morning by the Sullivan Construction Co., of Arnprior, Ontario. The new telephone building which will house the very latest type of equipment, will be located on the south side of Charlotte Street, directly opposite the Stirling public school.

Plans for the conversion of Stirling's telephone system to the new dial method was officially announced on Nov. 15th., 1939, by District Manager G. W. Proctor of the Bell Telephone Co. When the building operations started, are completed, the new equipment will be installed by the Northern Electric Co. The necessary changes of phones in the homes and business places of subscribers will be carried out by the working crews of the Bell Telephone Co. sometime during the early summer. When the new system is completed, local calls on the dial for "ong distance," "information," "trouble," etc., etc., which require the service of an operator, will be handled through the Belleville exchange.

No Local Operaters Necessary

According to Mr. Proctor, the dial system is a method whereby a subscriber may gain contact with any other phone in his exchange area by automatic means, thus doing away with the present crank winding method and also the services of local operators. Instead the subscriber will dial each figure in the desired number and by the transmission of electric impulses to the telephone exchange the number will be secured. The new system is one especially adapted for use in places the size of Stirling.

Personal Touch With Local Staff Will End

Modern equipment in all phases of life create changes that are, for a time difficult to become accustomed to. During the years gone by a capable staff of operators under the supervision of Mrs. Annie Bailey has served the people of Stirling district to a value beyond estimation. They have served as more than telephone operators, a direct messenger for police and fire calls, reporters of storm, theft, and accident, faithfully remaining at the switchboard day and night. Hurried calls for medical aid have often traced local doctors through a maize of wires to summon him, often in cases of life and death. Many times "the girls" acting upon their own good judgment have gone far more than the second mile in the performance of their duties and received little credit for their kindness which in many cases has meant much to subscribers. They look for no praise for their efforts and the public have no way of saying thanks. This personal touch will be lacking under the new mechanical system and the subscriber will have to act entirely for himself. Routine information as "Where will I find George so and so....? See if you can get him for me, will ya....? It's important." We usually do get the man we want perhaps complete a big deal thanks to the "operator" whom we forgot to thank at the time. There will be no more operators to blame for wrong numbers. "Dial right and get it right."

So with the passing of the local telephone operator from the Stirling telephone system, over five hundred telephone users of the district will lose contact with a group of friends who knew them very well and upon whom they depended a great deal. A group of workers who did a real job and were always willing to do more than their regular duty.

Another Move Forward for Stirling

New dial systems are being installed throughout the Province wherever the system in use becomes inadequate and Stirling is very fortunate to be numbered among the first of the smaller centres to be thus classified. The new telephone building and system will be another step forward for the village of Stirling in the march of progress that has given it the lead over many other towns its size in the province.

Largely through the efforts of the wide awake councillors and other town officials Stirling has moved rapidly forward in securing many modern facilities possessed by few small towns. A few years ago a new street lighting system was installed, dispensing entirely with overhead wires in the business section. The Telephone Co. also restrung their cable to make the main street entirely free from unsightly overhead wiring. This achievement gives the business section a neatness of appearance not found elsewhere. Paved streets and an efficient water works system are also among the recent completed projects. Fire fighting equipment of the latest type is another of its possession. Along with the Community Service Building one of the best in the province with Restroom Banquet Hall and modern community owned theatre seating 489 people, as well as fine schools, a first class library and rink.

One of the large factors in its rapid progress is the genuine spirit of co-operation and loyalty of all its citizens. No project is left unfinished. Public servants in the employ of the corporation are endowed with a public spirit which makes them willing at all times to do more than they are paid for.

An outstanding example in this respect is Frank Sprentall, local engineer and superintendent of the Stirling Hydro system, who also superintends the Stirling Waterworks Department and manages the community owned theatre. In addition to this the greater part of his spare time is spent in putting new and original ideas for the town's future benefit into execution. Through the unstinted effort of such citizens and workers the village of Stirling and its citizens enjoy conveniences usually only shared by those living in the cities of the Province.

60 Organizations

A quick glance at the manner in which the people organize in an effort to work together for the common good of all reveals no less than sixty organized groups in the village without a very completed study. Sixty organized groups in a town with a population of less than a thousand people.

MUST STOP SMOKING AND GO TO CHURCH FOR NEXT 5 YEARS

Philadelphia, Feb. 15 — (AP)—Five high school boys who pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile for a "joy ride" were ordered to stop smoking and to go to church every Sunday for the next five years. If they slip, Judge Harry McDevitt told them as he suspended sentences yesterday, they go to jail—for a maximum of five years each.

Tweed

Tweed—The executive of Tweed Horticultural Society met in the Council Chambers. The president, Mrs. Howard Countryman, presided. After the reading of the minutes a number of important items of business were dealth with.

For the past six or eight years the society has sponsored a Bird Box Competition among the boys and girls of public school age. In the year 1939 the boys exhibited 55 bird boxes. In 1936, the banner year, they exhibited 84 boxes. The society decided to again sponsor this contest which is open to all the boys and girls of Tweed public and Separate schools. Four types of boxes will be included in the prize list: Martin house, Robin shelter, Wren house, Bluebird or Tree Swallow house. The competition will be divided into two classes, one for grades 7 and 8 and the other for all grades below grade 7. Mrs. F. O. Arber and Mrs. P. T. Bowlby were appointed to canvass for prize money.

The prize list for the Horticultural Flower Show was revised and extended to include certain additional classes of house plants. The date of the Flower Show was selected and it will be held in Memorial Park Pavilion on Friday, August 23.

A committee was appointed to canvass for membership in the society. It is the hope of the directors that the membership of 56 for 1939 will be at least equalled if not surpassed as the society is doing a splendid work and feels the need of the loyal support of the citizens of Tweed. Premiums to members will be boxes of plants, a year's subscription to a horticultural journal, tuberous begonias or fall bulbs.

The president was named as the delegate to the Ontario Horticultural Convention held in the King Edward Hotel in Toronto on Thursday and Friday, February 29 and March 1. An open meeting will be held at a later date, probably on March 13, to receive the delegate's report and discuss matters of general interest to flower lovers.

Mrs. A. Varty, Mrs. D. W. Sills and Miss O. Meiklejohn were appointed a committee to make arrangements for the open meeting.

The Young People of the United Church enjoyed their annual sleigh-ride on Monday night. They are very grateful to Mr. Sim McCrea and Mr. Dewey Kleinsteuber who provided the teams and sleighs for the outing. Following the sleigh-ride they assembled to the number of forty at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Sim McCrea, where their youthful appetites were appeased by a substantial lunch. A vote of thanks was offered by Miss Reta Palliser and Tom Moffat, Jr.

Rev. H. L. Morrison, pastor of Tweed United Church and Mr. W. S. Gordon were in Belleville on Tuesday in attendance at the February meeting of the Belleville Presbytery.

FIGHT COLDS
by helping nature build up your cold-fighting resistance

If you suffer one cold right after another, here's sensational news! Mrs. Elizabeth Vickery writes: "I used to catch colds very easily. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helped to strengthen me just splendidly. I ate better, had more stamina, and was troubled very little with colds."

This great medicine, formulated by a practicing physician, helps combat colds this way: (1) It stimulates the appetite. (2) It promotes flow of gastric juices. Thus you eat more; your digestion improves; your body gets greater nourishment which helps nature build up your cold-fighting resistance.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery been that over 30,000,000 bottles have already been used. Proof of its remarkable benefits. Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist today. Don't suffer unnecessarily from colds.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"He Cometh Not", She Said

Dear Miss Fairfax,

For several months I went with a bachelor some year older than I. We were very happy and most congenial. Then suddenly without a word of explanation he stopped coming and I can't imagine what happened.

In the beginning of our acquaintance he told me he was not a marrying man, but I feel sure that he loves me, and I cannot understand his cruelty in dropping me without a word. His financial position is such that he could well afford to marry. I feel a bit sensitive about calling him again. I did call him once and left a message, which required an answer, but he has not replied.

Would it be beneath my dignity to call him again?

Marianne

When a man tells a girl he is not the marrying kind, he wants her to understand that his intentions are not serious, even if he should happen to fall in love with her. There may be innumerable reasons why he cannot marry, and when a girl accepts the attentions of one who says he's non-marrying, it's up to her.

In this case, evidently lack of money was not the deterent, or responsibilities in the parental home. It's strange to think of a normal man deliberately foregoing marriage. The incorrigible bachelor has been known to fall, good and hard, when the right type of girl appears. Perhaps there may be some past chapter in this man's life which prevents him from marrying. One such case was that of a very early marriage, where the wife became insane at the birth of her first child. The husband passed as a bachelor, and never divorced his unfortunate wife.

Then again, the non-marrying man returns and proposes. But don't waste opportunities waiting for that miracle. Have a good time and console yourself with that grand old adage about there being as good fish in the sea.

Wants to Acknowledge Gifts the Easiest Way

Dear Miss Fairfax,

I had thirty-two presents after my little daughter, my first-born arrived. It will be an awful nuisance for me to acknowledge these presents by a hand-written note, and I've seen the cutest cards in the stationers where you just write in the type of gift, and the thanks are engraved, and you have only to sign your name. Will it be proper for me to send out these cards? It would save a lot of work and trouble, but I want to do the correct thing.

Young Mother.

If you want to do the correct thing you will have to pass up the cards and write notes. I know it's a nuisance to be well-bred and conduct one's self like that almost extinct produce a lady. But my dear there are occasions when ladies have to take the harder way, and that is when they acknowledge presents, Christmas, wedding, baby, birthday, even funeral flowers, with a handwritten note. Get out your best, unlined, cream-colored stationery, and say how pleased you were. If you avoid poisonous colors, you will get very decent stationery at the Five-and-Ten. Write with pen and ink.

She's Been More Than a Mother to Him

Dear Miss Fairfax,

A year ago my husband and I separated, after being married for seven years. We have no children. He has one child by his first wife, and now he has gone back to his first wife, and is taking her out.

I met him once since then and we had a talk, and I go to his home occasionally. He never mentioned anything about coming back to me. I'm very much in love with him, and never go out with anyone else. If I do go to see some of my friends, he gossips about me. I've been more than a mother to him, having waited on him and even watched him flirt with other women.

I will never agree to a divorce, so he can re-marry his first wife. If anything were to happen to him, I know I never could care for another. Please help me solve my problem.

Patient Wife

This lady's letter makes every woman, contemplating marriage to a divorced man, stop, look and listen. The second wife adores him, says she has been a mother to him, waited on him and even watched him flirt with other women —still he isn't able to hold his affection.

Whether she wants to hold him by chains, which the law recognizes but which he has already broken, is up to her. It's just another one of those cases where one endures love and not very patiently, and the other pours it out as a libation. If I were in the second wife's place, I'd let him go. The little god with the bow and arrow becomes restive under chains. But that is up to the lady who signs herself "Patient Wife".

Child Training

About half the letters I get from parents ask for advice on child training. Every now and then some woman writes to complain that these columns don't deal with child training often enough. Well, frankly, I dislike to be preaching to people all the time about how they should bring up their children. Proper training of a child is an intangible problem, hard to come to grips with unless you have concrete cases before you.

Diseases are less difficult to deal with, specific symptoms indicate a definite disease for which there is a particular treatment. But in child training every case is different.

By long odds, I would say that the disobedient child is the most common problem that parents face. In ninety nine cases out of a hundred it is the parents themselves who are to blame for such a child. But the trouble is that even if you point this out to them, they won't see it, or admit it.

Training a child is a full-time, twenty-four hour a day job during their most formative years. Yet a great many parents consider that if they work at it for about an hour a day, they are doing their duty.

Few parents start soon enough to train a baby's habits. The time to start is the day he and his mother come home from the hospital.

A baby even a few days old finds that if he cries, someone will pick him up. So he cries. This is one of the first training problems the new parent has to face.

"Oh, he's too young yet to start and train", the fond young mother may say. And there she makes her first mistake. I know it is hard to sit and listen to a child cry and cry. But when you convince yourself that he's warm and dry and that there's nothing wrong with the child and brave it out once or twice, the crying will stop. As soon as he finds that such needless crying has no effect, then he gives it up. Every time he breaks down his mother's resistance, then he is that much harder to train when the show-down does come—if ever.

Very early in life the child must learn that he must obey his parents. He must learn that there are certain things he must not do. Or if he does do these things, that life in the home is unpleasant for him as well as the others.

Parents must be firm with a child when it comes to these rules that he musn't break. It doesn't do to enforce a rule severely one day, and then a few days later, wink at some breach of it. The parent must be consistent.

Now, I'm not of the old "spare the rod and spoil the child" school of thought. Or, if I am, the word "rod" is only symbolic. I think that a child's behaviour and his attitude toward his parents and his home depends a lot on how he is punished for his misdemeanours. If punishments are very severe, then you are almost certain to sow seeds of resentment in his heart. I have known children who developed a persecution complex because they felt they were punished too severely or unjustly.

So, when a child is punished, you should take great pains to have him see just why he is punished. I'm not strong for corporal punishment either except in exceptional cases. For instance, the Dionne Quintuplets have never had a spanking, and I hope they never will. Our severest punishment for any infraction of discipline by a Quin is segregation from the others in a "quiet room". A few minutes there, alone, works wonders in straightening out the offender.

Ears on the Beauty Scene

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

WAILED A beauty supplicant: "When you have ears as big as jumbo oysters, what can you do about them? Don't laugh. It is my one great, unbearable affliction".

Well, she could have the plastic surgeon carve them down, but that would be taking drastic measures. A simple plan would be to drape the side locks over them. True, the turned-back coiffure prevails, but there is no law that says a girl must wear her hair on the up and up.

A pretty ear is a beauty asset which can be improved by a little cosmetic decorating. Powder should be used lightly when the other features are getting their quota of the fragrant fluff-stuff. The lobes must be touched with rouge of a faint rose tint.

Heavy ear rings will cause lobes to become flabby and extended. If you wear them, use wire supports that rest over the top of the ear. When washing your sound receivers, dry the inner channel carefully and gently with a soft towel, When going in swimming, stuff them with cotton.

The child who has outstanding ears should have them taped down at night. Much can be done in infancy to get them to confirm to a more pleasing outline.

LYNNE CARVER . . trim ears are included among her beauty assets.

Ordinary baking soda is recommended for dissolving black points that appear in the pores of the skin.

Dissolve one teaspoonful of soda in a cup of warm water. Apply with cotton after the face has been washed at night, let it dry on. The soda combines with the fatty substance in the pores and loosens it.

After six or seven nightly treatments, give the skin a dry cleaning. Pour a teaspoonful of eau de cologne on a moistened wash cloth, go over the surface of the skin lightly. Keep the cloth away from the eyes; the alcoholic content may make them smart.

AN EXCELLENT opportunity for advancing affairs with steady application and hard work is predicted for this day. But an effort should be made not to run counter to employers or superiors. It might be advisable to deal with large corporations, diplomatic or political bodies, or fraternal groups. There will be many opportunities for stabilizing affairs by attention to detail and by co-operating with those in high places. Old as well as new projects should thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may attain a very successful and prosperous year if they will attend to affairs at hand with steadiness and fidelity. They have their best chance with corporations, diplomatic, political or fraternal organizations. Such close application will bring progress to all affairs, old and new.

A child born on this day may be loyal, faithful and warm-hearted, as well as steady, serious and contemplative, making a success of its interests.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Keep Your Cold Germs to Yourself!

You don't like your sniffles, snuffles, sneezes and coughs. Neither does anyone else! So, if you have a "catching" germs, it's only decent and fair of you to do everything you can to keep the enemy as much as possible on the home field.

You feel miserable. Therefore, if you have the slightest human consideration for other people, you'll take every precaution not to pass on your misery to other people, members of your family, friends, strangers. And you and I know that there are many precautions you can take, if you'll be selfless enough to think about them.

One thing you needn't do, and shouldn't do, is to take your germs to a party. Any hostess, no matter how important her party, would infinitely prefer to have you break an engagement rather than to have you come to the party and broadcast your germs into the air that she and her other guests have to breathe. Politeness forbids her or her guests saying what they are thinking of your complete lack of consideration. In your misguided point of view you may regard yourself a martyr in coming to the party with your sniffles and sneezing, but those who have to sit near you and talk with you will consider you downright thoughtless of other people's comfort and health.

The wisest thing to do is to stay quarantined in our room. If we can't do this—and it is a luxury in which most of us in this demandingly busy world can't indulge—at least we can avoid crowds as much as possible. We can avoid breathing into another person's face. And, if we have to travel in crowded cars, we can try to be careful how we stand, so as to keep our sniffles as much as possible to ourselves. We can fortify ourselves with a generous supply of fresh handkerchiefs, or tissue handkerchiefs. And when we sneeze or cough, we must take particular care to cover our mouth.

Letters From the Troops

Picton—The following is a copy of a letter received from Pte. Charles Crossley of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now at Aldershot. It was received here by Philip Dodds:

"Just a few lines in reply to your letter which I received yesterday (Jan. 11) and since then it has been around quite a lot as all the boys were glad to read it. I will say thanks for the boys and myself for the Picton Gazette which we were very, very glad indeed to receive. If you could have seen the boys swarm around when I walked in with those papers you would have died laughing. In half a minute they were divided up as far as they would go and each one was just like a letter from home.

You said in your letter it was rather soon to write after we had left the home town but it is never too soon to hear from anyone in Picton. No doubt you do miss the boys back home but I'm telling you that when I came back from leave we were all feeling pretty homesick. It did not seem to strike until we hit camp but things are beginning to brighten up again, we are settling down to our daily drills in fine style and if you thought the Regiment was smart while in Picton you ought to see them now. We have the R.C.R.'s in the next barracks and before we are through we will beat them all hollow. The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is going to be second to none in this man's army for everybody is pulling together.

For the boys and myself, thanks to everybody back home for the manner in which we entrained. It could not possibly have been a better send-off.

When you estimated the crowd at 15 or 20 thousand, I don't believe you were very far out for it seemed like everybody was in town that night. It felt grand to think the people thought so much of us.

The train trip from Picton to Halifax was just a little lengthy and we were glad to get off. We immediately went on board. Everyone was wondering when we would sail but we lay in harbor for two days before moving out. That was a trip I shall never forget as long as I live—seven troopships, fifteen destroyers and four battleships—it all resembled a great armada. I felt just as safe as if I had been at home in bed. Nothing happened until we got to the north coast of Ireland when we were all called on deck about five o'clock for boat drill. Then we learned that a U-boat was following us. We had to stand by for about an hour. Then we got the all-clear signal.

Everything went fine until about five-thirty the following morning. Then it happened. The boat shook from stem to stern. We thought we had been hit. Up on deck we found what it was all about. The U-boat had trailed us all night long and thought it would take a pot shot at us. Instead, one of our destroyer friends took a pot shot at him and there was no more U-boat.

Malcolm Kirby is a permanent fatigue man now, in the men's dining hall, along with several others.

The weather here is very damp and naturally the boys feel it. We feel the cold worse here than if we had been home this winter, but for myself I think that the longer we stay we will get accustomed to it and it won't bother us much."

'No Chance Today of Making Tyrants of Germany and Russia Accept Peace Founded on Justice' — Blum

Paris, Feb. 15—(AP) — German artillery fire in the Bitche area on the western front was reported yesterday to have drawn return fire from French batteries.

The German fire was localized and military sources said it started without any immediate apparent reason.

A frontier raid by about 50 Germans previously was reported repulsed by fire from French automatic weapons.

Leon Blum, former Socialist premier, wrote in his newspaper Wednesday that a "real peace" never could be considered premature.

However, Blum wrote in Le Populaire, "There is not the slightest chance today of making the tyrants of Germany and Russia" accept a peace founded on "justice and international morality with guarantees against aggression."

Italians Puzzled Over Presence Of Allied Army in the Near East

Rome, Feb. 15—(AP)—Italy's supreme defence council met yesterday for the seventh day and diplomatic circles considered it likely the lengthy discussions were concerned with Italy's position in the event of hostilities in the Near East.

Newspaper dispatches sought explanations for the arrival of Australian and New Zealand forces in Egypt and Palestine.

"The so-called defensive aims of Weygand's army are not convincing", said a London dispatch to La Tribuna referring to General Maxime Weygand, the Allied commander in the Near East.

Several other Italian papers commented in a similar tenor.

"The serious disturbance of Mediterranean equilibrium caused by these troops is to be noted, and it is difficult to see how this disequilibrium can be reconciled with agreements made with Italy", La Tribuna said.

Britain was accused of "dying with the desire to complicate matters" and it was suggested one of her projects might concern "the advisability of seizing Russian oil supplies to cut them off from Russia and Germany."

Small Boys Wanted 'Mr. Eaton' or Nobody

The two diminutive Picton snow-shovellers, out to make "some change" for themselves after the week-end storm, were told to enquire for the head of the household or the owner of the store when applying for jobs.

Accordingly they strode into the local branch of the Canadian Department Stores, shovels over shoulders in the latest approved military fashion, and demanded to see "Mr. Eaton."

Referred to Mr. Wiseman, local manager, they once again demanded the presence of "Mr. Eaton." Told that no such gentleman was present in the store, they disdained the offer of the local manager to assist them in their problem, and shovels sticking out at a sharp angle from straightened shoulders, they executed a perfect military "about-turn" and marched from the store, to seek employment elsewhere.

Rev. C. Gardiner of Demorestville performed the ceremony. The bride looked charming in pale blue with a corsage of Sweet Peas and Maiden Hair Fern. The young couple were unattended.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Williams, mother of the groom, entertained at a dinner in honor of the bride and groom. The bride's mother, Mrs. Fred Whitehead, assisted in serving.

The dinner table was beautifully decorated with white having a large white bell over the table with white streamers. In the centre of the table was a large three-tier wedding cake with a miniature bride and groom for decoration. Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wannamaker and Phyllis of Demorestville, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whitehead and Jack, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Roluf and Carl, Mr. and Mrs. W. Horwood, Misses Martha Stewart, Vera MacDonald and Margaret Gilhooley of Point Anne. Allan Cup Winners of Last Two Years Leading Their Respective Groups at Present

Port Arthur Bear Cats and Trail Smoke Eaters Showing the Way

QUAKERS ON TOP

Saskatoon Hold One-Point Margin in Their Loop Over Moose Jaw

Winnipeg, Feb. 15 (CP)—Allan Cup winners of the last two years are in first place in their respective leagues today as Western Canada's senior hockey teams girded themselves for the stretch run to the play-offs. In three of the our major western senior leagues the greatest margin on a top-place is two points.

When the week started Port Arthur Bear Cats, champions of Canada last year, led by four points in the Thunder Bay senior league. Two successive draws between the other league members, Geraldton Gold Miners and Fort William Forts cut this lead to two points, with Miners in second place.

Smoke Eaters from Trail, B.C., Dominion titleholders in 1937-38 and winners of the world's amateur hockey crown in Europe last winter, have established a big margin over their opponents in the west Kootenay senior hockey league.

Evidence of Trail's superiority over the rest of the league is demonstrated most clearly by the fact Smoke Eaters have hammered in four goals for every tally made by opposing teams.

Saskatoon on Top

Saskatoon Quakers are on top of the Saskatchewan senior heap by a one-point margin over Moose Jaw Millers. Quakers took over first place early in the week, when they staged the league's greatest scoring splurge this season by whipping Millers 13-1.

The Quaker win came after Moose Jaw returned from a triumphant visit to Flin Flon, where they scored two victories over the cellar-dwelling Bombers. The Moose Jaw six is only one point ahead of Regina Vic-Aces who, in turn, have a four-point edge on Yorkton Terriers.

The Alberta senior loop has developed into a three-team race between Calgary, Lethbridge and Turner Valley. Calgary Bronks head the parade but Lethbridge Maple Leafs are just a point behind with a four-point advantage over Turner Valley Oilers.

Edmonton's fourth-place Eskimos are more than 10 points off the pace pressed closely by Olds and Drumheller.

KIWANIS HAWKS IN SECOND PLACE

Juvenile Squad Defeats Americans 3-1 in One of Best Games Played in Loop

Battling for the second place position in the Belleville Juvenile Association, Cliff Howie's Kiwanis-sponsored "Black Hawks" came from behind to down Bill Dennis' "Americans" 3 to 1 at the Hume Arena last evening. The Hawks' win cinched the second-placed slot for the victors and moved the losers into the third placed position ahead of the lowly Canadiens. The Maple Leafs cinched the league-leading position last week, but to determine a winner the league has ordered a group play-off.

Cook bagged the initial period goal to give the Americans a lead on a three-man combination play, but the Black Hawks came back to score three goals in the middle session, as Maracle scored twice, but the cleanest goal of the game was scored by Rosebush, after Billie Holway carried the length of the ice and set-up the winning play. There was no scoring in the final session. The summary was:

1st Period

Americans, Cook (Cronk, Kellar) 11.46
Penalties—None.

2nd Period

Black Hawks, Rosebush (Holway) 9.55
Black Hawks, Maracle (Rosebush) 16.55
Penalties—Davis.

FAST CONTEST

Cole and Edwards Best for Belleville With Cole High Scorer on Either Team

Coming from behind the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" not only downed the Belleville "Y" cagers 25 to 22, but moved into second place and a tie with the local quintette hoopsters in their scheduled O.B.A. fixture played at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night. Following last night's Air Force victory the Flyers and the Belleville "Y" squads are at even terms in the second placed slot of the district cage loop, but one game behind the league leading Kingston "Y" team.

Trailing by five points at the half-way mark, as the "Y" squad led 11 to 6, the Flyers rallied to score 19 points in the last session, while the local quintette could gain but eleven points. The Air Force scoring was quite equally divided, while, for Belleville Cole and Edwards accounted for the majority of points gained in one of the most sterling basketball games played during the current season.

BILL CARSE

Chicago Black Hawks

By Central Press Canadian

Bill Carse

A high scorer in two minor leagues was Bill Carse, one of the members of the cast that is instilling new life into Chicago Black Hawks under the able guidance of Paul Thompson this winter. Three seasons ago he played for Vancouver Lions and led the Pacific Coast League sharpshooters in both goals and total points with 29 of the former, 36 of the latter. Next season he shifted to Philadelphia Ramblers in the International-American loop, where he finished seventh in the scoring race improving on this last season to finish second behind Don Deacon. It was last season also that he saw his first N.H.L. action, a few games with Rangers, who owned him at the time, and for whom he also took part in the play-offs. The Hawks bought him from Rangers along with George Allen, before the present season got under way, and he's been providing fine service at both left wing and centre since. Mid-way through this season, he was joined by his brother, Bob, on the Chicago roster. Like the Colville brothers, the Carse brothers were born in Edmonton, Bill on May 29, 1914, christened William Alexander. Played junior hockey in his native city and turned pro there also, Edmonton having an entry in the Northwestern league in 1934-35, when Bill made the jump. Moved to Vancouver the following winter.

TOMORROW: — Charlie Sands, Canadiens.

PROMOTER MIKE ON RECEIVING END

Peterboro Defeats Airmen In First Game of Playoffs; Harding and Ellis are Injured

Peterborough Goalie Cut During Melee and Ellis Sustains Shoulder Injury —Score is 6-3

PLAY HERE FRIDAY

Flyers Forced to Send Skates Out to be Resharpened After First Period—Petes Score Four Without Reply

Gaining a four-goal lead in the initial frame the Peterboro Petes won 6 to 3 in their first of a best-three-in-five Intermediate O.H.A. series with the R.C.A.F. Flyers in Peterboro' last evening. The "airmen" rallied strongly in the last 40 minutes, however, to out-play and out-score the homesters, after being blanked in the initial session. The second game of the series will be played in Belleville on Frdiay night.

Last night's tusle was the fastest and most thrilling of the current hockey season seen in Peterboro, despite the fact several stoppages were necssary. Jim Ellis of the homesters and Goalie Harding both sustained injuries, as Harding was cut during a mellee around the net in the initial frame while Ellis suffered a torn shoulder ligament and will be out of the game for the remainder of the season. The game was further halted at the end of the initial frame when the Flyers were forced to send their skates out to be re-sharpened before they continued in the fray and out-played the Petes in the final 40 minutes.

Four Without Reply

The Petes scored four in the first period without a reply from the sticks of the Flyers as Bun Kingdon rapped home three goals within a space of two minutes and Starr added a fourth. However, after resharpening their skates, the Flyers returned to the fray in the middle session to have Cameron and Lemieux score for the visitors and bring the score closer, before the Petes whipped home another brace of counters. "Pops" Irwin scored the only counter registered in the last 20 minutes. Coach Holway introduced three new faces on the Flyers' line-up in Floyd, Hebert and Thompson, the latter having played senior hockey in Toronto.

In a best three-in-five series, the round continued at the Hume Arena on Friday night when it is rumoured that additional playing strength, especially along the forward line, will be provided the Flyers to assure the patrons of one of the most thrilling puck tussles of the current hockey season. The line-ups last night were:

Flyers — Goal, Gibson; defense, Cameron and Higgins; centre, Lemieux; wings, Floyd and Lightfoot; subs, Legris, Baldwin, Gathercol, Irwin, Thompson and Hebert.

Petes—Goal, Harding; defense, Ellis and Gardner; centre, Kingdon; wings, Heal and Tompkins; subs, F. Jopling, Crowe, Starr, Coughlin Burton and J. Jopling.

Referee—Mike Rodden, Toronto.

COCKER SPANIEL BEST IN SHOW

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Dog Judged Best Over Five Others at New York

New York, Feb. 15 (AP)—It ended on a note of utter exhaustion. The Westminster Kennel Club's purple and orange colors dropped from the balconies of Madison Square Garden. The dog-food salesmen had lost their fixed grins and courtly manner. The women sitting with their toy dogs at one end of the building had worn themselves out with three days of constant chatting.

Everybody, including the spectators, was dog-tired—except a bundle of haughty cockiness—a fine bodied, perfectly coated black cocker spaniel, Ch. My Own Brucie, the dog of the minute, winner of best in show at Westminster and best American-bred dogs in the show.

For Ch. Brucie, for whom 7,000 persons almost wore out their hands applauding, trying to influence Dr. Samuel Milbank into making the decision they hoped he would make—and did—had turned back a predicted foreign invasion of imported dogs that was threatening the supremacy of American pooches.

The smoothly-moving Brucie had the situation well in hand, and seemed to know it. His handler and owner, Herman E. Mellenthin of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., was a lot more nervous than Brucie.

Brucie, the day before, had won best in his group—the sporting dogs, and in the final judging he faced five other champions of their groups.

But the winner of the best in show at Morris and Essex last May, and a veteran campaigner of more than two years experience, could not be denied. Brucie, who almost won last year, was best—the crowd knew it, judge Milbank knew it—and there isn't a doubt that Brucie knew it, too.

DIAMOND METEORS

Eccentric, but Rube Waddell Was Great Southpaw Pitcher

By Central Press Canadian

Whenever veteran baseball fans get to talking about the many eccentric characters who have participated in the national game, someone always brings up the name of Waddell.

George Edward Waddell was unquestionably the oddest personality the major leagues ever saw—just as he unquestionably was one of the greatest left-handed pitchers of all time, probably the greatest.

The Rube's magnificent work on the mound for Connie Mack's Athletics is clouded by the fantastic legends of his pitching prowess. Most of these stories are myths, but they continue to be told and retold.

The Rube had the body of a giant, amazing pitching skill and speed, and the mind of a child. He simply could not take himself, baseball or anything else seriously. We take that back. Rube took his drinking seriously; in fact, he was one of the most serious drinkers of all times.

Waddell had an abiding passion for hard liquor and for a long period appeared immune to the effects of alcohol. He could pitch better with a hangover than could most of his contemporaries stone sober.

Example: Late in his major league career, when Rube was with the St. Louis Browns, he and the rest of the team were aboard a train en route from Cleveland to St. Louis. The next day the Browns were to play Detroit and the Tigers, were then one of the toughest teams in the league.

Rube Waddell

Rube was notified he was to pitch, so he said he would turn in early and get plenty of sleep. But he was fooling, for he took a full quart of bourbon into the berth and by morning had consumed every drop. That afternoon he shut out the Tigers with three scattered hits.

Waddell was born in Bradford, Pa., in 1876. Twenty-years later he was pitching semi-pro baseball around Pittsburgh. He was doing such sensational things as fanning 25 out of 27 batters when the Louisville, Ky., National league team signed him for the season of 1897.

Waddell's eccentricities, however, caused him to be shuttled back and forth between the major and the minor leagues until 1902, when he became a more-or-less permanent member of the Philadelphia Athletics. In six years, 1897-1901, Waddell had pitched for eight clubs—Louisville, Detroit, Columbus, O., Grand Rapids, Mich., Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Wis., Chicago and Los Angeles!

He was not exactly an unmixed blessing for Connie Mack. A consistent winner Rube was also highly unreliable. He often failed to appear at the ball park for a game. Connie always knew where to look for him—in a bar or along the banks of a stream fishing.

During an exhibition game, legend has it, Rube called in his outfielders at the start of the ninth inning and retired the opponents on strikes. It is also said that he begged Mack to call all the players off the field except himself, the catcher and the firstbaseman, but Connie refused.

One day, when Philadelphia was playing a double-header with the White Sox in Chicago, Mack approached Rube after Waddell had pitched and won the first game.

"We're short of starting pitchers, Rube," he said. "Think you could pitch the second game?"

Waddell who had just completed nine strenuous innings, said soberly: "Wait until I warm up a bit, Connie, and then I'll let you know."

The Rube was sold to the Browns in 1903. Soon he was in the minors again pitching for Newark, N.J., and Minneapolis. The season of 1913 saw him pitching for the Virginia Club of the Southern league. He was gaunt from a wasting disease and the fire had gone out of that miraculous arm.

On Feb. 15, 1914, Waddell wrote from a San Antonio, Tex. hospital bed to Manager Kid Taylor of the Virginia club: "I am sending back my contract unsigned. I'd like to play, but you know I can never get into shape again. I am very weak."

The Rube died April 1, 1914—just a month and a half later.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Even before they reach the stage of a face-off on the ice, the old Belleville-Kingston hockey feud was re-opened when the matter of referees was approached for the district junior O.H.A. play-offs, which opens in Kingston Friday. The "Quintes" contacted Coach Wally Elmer on the long distance telephone and assured him they were quite satisfied to have Joe Smith of Kingston and "Bouncer" Holway handle the games. Elmer said "nothing doing," so President Bill Cook then agreed to let Smith referee both games. "I won't have Smith in the rink," came back Elmer as he suggested Bill Steen or Bill Watt to which Secretary Jack Yanover of the local junior squad promptly said "not after seeing one of them work here." The verbal squabble lasted for some minutes without reaching an amicable solution, with the result that Billie Hewitt has been asked to send a neutral official to Kingston and also for the return game here Tuesday. If the teams battle as strenuously on the ice as the managements did over the matter of officials, well a sizzling series can be assured.

Whoever sharpened the Flyers skates the last time their blades were on the grindstone had better make themselves pretty scarce around the Hume Arena for the remainder of this week at least, simply because Toots Holway's charges are pretty sore about the whole thing. To be concise the Flyers took a 4 to 0 beating during the first period out in Peterboro last night simply because the Airmen couldn't even as much as stand on their skates. At the end of the frame the Flyers sent their skates out to be re-sharpened, which held up the pastime for fully 30 minutes, but from that point on the "birdmen" were the leading elements of the picture. Discounting the initial period, when the Flyers' skates were all cock-eyed, the "Airmen" actually outplayed the Petes in the second and third periods. Trailing 4-0, the Flyers played the Petes even in the middle session at two goals each and then went out and scored a goal in the last frame, while the Petes were held scoreless. The final score of 6-3 does not indicate the play, as eye-witnesses inform us that the Flyers were much the better team even when skating on poorly sharpened blades. Therefore don't muff Friday's return match here.

Pete Beach's Albert College senior interscholastic hockey club will have to wait some considerable time before they so much as get into the C.O.S.S.A. puck playdowns. It seems the secondary schools puck league out around the Trent Valley district ran into some unexpected trouble last week and over the week-end the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. group met in Stirling, following which the Marmora High School team withdrew from interscholastic hockey for this season, but not until player Gus Leonard, of Marmora High School had been declared ineligible to play interscholastic hockey for this season. Leonard played hockey for Marmora High last season, but quit school upon the completion of the Trent Valley Interscholastic hockey schedule. There is a hard and fast C.O.S.S.A. ruling against that kind of practice in secondary school sports, which says if a player leaves his school at the completion of a sports schedule and before the end of the school year, he cannot play that particular sport the following season. Therefore exit Mr. Leonard and Marmora High School pucksters.

As the picture stands now the Norwood and Campbellford High Schools will play home and home games, goals to count, as will Tweed and Stirling. The two ultimate winners will then play-off and this winner will meet Albert College in the C.O.S.A. semi-finals. That is if there's any ice available by the time the Trent Valley students conclude their puck picture.

Do you remember when oldest continuously-run race in North America, the King's Plate, run annually at Woodbine Park in Toronto, had its value increased to $3,000 36 years ago today by the Ontario Jockey Club? The Plate was first run in 1860, when Queen Victoria donated the plate to encourage Canadian racing. Present stake in the race is $10,000.

Apologizing for a statement made in his column, which was reprinted also in this column, Jimmy Powers of the New York Daily News says: "This writer regrets he was misinformed by an ordinarily reliable source when he stated the real reason for the Yankees being on the market is because the Amalgamated Bank of New York holds a $3,000,000 mortgage on the ball club, which was placed by Colonel Jake Ruppert. This is not so and we quote a statement from Mr. John G Rolph, vice-president of the Amalgamated Bank of New York City: 'There is not a scintilla of truth in your item.'"

For the past few years (too many as a matter of fact), the pitcher has taken some hard knocks, but apparently the organized baseball moguls are tending to tighten up the game and thereby create more even scores, if possible. Since 1919 the baseball pitcher has been confined to strict and rigid rules giving the batter all the edge, but recently the ball rules committee met in Belleair, Fla., and voted to allow the pitcher rear back and take a full step ahead as they deliver the ball to the batsman. Actually the moundsmen have been doing this self-same act for many years, only they weren't checking up on them. Something in the same manner as allowing the pitcher to stand with only one foot on the slab. Actually all the rules committee nave done is to legalize what has been going on for years and right under their noses.

The Picton juniors evened their group play-offs with Trenton as the former won 4-1 on their home ice last night, Trenton gaining the first decision 7-3 up the highway. The third and deciding game will be played in Trenton next week. Last night's victory was the second gained by the Prince Edward County kids over Trenton in eight games played this season.

Sport Spice — All roads lead to the Hume Arena tonight for the annual Quinte Skating Club "Winter Ice Show"....All night employees laboured decorating the local ice palace, as it never was decorated before, to add splendor to the inviting picture.. A 19 item program will be presented featuring Miss Shirley Halsted and Michael Kirby, Canadian figure skating champions.. Dizzy Dean has picked up his marbles and gone home, but never be afraid, 'Ol' Diz will be back before the National League opens....The Flyer cagers came from behind to beat the local "Y" 25 to 22 last night and in doing so advanced into a group tie with the Cole-Wickerson-Atking locals ....It is unfortunate that local sport fans fail to grasp the thrill of basketball, as the cage game is about the fastest team game known.

They need them these Cold Winter Mornings

● When you serve Cubs to your family for breakfast you are supplying them with extra nourishment in a form that is quickly and easily digested even by the tiny tots. Cubs are just little bundles of whole wheat mellowed with malt and toasted to a crisp, golden brown. Cubs retain the natural minerals, the bran, and even the coveted wheat germ of the whole grain. No wonder they are recommended for their food value. Ask your grocer for a package of Cubs today and give the family a treat.

CHAPTER 28

Stalking Rescue

It was the following afternoon before the three of them started out on that adventure that was to bring them to safety or recapture and imprisonment and possibly death. Although Rene and Claire had papers to prove their German citizenship and good standing as Nazis, they knew that any searching investigation must reveal that they were forged. Bill Cameron had no papers of identification at all, and could expect little mercy if he were captured, especially as he was wearing a Nazi uniform.

Cameron had spent the day reconnoitering the wooden area in which they had taken refuge, and found a fairly clear path, with few detours, which would lead them to a main road about two miles away.

At his suggestion they made the start at about three o'clock so that it would be dusk before they came out onto the road. It would be easier to make their way undetected in the dark, once they knew their way, than to travel by daylight.

Before starting, Claire had retired to the privacy of a clump of bushes and discarded her skirt in favor of the farm boy's trousers Cameron had stolen from the clothesline. They were not a bad fit although a little short in the legs. Bill said the coarse sacking that he would wind about her feet would bridge the gap between her ankles and the bottoms of her trousers, but he permitted her to wear her own oxfords until they reached the road. There was virtually no chance of discovery so long as they stayed in the shelter of the trees, and the going was too rough for the girl to bruise her feet unnecessarily.

Claire tucked the bottom of her
GALLEY THREE STORY .. ..K.
tight suit coat into the tops of the trousers, and then pulled the sweater Bill also had provided over it. She would need the extra warmth during the night.

Her hair, she pushed up tightly under the same brown felt stroller she had been wearing, after tearing the brim a little, removing the band and rubbing it in the dirt.

"Now, you look like a country boy," Cameron commented, admiringly as she presented herself for inspection. "The idea, of course, is for us not to attract any more attention than necessary, and dressed in a skirt and with two men in uniform, you certainly would have been noticed."

Rene was feeling much better and was happy at the thought that they finally were going to get some action.

"We'll be back in Paris in no time, now", he said, gaily, "and I'll be calling on my Maria."

The French aviator was still quite weak, however, from loss of blood and his wounded arm hung uselessly at his side. He insisted that he was strong enough to travel, and without a backward glance at the little clearing that had served them as a home for more than two days and nights, they set out.

Cameron half supported Rene, and Claire brought up the rear, as they slowly threaded their way through the trees. Making frequent stops for Rene to rest, and with Bill carrying him bodily over some of the worst places, they finally emerged from the trees and saw the road, winding down the slope before them. It was a broad, paved highway one of the many built in recent years for military purposes. Although it made walking much easier, it also increased their danger as they might at any moment encounter a patrol, or groups of artillery or marching men.

"The road is too dangerous to risk, I've decided," Cameron said as they sat, screened by bushes, resting after their final trek through a rough stretch of woods. "We'd better avoid the highway and keep to any cover we can find".

"But can we make it in time?" Rene asked.

"We can take it slowly and with frequent rests we should be in Emsburg well before daylight."

Rene nodded, and Cameron started to work providing Claire with proper foot covering. He decided, however, that her feet never would hold out with only the sacking to protect them from the rough going, and let her keep her slippers after knocking off the heels with a rock.

"They will protect your feet against stones and, properly covered with the sacking, they'll never be noticed", he said.

They waited in the shelter of the bushes until it was entirely dark and then took to the ditch below the high-banked road. Several times they found it necessary to climb up to the roadway listen carefully to see that no guards were posted, and scurry across small bridges which spanned creeks running down from the nearby hills.

Twice they flung themselves flat on the ground, their faces covered with their arms, when they heard troops on the road above, but both times they escaped detection. Resting frequently to save Rene's strength as much as possible, they arrived on the outskirts of Emsburg shortly after midnight.

"The flying field is on the north side of the town", Rene informed them. "I was here last summer as a tourist, although I really was looking over as much German war preparation as I was permitted to see. The field is well camouflaged and almost impossible to see from the air. The hangars are underground, and their tops are painted to resemble trees."

Under his guidance, they slowly circled the town and came to what they thought was the edge of the air field shortly after three o'clock. While Rene and Claire rested in the shelter of a small bridge, Cameron crept out to reconnoiter.

He was back in half an hour with the information that Rene had guided them to the exact spot. He could hear a number of planes being warmed up in the underground hangars, and evidently a flight of some sort was planned shortly.

"They won't take off until dawn, anyway," the Frenchman said. He and Bill went to one side and talked earnestly in low tones for some time, and when they come back Bill took Claire by the hand and helped her to her feet.

"Here's the plan, Claire", he explained in a whisper. "You and Rene are to hide in the ditch by the side of the field. If I'm lucky and get away with a plane, I'll taxi over, you'll both pile aboard, and away we'll go."

"But, Bill . . ." the girl said. Bill interrupted her.

"We haven't time to worry about whether I make it or not, Claire. It's our one chance—we've got to take it. I'm depending on you to take care of Rene. To help him get aboard. You'll have to move fast, as I'll have only a minute before I wheel the plane around. I don't dare attract attention until we get off the ground, and the whole success of our scheme depends on surprise. Do you understand, now?"

"Yes, Bill," she answered simply, and slipped into his arms. He kissed her tenderly.

"Better take my flying jacket, Bill," Rene reminded him. "Otherwise you'd attract attention. My papers are in the breast pocket if you are questioned."

Cameron slipped out of his tunic and helped Rene put it on. He pulled on the Frenchman's flying jacket and closed it tightly with Rene's muffler.

He turned to Claire again and kissed her. She clung to him fiercely for a moment, realizing that this might be the last time she would ever be able to hold him in her arms.

"Good-bye, my darling," she whispered and kissed him again on the lips. Then she pushed him gently away. "We'll be waiting for you. ."

"Well," Cameron said, gaily, "I'll be seeing you, folks".

He turned and crept away. Rene, taking Claire's hand, guided her to the edge of the field where they were to wait.

Picton—Due to the death of the Governor-General, the Sir Thomas Picton Chapter of the I.O.D.E. cancelled their tea which was to have been held recently, planning to hold it a week later.

Boy Scouts are starting a canvass in which they will gather papers and magazines. These will be sold and the proceeds used to purchase uniforms and other supplies.

I'm buying MORE fish—now that it's sold in "Cellophane"!

"Squeamish? Well... I'll admit it! But there's always been something about the look of fish that gets me down—I confess I just used to hate shopping at the fish counter. And there's nothing our family likes better than a good fish dinner,—that's why I'm so thankful that now I can buy fish in "Cellophane".

"Fillets, steaks and other delicious fish cuts—in "Cellophane" they look so clean and fresh it just makes shopping a pleasure. And do they taste good! Why, I do believe we're eating twice as much fish as we used to, now that I can get it put up in this sanitary convenient way.

"And fish in "Cellophane" makes my ordering easier. The fillets we like have their brand printed right on the package. All I have to do is to ask for fillets by brand name and I am sure of getting the kind I want."

Indigent Hospital Costs Show Gradual Increase Since 1935

Evidence that indigent hospitalization is on the increase in Hastings County is seen in figures released by county officials today. Accounts paid in 1939 amounted to $20,349.26 as compared to $14,684.10 in 1935. Figures for the interim show a gradual increase to the total of 1939.

These figures include amounts paid to Ontario hospitals and other institutions although in each instance the greater percentage has been paid to the Belleville General hospital.

TRENTON TEAMS SECURE DRAWS

Bantams Tie Campbellford 4-4 and Midgets Draw With Norwood 7-7

Trenton, Feb. 15 (Special)—While their big brothers were battling in Picton last night two local teams entertained out-of-town guests from Norwood and Campbellford. The game drew a fair sized crowd who backed their teams with more than the usual support and the cheering drowned anything heard at the arena before this season. Campbellford and Trenton Bantams fought to a 4-4 tie in the opening game and the contest was as even as the score indicates, the Trenton players matching stride for stride with their more experienced rivals. Pelquin starred for the visitors scoring his teams entire total while Desperance almost equaled the enemy winger's feat garnering three scores in the sixty minute treat. Fitzpatrick was credited with the other Trenton goal. The teams:

Campbellford, goal, Maxwell; defence, Begg and Jones; centre, Free; wings, Dunk and Pelquin; alternates, Nesbitt, Nobes, Johnston, Perrill, Shillington and McCombe.

Trenton, goal, LaMorre; defence, McQuade and Workman; centre, Lesperance; wings, Norsworthy and Fitzpatrick; alternates, Scott, Robertson, Smith, Menzies and Scarlett. Referee: Bernard York.

Campbellford 7; Trenton 7

The second game of the evening between Norwood and Midgets ended in a 7-7 draw but the locals were on top by three goals at the first of the pastime. Norwood was slow to organize but when the northern team was functioning properly the home squads lead soon diminished.

The teams:

Norwood, goal, Parcels; defence, Jamieson and Hamilton; centre Cole; wings, Rogers and Rusaw; alternates, Scriver, Nelson, Pollock and Hubbell.

Trenton, goal, Anderson; defence, Wickens and Davis; centre, Filion; wings, Richards and LaMorre; alternates, Perry, Langman, Allison, Rosenplot, Shoniker and Trumble. Reweree: R. Ennis of Norwood.

Three quick penalties in the first period handed out by Referee H. Payne cooled the boys off and the remainder of the session was fast and clean. Premier Reviews Work of Departments in Budget Address

Province Has Obligations Of $100,000,000 Falling Due In U. S. Funds in 4½ Years

If Present 11 Per Cent Premium on U.S. Money Continues, Cost in Interest Will be $13,562,456.60, States Premier Hepburn

BORROW IN CANADA

Believes Government Entitled to Full Credit for Not Borrowing Money Payable in U.S. Funds—Total Obligations in U.S. at Present Time is $300,000,000

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP).—Ontario has obligations of more than $100,000,000 falling due in United States funds in the next 4½ years, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said in his budget speech today.

"Assuming that the war continues up to Sept. 16, 1944, and that the present 11 per cent premium on exchange continues, it will be observed that the cost of New York Exchange to this province will be $13,562,456.60," he said.

"Of this sum $5,488,162.20 must be paid by Hydro customers, and the balance, some eight million dollars, is a dead weight upon the backs of the taxpayers of the province of Ontario.

"From this there is no escape, provided of course, that the province meets its obligations in the exact terms of the contract. This the government intends to do."

Might Be Exceeded.

The present 11 per cent exchange on United States funds might be exceeded, the premier warned. If the present rate obtained during the next fiscal year, cost to the province will be $1,842,914.88.

"In view of the difficulties that I have outlined, and the unhappy position in which Ontario is placed because of the folly of former governments in issuing debentures payable in United States funds, you must agree that this government is entitled to full credit for borrowing on conditions which require repayment in Canadian funds only," he said. "Never have we borrowed a dollar repayable in New York funds."

Total obligations in U.S. funds of the Province of Ontario, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway and the Niagara Parks Commission exceeded $300,000,000. The total of these, including interest and maturities ,and exchange at 11 per cent, from April 1, 1940, to Sept. 16, 1944, was $123,295,060.

Rate Much Higher.

Premier Hepburn pointed out that in the last war Sterling exchange in New York never dropped below $4.49, considerably above today's rate.

"At present it is said that the allies have available in the United States in dollar balances, readily saleable securities, and other resources over four and a half billion dollars. Beyond this, the British Empire and France have gold resources of close to six billion dollars and they have an annual gold production of three quarters of a billion dollars.

"Over the above these resources the allies cannot hope to make purchases in the United States of America, except from the building up of New York Exchange, and this will be brought about by favorable trade balances and through the medium of exchange control.

"Unless the present Neutrality Act which forbids borrowing by belligerent nations, is modified to permit of borrowing in the United States by Great Britain or her allies, purchases in the U.S.A. must be kept within the limits of the resources that I have enumerated above."

Hastings-Peterborough Riding Nominates Rorke Ferguson as Liberal Candidate in Election

Former Member Only One Proposed at Meeting Held at Marmora Wednesday

OFFICERS ELECTED

W. N. Gilroy of Coe Hill Elected President of Association — Addresses Given

Stirling, February 15—(Special)—A large representation from all parts of the Hastings-Peterboro constituency gathered for the annual meeting and election of officers for the Hastings-Peterboro Liberal Association. The only name set before the convention as nominee in the coming election was that of Rorke Ferguson and he was loudly acclaimed as he addressed the meeting. Under the chairmanship of Dr. D. Munro, vice-president, the election of officers was conducted with the following results—President, Mr. N. Gilroy, Coe Hill; 1st Vice President, Dr. D. Munro, Warsaw; 2nd Vice President, Ernest Sarles, Harold; 3rd Vice President, Wm. Shaw, Ivanhoe; 4th Vice President, J. McCaffery, Madoc. Assuming the duties of President, Mr. Gilroy called the meeting to order and as a fitting memorial to the passing of His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, a two minute silence was observed.

Candidate Addresses Meeting

Addressing the gathering after accepting the honour of being selected to again carry the banner of liberalism in Hastings-Peterboro, Mr. Ferguson briefly outlined the improved conditions in the Dominion since he was elected along with other members of the Mackenzie King government. "War was not entirely responsible for the forward movement of industry", said the speaker. "Foreign trade policies of the King administration had created markets for the natural wealth of our land. Pulp is now moving out of the northland, that previously was untouched resulting in a great reduction in nemployment."

War-Time Activity

"There has appeared some criticism of the present government's war-time program by those, who are not thoroughly acquainted with the true facts", he declared. "The period of war must certainly be given all our attention and effort and that is being done also those directing Canada's actions are looking far ahead to the post-war days and so building their commission and departments, that victory will not carry us into a post-war period of depression and an unnecessary burden of debt. That is why rigid medical examinations have been set up and the troops of Canada's first division are all Class A1 from the physicial standpoint. They all have the full quota of clothing and equipment, which exceeds by far the need of the soldier in the previous war, because of the mechanization of present war movements. Special staffs, assistants and commissions have to be set up to operate entirely new departments in war time and this has been done with as little delay as possible. Cases of slowness in payment of allowances are in some cases due to lack of proper application and each case must be dealt with thoroughly. The Allowance Board Office since the commencement of hostilities has become a post office within itself with a daily incoming mail of 550 letters. War is a big job for big men and Mackenzie King is the big man Canada needs to direct her war efforts", he declared in closing.

Joseph Duffus, Peterboro

Mr. Jos. Duffus of Peterboro, stated in his address, that three things must be given deepest thought in the coming election the prosecution of the war, the future of our trade treaties and the general economic improvement of the past five years under the King administration

Other prominent speakers of the afternoon included Thomas Carley, Peterboro, Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., of Belleville, who stated that Canada is facing serious days. ,Christianity and civilization is being challenged to its very depths and in order to meet that challenge we must all stand steadfast in a united front against this thing, that would swallow us up. . . . . .The present government have worked feverishly to get its war effort thoroughly working and those in charge are thoroughly acquainted with the problem and proper method of procedure. Let us not change horses in midstream."

munitions and machines, the Finns said. A communique related that "thousands of enemy fallen and dozens of wrecked tanks" were heaped before the Finnish lines.

Russian infantry still stormed over the Isthmus' shell-cratered fields of snow to be met in many cases with Finnish puukkos (hunting knives) in hand to hand combat.

Issues are Clear

Discussing the invasion, which began Nov. 30 after Finland refused Russian demands for territorial and military concessions, Finland's president Kyosti Kallio, the "first peasant," told news correspondents:

"Everyone knows we are outnumbered 50 to 1, but the issues at stake are clear. We appreciate the sympathy shown us in our struggle to be free—indeed, to live at all—but we really hope our cause might stir onlookers abroad to offer us material help.

"For, after all, we are defending interests common to all civilized peoples.

"If, however, such help does not arrive, we cannot change our course.

"Regardless of the overwhelming odds, we would still carry on our fight—if it must be alone.

"The alternative is extinction for our nation."

may be returned with the least possible delay. As a matter of fact, instructions have been issued to the surveys branch that surveys as requested from Ottawa be given preference over all other work.

"I might say for your information much of our contract work is standing idle until such time as the plans are ready. I feel certain that the plans as they are returned to Ottawa are as fine as can be produced within the time limit."

Mr. Hepburn added that construction of a road into Camp Borden, a Royal Canadian Air Force training centre, is under construction at a cost of $270,000 of which $105,000 is to be paid by the Federal Mines Department.

50,000 LINE ROUTE AS TWEEDMUIR'S

As the gun-carriage moved slowly along the street, a gun of the Royal Canadian Artillery boomed out 19 salutes at minute intervals. Such was Canada's farewell to the son of a Scottish manse who rose through his writings to world-wide fame and through his public service in peace and war to the highest position in Canada.

Rev. Alexander Ferguson gave a dramatic touch of the simple dignified funeral service when he recited the words of the dead man proclaiming his religious faith.

Message on Day of Funeral

Thus John Buchan who made the faith of his fathers his guide through life delivered a message to Canadians on the day of his funeral. It was this, that the fundamental truth of Christianity is that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son and that those who believe in him shall not perish but shall have everlasting life."

On Parliament Hill Buchan the writer and Tweedsmuir the servant of King and people was honored by military and civic pomp.

Within the walls of old St. Andrew's Church where he was an Erew's Church where he was an Elhonored with hymn, prayer and Scriptural verse.

The service opened with the psalm, "The Lord is My Shepherd." Its moving passages, particularly "even though I pass through the valley and the shadow of death I will fear no evil," and "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever," took on a more positive meaning when Mr. Ferguson in his memorial address told of Lord Tweedsmuir's personal faith.

"The Christian way of life was to Governor-General the only right way," said Mr. Ferguson.

Three Hymns Sung

Three hymns, "O God of Bethel", "I vow to thee, my country" and "I to the hills" were sung by the choir, the congregation of mixed faith, joining in.

On his last public journey through the streets the armed forces of Canada were out in force to honor their former commander-in-chief.

The route of the procession was lined with khaki-clad men of the Canadian Active Service Force and blue-clad airmen. Men of the navy manned the ropes drawing the gun-carriage with its flag-draped burden.

170 Civil Servants Enlist for War

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—Approximately 170 members of the Ontario civil service hav enlisted for war service, Premier Hepburn disclosed in the Ontario Legislature today.

During his budget address Mr. Hepburn paid tribute to Lieut. Colin A. Campbell, Minister of Public Works, and David A. Croll, former Minister of Public Welfare, who enlisted as a private.

"We pay due tribute," said the Premier, "to the unselfish devotion of our colleagues in the assembly and to the members of the civil service of Ontario.

DUFFUS, HUSHION ARE APPOINTED TO THE SENATE

Lt.-Col. J.J. Duffis of Peterborough Was Member of Last Parliament

ELECTED IN 1935

Senator Duffis Native of Peterborough and Former Mayor of That City

Ottawa, Feb. 15—(CP)—Appointment of Lt.-Col. J. J. Duffus of Peterborough, Ontario, and W. J. Hushion of Montreal, to the two remaining vacancies in the Senate, was announced today from the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Both new senators were members of the Parliament which was dissolved January 25. Mr. Duffus represented Peterborough and Mr. Hushion represented Montreal-St. Anne's .

Mr. Duffus was first elected to the House of Commons in 1935. He was a candidate in 1926 and 1930 but was defeated on both occasions.

Mr. Hushion won a by-election in St. Anne's in 1924, was defeated in the general election of 1930 and returned to Parliament in 1935.

Standing in Senate

These appointments bring the Senate to full strength for the first time in several years. The standing now is 51 Conservatives and 45 Liberals.

Senator Duffus was born in Peterborough County, June 17, 1882, and is managing director of the firm of J. J. Duffus Company, Peterborough. He was a member of the Canadian Contingent which attended the Coronation of King Edward VII.

A prominent figure in Peterborough activities Col. Duffus was for six years an Alderman, served one term as Mayor and for three years as President of the Chamber of Commerce.

The premier outlined the increase in gross debt which he said had increased from Oct. 31, 1934, to March 31, 1940, by $81,488,530. But to call this increase in the gross debt without showing the other side of the picture and dealing with what might be properly called the investments of the province, he said, would give an incomplete and misleading impression.

Increase of $34,482,239 during the current year in the gross debt was offset by capital assets in highways, public buildings and public works amounting to nearly $26,000,000. The increase in the gross debt from Oct. 31, 1934, to March 31, 1940, amounted to $81,488,530.75, but during this period the province had increased capital assets by $146,308,805.76.

Content to be Judged

"I am content to be judged by the people of this province in respect of the increase of $81,000,000 in the gross debt when I am able to report, as I do today, that during the same period we have an increase in the tangible capital assets of the province of $146,000,000, and I like to report having contributed to the human resources of the province a sum in excess of $226,000,000," said Mr. Hepburn.

(In the statement of debt presented in last year's budget, the funded debt of Ontario was given as $506,864,631.)

Review of the activities of government departments were cut shorter than usual by the premier as he read the budget address from a prepared text. Neither was there as much controversial matter in it.

Labor Activities Increase

All branches of the labor department increased activity in the past year. Expansion of industry for war production was partly responsible. In the first nine months of the fiscal year more than 106,000 placements were made by the Ontario government offices of the Employment Service of Canada, 6,000 more than in the corresponding period of tthe previous fiscal year.

Ontario's mining industry set a record for production in 1939. Increased war demand for metals and a 10 per cent. increase in September in the price of gold were the chief factors. Of the total value of Canada's mineral production, $470,000,179, Ontario produced $235,000,000 or 50 per cent. Ontario gold production was $109,508,979, a record.

Municipal Credit Stabilized

Stabilization of municipal credit largely due to the amicable debt refundings for supervised municipalities, was claimed. Out of a total of $105,000,000 of debenture debt in default at one time, involving 35 municipalities, more than $93,000,000 has been refunded in 24 municipalities.

Municipalities of Ontario would save more than $3,500,000 in the fiscal year because of the continuance of the government's policy of assuming the municipal share of the cost of old age pensions, pensions for the blind and mothers' allowances.

Indications were the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway would in the present fiscal year have one of the best years in its recent operating history. The net receipts for the year "may now be conservatively estimated at $1,300,000, which reflects a decided improvement.

3,000 ESTATES STILL TO PROBE

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP) — Normal succession duty revenue, collected from estates of deceased Onttario citizens, may be estimated at $12,000,000 a year, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today in his budget address to the Ontario Legislature.

"Any amounts collected in excess of $12,000,000 will not be taken into account as ordinary revenue, but will be considered as capital revenue and applied either in reduction of capital expenditure or for reduction of the debt of the province," he said.

There are still more than 3,000 old estates to be investigated by the treasury department, the Premier said. Many larger estates had already made settlement for arrears claimed. More than $25,000,000 had been collected from estates from estates of deceased Ontario closed by previous treasurers There would be no relaxing in this drive for collection of provincial duties.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Feb. 15 — (AP)—Although low-priced specialties still were the favorites in today's stock market, many recently sleepy leaders were given a buying nudge. Near the fourth hour gains ranged from fractions to a point or so.

An assortment of 1939-40 highs included Loft, Cluett Peabody, Studebaker and Brooklyn - Manhattan Transit Pfd. Others in favor were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, American Smelting, Anaconda, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, J. C. Penney, Certain-teed, Pathe, Celotex, Celanese and Murray Corp.

Dome mines, up a fraction, was only gainer among Canadian issues. Lake Shore mines, Canadian Pacific and in the bond market, Canada 4s, were easy.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 15 —(CP)— On Toronto Exchange today mining shares dipped to show losses of .40 for the Golds and .10 for the Base Metal issues by noon while the Western Oils were barely firm and the Industrials showed an index gain of .14. Trading still moved sluggishly and only 112,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

In the Golds, McIntyre was down a point to 53 and Lake Shore 1-2 to 27 3-4. Macassa, Sylvanite, Powell Rouyn and Hard Rock were other weak spots. Base Metal issues boarded only minor changes.

In the Industrial section prices were lower for the Utilities and Papers and stronger for the Foods, Senior Oils, Textiles and Banks. Home Oil and Firestone were up narrowly and Brown and some of the other penny Oils of the Western group were a bit soft.

CRUISER EXETER WELCOMED BY NAVAL OFFICIALS

Famed Ship Returns to Plymouth From Falkland Is.—Greeted by Churchill and Admiral Pound

FOUGHT AT MONTEVIDEO

Officers and Men Praised for Gallant Fight Against the Graf Spee

Plymouth, England, Feb. 15 (CP)—The cruiser Exeter, one of three which defeated the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in the battle of Montevideo, came home to this historic port today to be greeted by a cheering crowd headed by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

The Exeter, which had been repaired at Port Stanley, Falkland Islands, for the long voyage home, saluted the first lord as a tug led the way to port.

Also on hand to pay tribute to the crew of the 8,390 ton warship were Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, First Sea Lord, and Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

It was a happy homecoming for members of the crew, called back to duty last August only three days after their first leave in England had begun following a duty tour of nearly three years.

The 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse returned to Plymouth yesterday for refitting, it was disclosed.

In his speech of welcome to the officers and men of the ship which bore the brunt of the Admiral Graf Spee's fire and suffered the heaviest casualties, Mr. Churchill said:

Battled in Naval Tradition

"We are especially able to congratulate you upon the fortune which enabled you to fight an action in the old style instead of the long and intricate struggle with mines and U-boats which your comrades in the flotillas have been waging here.

"This great action will long be told in song and story. When you came up the river this morning, when you entered the harbor, there were crowds cheering on the banks. One might almost have thought that there were other spectators, great shades of the past carrying us back to Drake and Raleigh, to the great sea dogs of old times.

"If their spirits brooded on this scene you would be entitled to tell them: 'We, your descendants, still make war, and we have not forgotten the lesson you taught us. Many months, perhaps some years, of long and anxious struggle lie before us, and we face the future in a spirit of serious resolve.'

"You all have lost good comrades and shipmates who are not here this day. But you are here and your gallant ship is back to cheer the hearts of your fellow-countrymen. You have come back with a work notably and faithfully accomplished in a worthy cause with your honors gathered and your duty done."

St. Valentine Day Mail Carried Many Surprises Funny and Otherwise

There were red faces, blushing faces, faces that paled a bit before red-tipped ears, and not a few hearty laughs when the city mails disgorged the annual quota of Valentines to city dwellers yesterday.

Predominating of course, was the elaborate, highly colored creation that carried declarations of undying love from ardent swain to blushing maiden. And not a few of the boys' ears were tinged with a shade of pink when bulky lace-bordered Valentines were opened at the breakfast or luncheon table with the rest of the family enjoying the Lothario's temporary discomfiture.

The entire gamut of Valentine creations was run. There were funny one, suggestive ones, ones that carried delicate hints as to the personalities of the recipients, their failings, attractions and whatnot.

Schools, offices, shops and factories carried an air of mystery as employees made furtive enquiries as to the possible identity of senders of their missives.

Handwriting was carefully studied. Even typewriter faces underwent keen scrutiny in some cases as the "receivers" conducted personal investigation into the mystery of the "sender."

Schools of the city were scenes of merriment as hundreds of pupils exchanged the multi-colored cards. One pupil is said to have received as high as eighteen in one school.

Shops and department stores of the city reported the heaviest Valentine business in years as children and grownups alike entered into the spirit of the occasion. Florists and candy shops likewise reported a decided increase in business proving that Young Dan Cupid, in spite of war and other things, has not lost his hold on the average individual, or that the fun usually associated with the occasion by grownups has lost none of its attractiveness.

FLIP OF COIN DECIDES

Richmond, Que., Feb. 15—(CP)—A flip of a coin gave J. W. Bruneau of Asbestos the presidency of the Richmond-Wolfe Liberal Association over Dr. Raoul Morissette of Windsor Mills. The two candidates agreed to toss for the post after the chairman estimated at a meeting yesterday that each had the same number of supporters.

Publicity Bureau Will Counteract Any Adverse Propaganda

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP) — To promote the tourist traffic, Ontario will establish a publicity bureau to "counteract any unfortunate propaganda or misunderstanding of war conditions in Canada, Premier Hepburn told the Legislature today in his budget address.

"It shall be our responsibility to impress upon the minds of those who contemplate visiting Ontario that we have a highway system which we believe to be second to none on this North American continent.

"Ontario will be advertised as the province which levies no amusement tax; no tax on meals; no local sales tax; where a policy of fish propagation has been carried to the point of efficiency so that our inland lakes and waters will be most attractive to those who enjoy that particular kind of sport."

Prospective American tourists would be told of the premium value of their money in Canada, Mr. Hepburn added.

EDUCATION DEP'T TO SAVE MILLION

Announcement Made Middle School Examinations Will be Suspended

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP) —The Ontario Department of Education is budgeting for expenditures $1,000,000 less than in the current fiscal year, ending March 31, 1940, Premier Hepburn announced today in his budget address to the Legislature.

The premier said the department was making its contribution to the economy campaign by making economies and changes in administration. These included suspension of Middle School examinations which "will alone involve a saving of more than $100,000." Reduction in summer courses and elimination of grants for such special subjects as agriculture, music and art were included in the economy measures.

It was felt, the Premier said, that these subjects had now become sufficiently well established in the schools of the province to warrant withdrawal of special subsidies and that school boards in fixing the teachers' salaries would give consideration to their qualifications in these subjects.

Entrance Gained Into Milling Office

Entrance was gained into the premises of the McCarthy Milling Company sometime last night, P.C. Thomson discovered while patrolling his beat shortly after 5.30 a.m. today. Constable Thomson discovered the door leading into the premises unfastened. Subsequent investigations revealed, that a hole had been cut in the panel of the door permitting the would-be robbers to reach in and unlock the door from the inside.

A check-up by company officials and the police revealed that nothing had been disturbed or stolen, however. Police are of the opinion the marauders were attempting to gain entrance to the adjoining C.P.R. freight sheds, as an unsuccessful attempt to enter these premises was made the previous night. Otherwise activities in and around local police circles were quiet.

Pte. Temple will be a member of the Canadian rugby and basketball league and will play for his battalion, according to a letter received by his parents today. He also stated that he is in excellent health, although a number of his battalion buddies have been quite ill and Pte. Temple wished to be remembered to all of his Belleville friends. Fred Temple played football and basketball at the Belleville Collegiate and later with the Belleville O.R.F.U. squad of 1926-27.

SAYS RUMANIA MUST BE PRO-ALLY FOR HER SAFETY

Former Premier Sees Bolshevism or Partition Only Alternative to Democracy

BORDERS INVIOLATE

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Feb. 15—(AP)—Former Premier Juliu Maniu, leader of the Rumanian Peasant Party before King Carol abolished all political parties except his own "Party of National Rebirth," said today Rumania must come out in favor of the Allies if the nation is to find salvation.

In an interview he attacked the King's present policy of attempting to strike a balance between the economic demands of Germany and the Allies.

Rumania's only salvation, he contended, is for her to be openly in favor of Great Britain and France and to return to democratic parliamentary life.

Peasant Leaders' View

Maniu, whose Peasant Party formerly drew as much as 40 per cent of the votes in national elections, declared there are only two alternatives to a return to free institutions:

1. Bolshevism.
2. Partition of Rumania by foreign powers.

The Peasant leader said Rumania could not agree to the slightest change in her frontiers to meet Hungarian, Bulgarian or Russian claims. (After the first Great War Rumania gained Transylvania in the breakup of the Austro-Hungarian empire; Bessarabia from Russia; and Dobruja from Bulgaria.)

"Any negotiations would be against the national will and unity because it would destroy the aspirations of a thousand years," he said.

He charged that Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu failed to uphold King Carol's instructions at the recent Balkan Enetent conference in Belgrade because "He encouraged other powers to think (territorial) negotiations were possible."

Maniu said "the great majority of Rumanians certainly hope for an allied war victory."

WM. A. WOODLEY TO HEAD BOARD

Parks Board Elects Officers and Various Chairmen for Coming Year

W. A. Woodley, who has served the city in many capacities as a public servant for many years, was re-elected as chairman of the Belleville Parks Commission for his second consecutive term as the Board convened last evening in the City Hall. Chairman Woodley acted in the same capacity last year.

Considerable business was completed by the Board last night before the election of chairmanships was made. Communications received lent to assure the Commission that the citizens of Belleville appreciated the Board's efforts in the planting of trees throughout the city. Tree trimming and replanting of trees will continue as a major effort of the Board during 1940.

Fred Wiggins was re-appointed as secretary of the Parks Commission for the eleventh consecutive term, Chairman Woodley congratulating Mr. Wiggins upon his efficient work as of 1939. The chairmanships of the Belleville Parks Commission for 1940 were announced as follows—Exhibition Park, Richard Snell; Victoria Park, Clarence Clapp; Tree trimming, Maurice Callaghan; chairman of all parks, Richard Snell; chairman of general purposes, C. B. Colling and chairman of horticultural, C. J. Symons.

MOVING OF FIRE EQUIPMENT DELAYED

Until such time as fire bells from the Belleville General Hospital and the County Home are connected directly to No. 2 Fire Hall on Upper Front Street, the fire-fighting equipment in the lower hall will stay right where it is, stated Fire Chief Lynch this morning, adding that it was unlikely that the Fire Department would quit the building until after Sunday. Delay in placing these bells in the upper hall has made it necessary to stay on at No. 1 hall, although February 16th., was set by the Fire Commission as the dead line for vacating the premises.

"The Fire Department has had a very quiet winter thus far," continued Fire Chief Lynch as he reviewed activities up to the present time, "we had no major fires during January and February thus far has also been quiet." It was just one year ago yesterday that the Holloway Street Church burned, said one of the staff in comparing this winter's activities with 1938-39.

2 BOMBS EXPLODE

London, Feb. 15—(CP)—Special lookouts for Irish Republican army bombs were posted in London railroad stations and post offices today as the result of time-bombings in Birmingham last night.

Two bombs exploded in Birmingham, three others were discovered, and police there informed Scotland Yard they had discovered plans for bombings in London.

Equipment of Guards Causes Increase in Atty.-General's Dep't

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—Largest increase in expenditures by the Ontario Attorney - General's Department during the fiscal year ending March 31, was made to appoint, equip and arm guards to maintain watch over vital power sources, Premier Hepburn said today in his budget speech to the Ontario Legislature.

The Premier stressed the importance of hydro to Ontario industry and revealed that since last Sept. 3 to the end of the fiscal year, March 31, 1940, the cost of the unanticipated service would be $895,000.

He outlined the duties added to the department by the war in steps taken to curtail subversive elements and said the law enforcement officials were being kept informed "and up-to-date on the regulations by full briefs on the law and supplementary memoranda as they become necessary."

Sees Possible Spread Of War to Near East But Not At Present

Istanbul, Feb. 15—(AP) — The French - language newspaper La Republique, which often reflects official opinion, asserted today that the peoples of the Near East must prepare for a possible spread of war through this region.

Although it said war seemed unlikely here for the moment, it added that "it is only natural that peoples who value their health pay attention to the probability of its eventual coming."

Some newspapers reported that a submarine being constructed in Germany and Turkey had been seized and added to the German navy.

Rumania, Iraq and Iran (Persia) were mentioned by the Turkish Press as countries which might be the object of a German or Russian attack or be caught in the middle of the struggle between the Anglo-French and Russian - German combinations.

TOWNSHIP ROADS IN BAD CONDITION

Following yesterday afternoon and evening's big blow, in which the wind behaved in typical February style, township roads in the district are reported in a deplorable condition. Snowplows were out all yesterday and last night on the provincial and county systems and were able to keep traffic moving, but township roads, only barely passable since last weekend's snow storm, are blocked completely to motor traffic and will remain so until the plows are able to relieve the situation. The 2nd, 3rd and 4th concessions in Sidney Township are in particularly bad shape as the result of a driving wind storm, which residents claim carried snow higher than the telephone poles.

TRAFFIC RETURNS TO NORMAL AFTER BLIZZARD AT N. F.

Storm Throughout Peninsula Lasted for Seventeen Hours With Six Inch Snowfall

PLOWS BLOCKED

In St. Catharines Area, Plows Were Unable to Make Headway Yesterday Against Huge Drifts

By the Canadian Press

The last main roads throughout the Niagara Peninsula yielded their snow to huge plows and traffic returned to normal following a severe blizzard.

Throughout Ontario generally fair and cold weather prevailed with the northern section of the province bearing the brunt of the northwest winds. The forecast was for continued cold with a rising of temperatures scheduled for late tomorrow with a change of wind from north to south.

Side roads in many Niagara districts remain blocked and it was impossible last night to travel on the Welland-Niagara Falls road. For this reason, a busload of delegates was unable to reach the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation in Welland last night and it was postponed until Friday night.

The Niagara blizzard, also felt in New York State, lasted 17 hours and approximately six inches of snow fell. Plows were forced to stop work in the St. Catharines district yesterday because they could make no headway against the snow drifts. Main roads were cleared, however, on resumption of plowing today and all provincial highways are open.

Sideroads in Brantford district remain snowbound but main highways are clear. In the London area the mercury climbed toward the 20-above-zero mark and in Toronto it was 15 above while the sun shone strongly.

A snowstorm fell in the Peterboro district of Eastern Ontario and the temperature fell to six above zero.

Eastern States Affected

New York, Feb. 15 (AP) — Lashing gales at sea brought a new menace to life and property today in the wake of Winter's heaviest snowstorm which left 43 known dead, scores injured, and drifts piled high throughout the eastern United States.

The weather bureau in Washington, D.C., sent out a bulletin warning that a storm of "great intensity attended by gales over a wide area" was raging in a focus about 150 miles east of Nantucket, Mass.

Hearts overtaxed by shovelling snow or battling through snowdrifts accounted for a majority of the storm fatalities, with Pennsylvania registering eight death, upstate New York eight, New Jersey six, New York City six, Maryland three and New England 10.

Although the major force of the storm, which came as a Valentine Day's "gift" from the south, had blown itself out to sea, high winds still harassed shipping in inland coastal waters.

Another menace to shipping was reported off Cape Hatteras, N.C., when the Diamond Shoals Lightship parted her mooring and went adrift in mountainous seas.

Apps Out of Game For Indefinite Period

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—Sylvanus Apps, star centre with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, will remain out of the game for an indefinite period.

Manager Conny Smythe of the Leafs said today that he told Apps not to play again until he is pronounced fit. Apps took part in yesterday's practice but was bothered by a sore neck and shoulder which have not returned to normal following a fractured collarbone suffered several weeks ago.

"We have had Apps examined and the doctors don't seem to know just what is the matter with him," Smythe said. "So I have decided the best thing is to give him a complete rest until he is 100 per cent fit. Just when that will be I don't know."

Holland to Demand Full Indemnification From Germany

Amsterdam, Feb. 15—(AP)—The Netherlands announced today she would demand "full indemnification" from Germany for the torpedoing and sinking last Saturday of the 6,853-ton Holland-Amerika liner Burgerdijk An official announcement said:

"Preceding a written protest, the Netherlands Government already has advised the German government of serious objections against the torpedoing of the Burgerdijk, for which full indemnification will be demanded"

(The Burgerdijk was en route to Rotterdam from New York when she was torpedoed 15 miles south of Bishop's Rock, off the southwestern tip of England. Spokesmen in Berlin yesterday sought to justify the sinking as legal on the grounds that the vessel was heading for an English port.)

Block In Timmins Destroyed By Fire, Damage Is Heavy

Firemen Estimate Damage at $100,000 and Business Men Place Total Loss at $200,000

BOOKS RESCUED

Fire in Attic Baffles Fire Brigade — Loss on Stock Alone in Friedman's Store Estimated by Manager at $100,000

Timmins, Ont., Feb. 15—(CP) — The second major fire disaster in Timmins within a week and one of the worst in the town's history broke out shortly after midnight this morning and raced through the Bardessono Block, on Pine Street S, home of Friedman Department Stores, Shaheen's Department Store and the David Men's Furnishings, demolishing the entire structure. Three walls were left standing today as firemen continued to pour water into the icy interior, still smouldering in a number of places. Firemen placed the damage as $100,000 while businessmen estimated the total loss at more than $200,000.

Police Constable R. Boissonneault was patrolling his beat just after going on shift when he discovered the fire in Sam David's store at the north end of the building. Racing to the corner, he pulled box 12 and summoned the fire trucks.

Attic Takes Fire

Firemen fought the small fire in the David Store for a short while employees of Friedman's Department Stores had time to race into the building and bring out the books and accounts.

A seven-foot attic at the top of the building caught fire and carried the blaze right across the structure to the south side. Firemen were unable to combat the flames in the attic because of a metallic roof on the stores and the lone entrance at the rear of Friedman's Store.

Benny Kleiman, manager of Friedman's store, estimated loss of stock alone at $100,000. He said an entire new spring shipment had been moved from a warehouse into store. David said combined loss of stock in the Shaheen and David Women's Wear Store and the David Men's Furnishing Store would approximate $50,000, with another $50,000 damage to the buildings.

Roof Collapses

Kleiman said that he and Manny Shinehoft entered the store shortly after the fire broke out and retrieved books and accounts. Just as they emerged from the building, the inner roof collapsed.

Guests in two nearby rooming houses, Doranda Hotel and Tom's Rooms, were forced to quit the establishments in scanty attire at the insistence of police and firemen who feared further spread of the blaze. The fire spread to the stores of the Alysia and Tip Top Tailors' but little damage was done.

Memorial Service At Westminster Abbey For Lord Tweedsmuir

London, Feb. 15—(CP-Cable)—A memorial service for Lord Tweedsmuir will be held at Westminster Abbey Feb. 22. A representative of the King will attend.

Officers of the Canadian Active Service Force stationed in Britain will join with representatives of the state and the late Governor-General's friends and relatives in paying solemn tribute at the service.

It was learned that Lord Tweedsmuir's daughter, Mrs. Brian Fairfax-Lucy, has cancelled plans to go to Canada and that no other members of the family will leave England to join Lady Tweedsmuir in the Dominion.

County Court

In the absence of Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., who is confined to his home through illness, Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook, presided over the County Police Court held in Belleville today.

Steve Chome, Frankford butcher, was fined $100 and costs after being convicted of being found in the illegal possession of liquor. After the fine was paid Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., asked that Chome's residence be declared an "open house," thereby depriving him of any liquor possession whatsoever.

George Howard, Tyendinaga, appeared on a charge of the theft of a motor car, the property of Mrs. Sara Topping. Howard was given a week's remand upon his own request.

The names of Bruce Martin and Roscoe Stapley were called out in connection with the alleged failure of the payment of their Thurlow Township dog tax. Neither of the men answered to their names and the matter was enlarged for one week. Pleas of guilty were heard in two H.T.A. cases, which concluded the proceedings.

Police Believe Convicts Aided by Outsiders In Attempted Break

Philadelphia, Feb. 15 —(AP) — Authorities worked on the theory today that ten long term convicts were aided by outsiders in an abortive plot to tunnel to freedom under the walls of Eastern State Penitentiary.

With nine of the conspirators lodged in solitary confinement, investigators sought to find out how the convicts obtained implements to dig two tunnels that prison officials said would have furnished 200 prisoners with a means of escaping.

The scheme came to light yesterday when detectives rushed to the prison with machine guns and sawed off guns. They were summoned soon after an alleged ringleader of the plot hanged himself in a cell.

Detective George Richardson, who disclosed two men with police records found loitering outside the prison were being questioned, said he was convinced the plot had "plenty of help from the outside"

Loss of Scandinavian Trade With U. S. May Boost Ontario's Pulp and Paper Industry

11,000 RECIPIENTS

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—Loss of the Scandinavian trade with the United States will afford Ontario an opportunity of gaining additional markets for its pulp and papers, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today in his budget address to the Legislature.

"The uncertain condition of Europe during the year 1938 and the greater part of the following year," said the Premier, "caused grave apprehension in the forest products industry of the country and adversely affected prospective undertakings within the Province of Ontario. The declaration of war, with its consequent disturbance in the economic field, may, however, have an important reaction on the pulp and paper business of the province. Although there have been serious governmental restrictions placed upon the use of newsprint in the United Kingdom which will affect Canadian export, it is predicted that the loss of the Scandinavian trade with the United States will afford Ontario an opportunity...."

During the past year more than 16,000,000 trees—more than 4,000,000 more than ever planted any other year—were distributed and planted, the report showed. Recipients of the trees totalled nearly 11,000, said the Premier who predicted "the investment in years to come will enhance the potential forest wealth of the country and pay substantial dividends to the holders."

Premier Hepburn also outlined the ways in which the province had co-operated with Dominion authorities after the outbreak of war by placing at the Dominion's disposal the Provincial air service and other facilities.

Ki-Y League

The O.S.D. sextette and the "Scrappers" of the local Ki-Y Bantam hockey series battled to a one all tie at the Hume Arena yesterday afternoon. Doyle for the Scrappers and Moore for the O.S.D. lads were the only players able to dent the twine behind their opponent's goalie.

The teams—O.S.D.—goal, Martin; defence, Wilson and Steenburg; centre, Moore; wings, Styles and Calder; subs, Lowson and Wedge.

Scrappers—goal, Yorke; defence, Quincey and Parsons; centre, Doyle; wings, Ashley and Brodie; subs, Cork, Semark and Snell.

Referee—Lum Carson.

The St. Mikes and "Y" Pups of the series were scheduled to play at the South End but the "Y" Pups were unable to ice a complete team so a couple of lads were picked up to play an exhibition game with the St. Mike's team winning by default. St. Mike's lined up as follows— goal Galbraith; defence, Whalen and Upper; centre, Bone; wings, Meagher and Brant; subs O'Brien and Boyle.

THOUSANDS WAIT FOR TWEEDSMUIR CORTEGE TO PASS

The streets of the Dominion's capital were thronged with thousands of citizens waiting in reverent silence for the funeral cortege of the late Governor-General to pass on its way from the Senate Chamber to St. Andrews Presbyterian Church where a funeral service was held. From the church the body was escorted to Ottawa's Union Station and placed aboard a train for Montreal. The casket bearing the remains of the late Lord Tweedsmuir is shown here being carried from St. Andrews Church.

Love Charm

By THAYER WALDO

There were eight men in the office when the dark girl walked in.

Her skin was creamy brown, her clear eyes and waving hair like coal.

They stared in silence an instant as she stood by the door, glancing swiftly from face to face.

At last the one nearest her spoke.

"Well, what is it? Who do you want?"

The girl's steady gaze fixed on him.

"I am here because the door says William Newsom," she replied; "is it your name?"

Her voice had a soft, rich inflection.

The large man at the head of the table said:

"I'm Newsom. What's the idea?"

Deliberately the girl appraised him, but the look was not hostile.

Then she came to the director's side and held out one hand. On the small smooth palm lay a curious object—an amulet in the shape of a little blue fish with horns.

Newsom gazed down at it, and suddenly his face was ashen.

"You—you—" he stammered in hoarse confusion.

"I am Taumma," she said quietly.

For a long moment then they regarded each other; the pale shaking man in the chair and the girl with calm dark eyes.

Finally Newsom turned toward the seven who were waiting.

"Boys," he said, and the tone was thin. "I—I'll have to call off the conference for now. We'll get together again tomorrow."

No one answered but their expressions as they filed to the door were eloquent. When the last had gone Newsom slowly faced the girl again.

"Why are you here?" he asked.

It was a sort of weary plea.

"I have come to see you," she replied: "do you not want that?"

He passed a hand across his eyes and sighed.

"I don't know; it isn't a fair question. There's so much to —to consider and think out—so much I'd almost forgotten."

Pausing, he glanced up sharply.

"Is — are you in Hollywood alone?"

"Yes. That is why I have brought you this."

Once more she revealed the charm.

"Do you not understand?"

Newsom rose abruptly, gesturing his agitation.

'Oh, of course—of course!"

He went to the windows and remained there half a minute, his back to her. When he swung around a forced composure was evident.

"Taumma, my dear," he said, "you must forgive me. This has been so sudden—really a shock. We must talk about it more fully and sensibly. But right now I'm in the midst of shooting—directly a picture, you know. I wonder: would you care to come on the set with me and watch it?"

"Yes!" she told him. "I think that would be pleasure."

There were more than fourscore men and women on sound stage six when they entered.

Someone near the door noticed Taumma at once, and a hum of whispering ran like prairie fire through the place.

Newsom led her to his own chair beside the cameras and said softly:

"Now just sit here and I'll get them busy."

He turned to an assistant and gave crisp orders.

Raising a megaphone, the man shouted: "Clear! Places for Scene 12, Sequence B!"

A mass movement that seemed like chaos began then; but order came out of it, and soon only a handful of costumed actors were left on the set. It was the portico of a Southern plantation; a group of belles and gallants sat at their ease or sauntered about, chatting gaily.

Newsom stood off to one side at a point of vantage; but he watched Taumma rather than the scene.

For several moments he gazed thoughtfully at her, observing each new emotion as she followed the players' speech and movements. Quite apparent it was that her heart and spirit entered wholly into this mimicry.

Suddenly he went to the side door of the building and stepped out.

Just across the lot stood a long gray limousine a chauffeur at its wheel.

Newsom called and the man came at a trot.

"Chris," said the director, "I have an important little job for you."

He led the way and took the chauffeur's arm as they entered the stage. Indicating Taumma, Newsom said.

"Take a good look at that girl and listen to me and don't ask questions. Ten minutes from now I'm going to bring her out to the car and say you'll take her to my house; but you won't. You'll drive to San Pedro—Pier 33—and put her on board the Hilo and give her this."

He shoved a thick wad of bills into the fellow's hand, adding: "And remember—no strong arm stuff. Just get her on and see that she stays. The boat sails for Honolulu at eight this evening."

Exactly that routine was carried through.

Newsom brought her out, made his explanation briefly, smoothly, and put her in the limousine.

Then he watched its gleaming length glide down the drive and out of sight.

The next four hours were crowded.

Three scenes remained in that particular sequence of the picture, and he ran them off with neat celerity.

After that, two more conferences, and at last back to the office to study and blue-pencil a new script.

Through it all he gave no sign of preoccupation; none of those who were with him during the period noted any strangeness or constraint in his manner—not until 6.54, that is.

He was seated at his desk, dictating notes on the scenario.

For a moment there was silence, save for the rhythmic ticking as its hands crept on toward the hour.

Without warning, Newsom sprang up.

"That's all; good night," he said quickly. He just caught the boat.

The ship was halfway down the channel crawling through a fog past the dim, hulking shapes of other craft.

At last he paused to light a cigarette.

His match flared, flickered, and illuminated the face of Taumma, standing against the rail two feet away.

Swiftly he stepped forward and folded her in his arms.

The smile upon her upraised lips was beautiful, serene.

"Have I hurt you, my dear?" he asked gently.

"No," she said; "I think I knew that you would come."

He nodded slowly, looking at her with devotion.

"You would know that, of course."

He touched the tiny amulet, now on a chain about her neck.

"I'm not sure which called me most—you or this. It's hard just now to decide between the strength of blood ties and that love charm. I guess I've been waiting all this while for one of them—both, perhaps—without quite realizing it. Do you know that it's 16 years ago this month since I gave that trinket to your mother on Waikiki beach?"

"Yes, my father."

She laid her head against his shoulder.

"That is why we are here, together. She is waiting, too."

NAZIS DEFINE 'FAIR VICTIMS'

U.S. Officials Show Little Concern Over Nazi Argument

Berlin, Feb. 15—(AP)—Any United States ship touching a British port such as Gibraltar, either of its own volition or for compulsory examination by the British contraband control, would be, from the German legal point of view, a "fair victim" for a German submarine, German spokesmen said.

This statement was made in explanation of the situation surrounding the sinking last Saturday of the 6,853-ton Holland-Amerika liner Burgerdijk, 15 miles south of Bishop's Rock, off the southwestern tip of England.

Washington, Feb. 15 — (AP) — Government officials said that German submarines legally could sink a United States ship forced to put into a British control port only after it had been ascertained that the ship cargo was more than 50 per cent. contraband destined for Germany's foes.

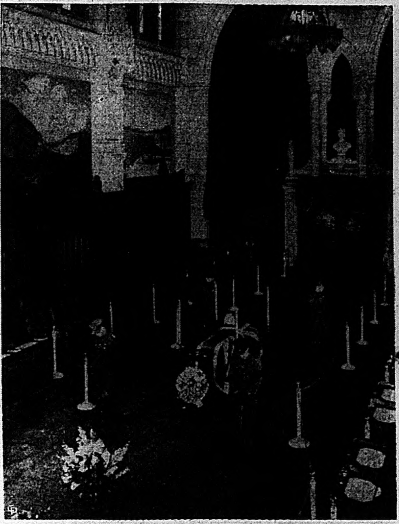
CANADA PAYS HOMAGE AT LORD TWEEDSMUIR'S BIER

An escort from the Governor-General's Foot Guards escorted the body of the late Governor-General from Ottawa's Union Station to the parliament buildings. The escort is seen here as they left Parliament Hill.



The body of the late Lord Tweedsmuir was taken, on arrival in Canada's capital, to the Senate Chamber of the parliament buildings where it lay in state until the funeral Wednesday afternoon. Thousands of Canadians filed past the flag-draped casket to pay homage. On top of the casket are the plumed hat and sword of the late Governor-General, while at the foot of the bier are his orders, medals and decorations. In front of the casket is a simple red and white wreath of carnations from Lady Tweedsmuir.

AT THE BELLE

"Everything's On Ice"

A new screen luminary—and a very tiny one—is now on the Belle screen in the person of six-year-old Irene Dare who is the centre of the spectacle-romance, "Everything's On Ice." This charming little sprite displays remarkable ability and versatility. Admittedly the finest ice skater of her age, Irene is seen at the head of a number of ice ballets that bring to the production a quality of unusual beauty.

Purely as a comedy, the picture is a delight. It tells the story of a kibitzing and irresponsible uncle, Roscoe Karns, who secures for his little niece a job as the ice-skating star of a Palm Beach night-club revue, and then appoints himself her financial manager. Running up enormous bills at a Florida hotel, he plunges Irene's entire family deeply into debts, and doesn't help matters when he tries to marry her older sister off to a millionaire—and picks the wrong man. The picture reaches its climax is a gale of laughter.

The picture's supporting cast includes, in addition to Karns, such popular screen players as Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Roberts, Eric Linden, Mary Hart, George Meeker, and Bobby Watson; all do excellent work.

"The Saint in London"

George Sanders, whose services are constantly in demand both in London and Hollywood, interprets the internationally-famous role of "The Saint" for the second time in RKO Radio's "The Saint of London," announced as the second feature attraction.

Sanders, who played the title characterization in "The Saint Strikes Back," has rapidly ascended the ladder of film fame, appearing in recent years in such outstanding films as "Lloyds of London" "Four Men and a Prayer," "The Outsider," "So This is London" and "Lancer Spy." In the chief feminine role is Sally Gray, lovely blonde star of the English stage.

Finland—Today, Timely

A special extra screen attraction tonight will be Finland—Today! What chance has Finland to win her defense against invasion by Russia? What is the history of the new little republic? How do the Finns work and live and train for war? This March of Time presents graphically the national characteristics of the sturdy Finns and several well known commentators express their view of the ultimate outcome and the aims of Russia in fighting this war. This timely subject is presented impartially but arouses profound feeling.

On the stage tonight Ken Soble's True-False game will be presented, offering splendid cash prizes, the participants will find the game fascinating, and highly entertaining. Be on hand to see last week's winner receive the cash award.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Oh Johnny How You Can Love"

Peggy Moran, beautiful and talented daughter of Earl Moran, noted magazine artist, portrays a runaway heiress in Universal's musical dram. "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love," now showing at the Capitol Theatre with Tom Brown, Allen Jenkins and Juanita Quigley.

In addition to two brand new melodies, "Swing, Chariot, Swing," and "Maybe You Like What I Like," the picture also presents for the first time on the screen the song sensation "Oh Johnny, How You Can Love," sung by glamorous voiced radio songstress, Betty Jane Rhodes. Said to offer a delightful combination of music, comedy and romance, the picture's supporting cast includes Donald Meek, Isabel Jewell, Horace McMahon and Joe Downing. Charles Lemont was the director, and Ken Goldsmith the associate producer.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Reno"

How Reno, Nevada, became the United States divorce capital is brilliantly told as the background of R.K.O. Radio's new dramatic-comedy "Reno," co-starring Richard Dix and Gail Patrick, now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The story of the Nevada city's transformation from a rough-and-tumble mining town to its present prosperity comprises the picturesque canvas against which is painted the engrossing human story of the two stars, and what happened to their romance.

Dix portrays an aggressive young lawyer of Reno, who marries Miss Patrick. He takes advantage of Nevada's old residence and divorce laws which make Reno a popular divorce center, and he sets about advertising this with fine disregard for professional ethics. As a result, he builds himself a lucrative divorce practice—but he loses his wife, who cannot bring herself to condone his work or his methods.

He also loses his practice when rival lawyers manage to obtain his disbarment, but, refusing to be beaten, he turns to gambling under an assumed name. And it is as a gambler, many years later, that he comes to the dramatic climax of the story and endeavors to save his own daughter from plunging into an ill-advised divorce.

"Haunted Gold"

John Wayne, favorite western star, recently shot to fame as the star of "Stage Coach," the best directed picture of 1939, which played at the McCarthy Theatre also returns now in a new outdoor ad- "Haunted Gold," a thrilling story of the star and several other characters assembling in a California "ghost town."

The way in which John Wayne and his miracle horse "Duke," track down the secret of the deserted mine forms the basis of a real live western mystery tale. It makes an excellent companion feature presentation to "Reno." The chapter play, "Kit Carson" is also presented preceding the feature hits.

Letters to the Editor

Ex-Alderman Asks Questions

263 Front St., Belleville,
Feb. 13th., 1940.

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

The new City Council has been in office but little more than a month, and have made decisions that call for the attention of Taxpayers. I particularly refer to the action of the Fire Committee, who, without reference to the Council, re-appointed Mr. Carter as a fireman with full knowledge that Mr. Carter was discharged last year for reasons which the committee regards as being sufficient. This on the recommendation of the Fire Chief, Fire Committee, and finally endorsed by the Council as a whole. By this act, the Fire Committee have destroyed the authority of the Fire Chief, who recommended the man's dismissal, and whose opinion was not asked, as to his reappointment. He was, in fact, asked to leave the room when this decision was arrived at. The bitterness so often demonstrated, for the past two years by the present Chairman of Fire, was recently again shown by his attempt to call a meeting of the Fire Department, through a fireman, instead of through the Fire Chief. How can the efficiency of the Fire Department be maintained under such conditions?

Again referring to the re-appointment of Fireman Carter, the records show that he was appointed, originally, when well over 40 years of age, and is now bordering upon 60 years.

The Mayor and Alderman Kennedy were most outspoken in their opposition last year to dismissals and appointments without reference to Council. Why then, did they take such action before allowing discussion of the matter before a full Council?

Following the first meeting of the Fire Department, this year Alderman Jeffery reported to the press, that one of the men had remarked: "The best meeting we have ever had." To the contrary, the report I received was that the entire meeting was given over to spleenish attacks on the Fire Chief in the presence of the men.

It is being consistently heard from the various Fire Fighting Organizations of the Province that the position of Fire Chief in the City of Belleville, will be open for application, at a starting salary of $1600.00 per year. Perhaps in this connection, the Fire Committee can enlighten the Council and Taxpayers.

Referring to the recent order in Council, as recommended by the Fire Committee, that Fire Hall No. 1 be vacated by Feb. 15th, and that Fire Hall No. 2 be used to completely house the Fire Department, May I express the opinion, that this is ill-advised, first, because the building is 75 years old, pest ridden, and its foundations badly undermined by floods—the front wall actually sways when a banner is placed on it. Then because the Fire Underwriters' report of June 20th, 1933, says in part: "Building should pairs carried out." This has not be reconstructed or extensive rebeen done. The same report goes on to say that it recognizes the convenience of No. 1 Fire Hall with respect to the principal mercantile section of the city, factory and oil storage areas, also important public buildings.

It was largely on this report and the bad condition of No. 2 hall, plus the erection of an oil station opposite No 2, that the Fire Committee, last year, recommended the unified operation of the Fire Department in No. 1 hall, and the extension of the building for proper accommodation. I still believe this is the proper thing to do.

In closing, I want to say the present Fire Chief is, according to the best authority (The Fire Marshal of Ontario) one of the 6 best Fire Chiefs in Ontario, and one of the 3 best between Toronto and Montreal. When one considers this, and the esteem held for the Chief by the great majority of the men, one comes to the conclusion that he is being very shabbily treated by the present Fire Committee whose actions should be more closely scrutinized by Council in the interest of Justice.

Alderman Logan's thought about a larger Fire Committee, I think, had more behind it than meets the eye.

If honest endeavour is to be promoted in the civic life of Belleville, then its efficient servants will be praised and rewarded, rather than abused.

Yours truly,
Laurie Lewis.

Finnish Officer Claims Deep Dugouts and Well - Camouflaged Machine - Gun Nests Protects Finnish Troops for Artillery Fire —20,000 Shells on 10-Mile Front in Hour

(By Thomas Hawkins, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Helsingfors, Feb. 16—(AP)—The Finnish command announced today that the Russians had penetrated farther into Finland's Mannerheim Line positions in the great battle of the Karelian Isthmus but declared that Russian gains had been bought at the price of great losses.

This acknowledgment of Russian gains in the 16-day battle was made in the army's daily communique issued shortly after a Finnish military official told correspondents the invading Red army had seized part of the village of Summa. Around that village the severest part of the Isthmus battle has been fought.

Acknowledge Gains

After already having acknowledged some Russian gains on Feb. 13, the Finns in their communique today said:

"East of the Summa sector and at a couple of outpoints in a defile between Lake Muolo and the Vuoksi River the enemy succeeded in penetrating to our positions."

"Elsewhere attacks were repulsed," said the communique of other isthmus fighting, and semi-official advices up to the time of issuance of the communique indicated that the Finnish Mannerheir Line, the country's main line of defence, was holding firm.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Heat, air and water! As everyone knows who has waited for the tea-kettle to boil, it takes a lot of heat to raise the temperature of water even one degree. In fact, more heat is required to warm a mass of water than for any other common substance. Copper, of which the tea-kettle may have been made, takes much less: one pound of copper is raised one degree with only one-eleventh as much heat as it takes to raise one pound of water one degree. Air takes about one-quarter as much as water. As an illustration, a room 10 by 10 by 6 feet contains about 64 pounds of air. It takes about as much heat energy to raise one cubic foot of water one degree as it does to raise all the air in this fair size room one degree.

'Keep Smiling' Heartening Words Sent to Crew of Ship in Distress

Halifax Feb. 16 (CP)—"....And keep smiling. We got experience of this kind."

While the waterlogged British freighter Sea Rambler wallowed in an Atlantic storm off Newfoundland, the heartening words came crackling over her radio tapped out by a Norwegian operator on a ship speeding to her aid. They spelled rescue for 23 men on the disabled steamer.

Details of the rescue reaching here last night told how the Norwegian ships Mosdale and Kaia Knudson took off the Sea Rambler's crew as she pounded in a heavy sea, her hatches smashed in, her boats carried away and her holds full of water. The crew were manning the pumps when the ships came up.

The record of the wireless tells the story tersely:

Sea Rambler, Feb. 9, 12.30 p.m.: "Hatch stove in. Making water fast. Will any vessel in vicinity please stand by?"

Mosdale: "We are proceeding to your assistance as fast as possible."

Sea Rambler, 6.30 p.m.: "SOS, SOS SOS. No. 2 hold awash. Port lifeboat carried away. Please hurry."

Kaia Knudson: "Expect to reach you at 4 a.m. tomorrow. Let us know of any change, and keep smiling. We got experience of this kind."

Sea Rambler: "Other lifeboat swept away but still smiling. Expect you at 4 a.m."

By the time the Mosdale and Knudson arrived in the darkness of next morning, the engine room had been flooded and the Rambler's power shut off. All the boats were gone.

With the help of an oil slick, the Mosdale's boats took off 11 of the crew of the stricken ship and the Knudson's the other 12. They were ferried away just as a British liner came up in answer to the SOS.

TOLL OF LEVEL CROSSING CRASH REACHES TWO

Car Skids Into Side of Train and Then Shunted Into Gully Beside Tracks

TWO ARE INJURED

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 16—(CP)—Toll of a level crossing accident between a passenger train and an automobile reached two today with the death in hospital of Kenneth Sanders, 30, Stoney Creek insurance agent. K. C. Bond, 33, Hamilton building contractor was killed in the crash. The accident occurred last night at Hannon, five miles south of here, when a car driven by Sanders skidded into the engine of the train. Frank H. Wells, 50, London, and N. J. Hall, 37, Mount Hamilton, other passengers in the car, were injured and taken to hospital.

Hall was released after treatment but Wells is recovering from multiple lacerations and abrasions and his condition is reported "fair."

The men were on their way to Hamilton from Welland and skid marks on the road showed that Sanders attempted to stop the car at the crossing. The car, however, skidded into the engine, was turned around, dragged a few feet, then shunted into a gully at the side of the track.

Dr. G. L. Bell of Binbrook, who was driving his car behind the Sanders machine and saw the accident, said Sanders was pinned beneath the car. Dr. Bell placed the four men in his car and took heim Line, the country's main line the way to hospital of a fractured skull and fractured jaw.

Bond is survived by his widow and four children, his father, four sisters and two brothers. An inquest will be held.

PLAN APPEAL TO WESTERN NATIONS

Foreign Merchants at Tientsin, China, to See Aid for Starving Masses

Tientsin, China, Feb. 16 (AP)—Foreign merchants planned today to appeal to the western nations for help in supplying necessities to impoverished, near-starving masses in north China.

Conditions in cities already are critical and reports from rural areas desribe the population as close to famine without hope of relief, except from outside sources, until the harvest next summer.

Foreigners fear that unless prompt relief measures are taken thousands of rural Chinese may force their way into foreign concessions to demand food. These fears are increased by renewed, Japanese - sponsored agitation against the concessions.

The shortage of essential foodstuffs such as flour, a staple of the north Chinese diet, with consequent high prices, is ascribed partly to the floods of last summer and partly to the war, including devastation of farming areas and Japanese confiscation of resources.

STORM BELIEVED TO HAVE FORCED AIRPLANE DOWN

Halifax Plane With Two Occupants Overdue a Day on Trip That Should Take 70 Minutes

CRASH IS HEARD

Halifax, Feb. 16.—(CP)— Over snow-covered woodlands and lakes northwest of Halifax, search was resumed today for an airplane and two occupants a day overdue on a flight from Moncton, N.B., to Halifax which normally takes 70 minutes.

A blizzard was believed to have forced down the Canadian Airways Monoplane carrying Pilot Jimmy Wade of Moncton and James Noonan, Halifax Oil Company office manager, on a regular mail run between the two cities. The plane carried no radio.

Search yesterday by another Canadian Airways ship failed to turn up any trace of the Stinson "Reliant" machine that set out shortly before the storm blew up. It had been reported in the air at several points along the line of flight, and a man in suburban Rockingham told of seeing it and then hearing a "loud noise that sounded like a crash" after it disappeared into the storm.

H. S. Jones, Maritime superintendent of Canadian Airways, who began the air search, said he believed the machine was down on some frozen lake outside Halifax.

Report of Crash

The report of the apparent "crash" came from William Gifford of Rockingham, six miles outside the city. He said he saw the machine with two other men.

"The plane came down quite low—about 150 feet—and seemed to turn on its side as if the pilot was looking for the airport", he said. "The three of us saw it circle around twice and then circle around and disappear toward Fairview.

"We couldn't see it anymore because it was snowing so hard. Then ten minutes later we heard a loud noise that I now think was a crash."

One man living on the outskirts of Brooklyn told of seeing the Stinson flying low, somewhat off its course, and apparently heading for Stillwater lake, about 35 miles out of Halifax. Lack of communications with the area around the lake made it impossible to check on its whereabouts except by air.

Other lakes dot that section of the country, and it was considered possible Wade might have brought his plane down on one of them and then been unable to take to the air again.

Brazilian Marines Board Ship to Protect Rights

German Freighter's Wireless Must Not be Operated While Boat is in Brazilian Waters — Ship Now 55 Miles Off Belem

INDEFINITE STAY

Koenigberg's Captain Asks Time to Repair Machinery and Permission to Anchor While Repairs Being Made

Belem, Brazil, Feb. 16—(AP)—Twelve Brazilian marines boarded the German freighter Koenigsberg in Brazilian waters today and the Brazilian gunboat Ampa stationed itself nearby to ensure compliance with the Brazilian Neutrality Law prohibiting operation of a ship's wireless for communication with belligerents.

The Koenigsberg was boarded as she lay 55 miles from Belem but in Brazilian territorial waters.

Maritime authorities yesterday ordered the vessel either to sail outside territorial waters or return to Belem, whence she had sailed Feb. 8 with 2,000 tons of rubber. This action was taken when it was discovered the ship had installed wireless antennae which made it possible for her to communicate with German warships in violation of the Neutrality Law.

The scene of the boarding was off Galvotas Island, at the mouth of the Amazon, where she had been anchored for some time.

Replying to the order to return to Belem or leave Brazilian waters, the Koenigsberg's captain said the ship's machinery needed repairs and he asked permission to remain anchored until the repairs were completed.

Then the Brazilian marines boarded the ship, to remain there until the repairs are finished and the ship departs.

Mayors to Protest Subsidy Reduction

Ottawa, Feb. 16—(CP)—Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, president of the Ontario Mayors' Association, is calling a meeting of the association for Toronto on Tuesday to consider the budget announcement of Premier Hepburn that reduced by one-half mill the subsidies paid municipalities by the Ontario government.

In announcing the meeting yesterday, Mayor Lewis said he would have to join with other municipalities in a vigorous protest.

The cut in the subsidy will mean a loss of revenue to Ottawa of approximately $78,000 for 1940, he said, but the mayor would not say whether it would mean an increase of half a mill in Ottawa's tax rate.

The mayor said the subsidy was made to municipalities after the Provincial Government took away from the municipalities the right to impose an income tax.

HECKLERS GIVE ARTHUR ROEBUCK STORMY HEARING

Chairman of Meeting Charged Them With Being "Paid Hirelings of Hugh Plaxton, M.P."

CENSURES HEPBURN

Roebuck Charges Premier Cut Off All Provincial Patronage Following His Resignation

Toronto, Feb. 16.—(CP)—"Dirty work is the right term to describe what he did", Arthur Roebuck, M.P.P., declared last night at a meeting of Trinity riding Liberals. The former Attorney-General, now official Federal Liberal candidate, was commenting on the action of Premier Hepburn, following the break that resulted in Mr. Roebuck's resignation from the Ontario Cabinet. He declared that all provincial patronage was cut off in his Bellwoods riding. "Mr. Hepburn made you people pay for his dislike for me", he added.

The meeting got out of hand several times.

Charging them with being "paid hirelings of Hugh Plaxton, M.P.," Louis Berstein, chairman of the meeting, tried to silence a dozen hecklers. He asserted the disturbers were paid $10 to break up the meeting. The allegation came during one of the frequent periods of verbal wrangling.

Plaxton lost the riding nomination as official Liberal candidate to Arthur Roebuck, M.P.P. The hecklers angrily shouted "The convention was packed", and kept up a running tirade of boos and catcalls attacking the several speakers.

"Shut up, you", ordered Bernstein above the uproar. "I will not", a heckler countered. "I'm a member of this riding and I have a right to speak in this meeting". This sally was greeted by a burst of cheering from the group of disturbers.

"These people", said Mr. Bernstein, pointing at the hecklers, "are paid hirelings of Hugh Plaxton. He gave them $10 to come down here and break up this meeting."

"Shame", chorused the Roebuck supporters. "Boo", countered the Plaxton men and women.

Never Regretted Resigning

Mr. Roebuck declared he had never regretted resigning from the Ontario Cabinet. "In fact," he added with a smile, "I think it was the finest thing that ever happened to me. I came out from among them," he said, quoting from the Scriptures.

"And what did the Premier of this Province do in retaliation?" he asked. "He cut off all patronage to Bellwoods riding. At Christmas time, when extra help was needed in the liquor stores, not one Liberal in Bellwoods got a job. Mr. Hepburn made you people pay for his dislike of me."

"Dirty work" cried a member of the audience. "True," replied Mr. Roebuck "Dirty work is the right term to describe what he did."

The former Attorney-General called his former leader "one of the gold dust twins—the other is Col. George Drew" for the part he played in the vote of censure on the war effort of Prime Minister

A committee consisting of Aldermen Haig, Butler, Rollins and Logan was recommended to interview the Public Utilities Commission in regard to the serious condition confronting the gas department and its resultant consequence to the citizens generally.

General Gunn Predicts Nation-Wide Support For Legion's Appeal

Determination to prevent the misunderstandings and injustices that occurred after the first Great War is the driving power behind the program of welfare work being carried out on behalf of Canada's fighting men by The Canadian Legion War Services, states Major-General John A. Gunn, of Toronto, president of the Legion's wartime undertaking.

Reason for the difficulties that attended demobilization after last conflict was the failure to provide for the crises that were to follow. The theme of the Legion's efforts, therefore, centres around its education set-up which gives men a chance to prepare for peace.

"Every night, in Canada and overseas, men are studying in anticipation of that day when they can return and fill useful places in peacetime society," General Gunn says. "In addition to education, our personal services branch looks after the problems which men cannot handle alone. Entertainment, recreation and other necessary services are also being provided. The whole program of the Legion is compact and is being administered by men who know what was needed 25 years ago, and what their younger comrades need now.

"A twofold purpose is being served," he states. "First, it is an important factor in winning the war. A man worried by problems does not make a good soldier or airman. Our services are helping him to give his mind to Canada's biggest job at the moment. And then when that job is done, he will have been given help in planning what is going to happen to him when he gets out of the army."

General Gunn emphasizes that the entire organization of the Canadian Legion, representative of 175,000 veterans of the last war, is behind the new undertakings. With such a vote of confidence from its own members, coupled with the official endorsation of the Governor-General and the Department of National Defence, he anticipates that the public of Canada will respond generously when the Legion launches its nation-wide appeal for $500,000 on Feb. 12.

MRS. EARL DICKEY
(Corbyville)

After a brief illness Mrs. Earl Dickey, late residence Corbyville, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Thursday, Feb. 15th.

The late Mrs. Dickey, who was in her 34th year, was born in Corbyville and resided there all her life. Prior to her marriage she was Miss Jane Badgley, daughter of Mrs. Badgley and the late James Badgley. By many friends she was held in high esteem and to them her sudden passing has brought sincere regret. In religion she was a member of the United Church at Cannifton.

Surviving her are her husband and an infant daughter; her mother Mrs. James Badgley; one brother, Mr. Arthur Badgley, South Euclid, Ohio; two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Palmer, Cannifton, and Mrs. Arthur Plumpton, Frankford; a half sister, Mrs. Frank Vesterfelt, Cordova Mines.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE ESLI TERRILL
(Wooler)

This Friday afternoon the funeral of Esli Terrill took place from his late residence in Wooler to the Friends' Church where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. Harry Perry. Many friends were present at the service.

Interment was made in the Friends' cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Farley Montgomery, Roy Sharpe, Elwood Fox, George Pollard, Lorne Hubble and Clayton Powell.

FISHERMEN'S FATE STILL UNKNOWN

Auxiliary Fishing Schooner Caught in Gale Off Yarmouth, N.S., and Disappears

Yarmouth, N.S., Feb. 16 (CP)—Fate of five fishermen aboard the Yarmouth schooner Seretha somewhere on the heaving Atlantic off Yarmouth was unknown today.

The Seretha, a 65-foot auxiliary fishing schooner, was caught in a gale of near hurricane velocity that swept the south shore of Nova Scotia Wednesday night. She put to sea Wednesday noon and headed for the fishing banks about 20 miles off Cape Forchu. She was due back in port that night.

The Gertrude L. Thebaud, famed racing Gloucesterman, reported she had sighted the Seretha Wednesday before snow cast a white shroud that cut off visibility. The Gertrude L. Thebaud tied up here for safety when the storm roared down the coast.

The Canadian government steamship Laurenthian with Captain McLean in command, scoured the seas. Captain McLean said he could find no trace of the missing vessel.

Aboard the Seretha under Captain George Nugay of Yarmouth are William Muise and Arthur Farrington of Yarmouth, the cook Albert Surrette of Surrette's Island, near here, and Bernard Cotreau of nearby Amiraultss Hill.

Collie Dog Keeps Faithful Watch At Hospital

A faithful watch is being kept outside the steps of the Belleville General Hospital by a collie dog. For three days the dog, strange to the neighborhood, had taken a position before the hospital entrance. It may go as far away as the Nurses' Residence or to Miss Jones' home across the road, but it soon finds its way back again to continue its patient waiting. Some member of the family, a child perhaps, in the household where the dog is a pet, must be ill, and the collie refuses to leave the spot until his friend comes out. The dog appears to come from a farm home, from the type of collar it is wearing.

NOMINATION DAY FOR LIBERALS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Candidate Will be Chosen and Other Business Transacted — Annual Meeting Held

OFFICERS ELECTED

Nomination Day for the Liberals of Hastings South will be held in Belleville on Wednesday, February 21st, this date being approved at the annual meeting of the Liberal Association in the Clubrooms on Front Street, Thursday afternoon. E. M. Roach, President of the Association, presided and there was a representation from every poll in the riding and at the conclusion of the meeting a general meeting was held in which the aspects of the campaign were discussed.

The Association went on record of affirming their loyalty and unstinted appreciation of Rt. Hon. William Lyons Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada in his conduct of the war and a resolution to the effect will be forwarded to the Prime Minister from the Association. A letter of condolence will be forwarded to Lady Tweedsmuir in the death of her beloved and devoted husband, the former Governor-General of the Dominion who died on Sunday last from an injury sustained in a fall. Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, who presented the resolution stated that Lord Tweedsmuir was beloved, by all walks of life in Canada and since his sojourn here had made himself one of us. "His death is deeply deplored," said Col. Vanderwater.

At the election of officers the entire slate of officers were re-elected with E. M. Roach, Deseronto, as President, Dr. Jack Farley, Trenton, Vice-President, A. H. Ketcheson, Belleville, Secretary-Treasurer; lady Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater and Mrs. Stewart Dies and the executive, the President of each municipality in the riding. The meeting favored the work done by the executive during the time of office and placed confidence in their ability to lead the riding in the coming election.

The executive held a meeting at the conclusion of the regular meeting and passed a resolution thanking Charles A. Cameron, K.C. for his conduct of affairs in the riding during the past five years and congratulated him on his elevation to a judgeship.

A weaving crouching challenger whose unorthodox style of boxing kept the lethal fists of Champion Joe Louis from his vulnerable parts during fifteen rounds of hug-me-tight fighting and who starts the first round with the steps of an Irish jig and keeps it up during the entire fight is seen in the Louis-Godoy fight pictures now being shown at the Capitol Theatre.

Godoy, Chilean boxing ideal, gives a fine exhibition of infighting and his weaving style that kept him inside the rapier-like lefts and man-killing right of the champion, which flashes periodically in an ineffectual attempt to hang a K.O. on the elusive Latin's chin, keeps the fans on edge throughout the entire fifteen rounds, all of which are shown on the screen.

There is little if any of the toe-to-toe slugging one would expect in a bout of this nature, but the screen effectively shows the sort of fight Godoy had been instructed to put up against the Brown Bomber.

At times the bout resembles a hugging match, with the Chilean weaving under the champion's fists to get into closer quarters. He uses his head literally as well as figuratively, in practically all of the rounds shown. However, the pictures give a clear detailed view of the fight which astounded fight fans of two continents.

Close-ups show the poker-faced champion showing slight traces of disgust at times, while the dancing Godoy gives a ring description of Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire and Bill Robinson all rolled into one at the end of each round.

At the end of the fifteenth round, his true Latin temperament asserts itself and he bestows several hearty kisses on the cheek of the Sepia Slugger, whose immobile features finally relax into something that resembles a grin for the only time during the entire fight.

There is some smart boxing, some clever dodging and a few solid socks handed out by both fighters but on the whole the fans will get more of the humorous than the serious side of the fight.

However, it is excellent screen fare and one of the best fight pictures shown in many a moon.

Kinsmen to Celebrate Founding of Club Next Tuesday Night

An important milestone in the history of the Kinsmen Clubs Association of Canada will be reached on Tuesday night, when the service club organization will celebrate the 20th. anniversary of its birth.

Clubs all over Canada will join in the general celebration with synchronized programs, an important feature of which will be the culmination of a membership drive in which it is hoped the association membership will be increased. The present membership is 2700.

Members of the Belleville club will join with others in assisting to boost the membership. Every member has been asked to bring a potential member to the anniversary banquet which will be held in the New Queens Hotel and at which B. C. Sisler will deliver a special address.

Of special interest to local Kinsmen is the fact that residing in Belleville at the present time is the first secretary of the first club formed in Canada, in the person of Mr. Sisler, manager of the Dominion Bank branch here. Mr. Sisler is one of the original founders of the Kinsmen Club movement in the Dominion and worked in conjunction with its first president and founder, Mr. Hal Rogers, in Hamilton.

Tyre and Dunagie Just Another Way of Spelling Tyendinaga

An old adage claims there is nothing in a name, that a rose would smell as sweet if it were called a cabbage, or words to that effect, but sometimes well-meaning newspaper reporters do get the spelling mixed up a bit.

For instance the following excerpt taken from the Dundalk Herald of recent issue had some of the staff of this paper guessing until the office boy hit upon the correct solution.

"Born in the township of Tyre and Dunagie, Hastings County, he came to Proton Township on Oct. 6th, 1874."

That township name had the boys guessing. They puzzled and guessed and finally decided that perhaps the name of the county was erroneous, until the office boy suddenly informed them that the township referred to was "Tyendinaga."

Rawdon

Rawdon—On Friday afternoon the annual world day of prayer service sponsored by the inter-board committee of the Women's Missionary Societies of Canada was held for Rawdon circuit at Mount Pleasant United Church with twenty four in attendance.

The printed program was prepared by Misses Muriel and Doris Lester founders of Kingsley Hall in the east end of London.

The program was interspersed with vocal solos by Mrs. Clifford Clancy of Wellman's "God's love will never forget". Mrs. Will Heath of Bethel "Prayer the key to heaven" and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver, Mount Pleasant "Spirit Divine". Mount Pleasant choir rendered "Fount of light."

Mrs. Israel Clancy gave a missionary reading "Sermons in everyday life". Rev. J. E. Beckel, pastor of the circuit brought a timely message to all based on "The missionary needs of the day."

Seated on the platform were Mrs. Harold Elliott, president of Bethel Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Clifford Clancy representing Wellman's Women's Missionary Society and Mrs. Percy MacMullen, president of Mount Pleasant W.M.S.

The program was arranged by Mrs. MacMullen and the service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Percy Hubble.

Following the call to worship, Mrs. MacMullen and three visiting ladies read the response. The hymns as outlined were sung and Mrs. Morris Rose read the Bible lesson found in John 15-1-16.

In the period of intercession the six prayers were ably given by Mrs. Frank Smith, Mr. C. U. Heath, Mrs. Allan Bailey, Mrs. James Sharp, Mrs. Cyrus Summers and Rev. Beckel followed by a prayer in time of war.

The offering was gathered by Mrs. M. Rose and Miss Eileen MacMullen and dedicated by Mrs. Elliott and after expense of programs was deducted the sum of one dollar and twenty five cents was remitted to Miss Bessie MacMurchy, Toronto, treasurer of the inter board committee. The offerings from this special service are used for Christian literature in all lands.

Up to the present time the scriptures has been printed in more than one thousand languages and dialects.

Mr. and Mrs. George Montgomery and Douglas, Mr. Jim Montgomery, Frankford,. Mrs. J. A. Montgomery and daughter Naomi of Dundonald were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Montgomery on Sunday.

Mrs. Blanche Milsap and son Billy of Napanee spent Friday with Mr. James Williams.

Over twenty from Mount Pleasant Rawdon Young People's Union attended the skating party at Stirling on Thursday evening and report a good outing.

Mrs. Will Thompson, Wellman's, is ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. H. Ashley, West Huntingdon.

Mrs. Roy Walker arrived home from Belleville Hospital and is slowly recuperating. Mrs. Don Heath of Bethel is spending some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Walker, Seymour.

Wellman's Young People's Union held their regular meeting Tuesday evening with Miss Carlyn Johnson in charge. Mr. Owen Sharp read the Scripture lesson and the guest speaker was Mr. Ralph Campbell of Marsh Hill who gave a general outline of the work of the Young People's Union and the recent winter school held at Bridge Street, Rev. J. E. Beckel conducted a bible questionnaire and the leader read a selection.

Owing to road conditions the regular Young People's meeting was cancelled on Friday evening at Mount Pleasant.

Several motor cars have been stuck in the snow in the concession roads and a team of horses was necessary to pull the cars out of the snow bank. On Friday three cars found it hard going to travel from White's corner to Scott's corner with the aid of men and shovels. By the time Sunday rolled around the road became worse and while one car did finally manage to plough through to the morning service at Mount Pleasant the driver decided to travel home by way of Stirling. The folks from Bethel who attended the World Day of Prayer service at Mount Pleasant travelled via Stirling and good roads.

On Monday motor travel on the byways was at a standstill. On closing just a word of warning, don't get in a hurry to go anywhere if you live off the main thoroughfare where snow ploughs are not the order of the day.

Eight ladies of Wellman's Women's Association met at the home of Mrs. John Heagle on Tuesday and quilted a quilt.

Master Boby Donnan, West Huntingdon, is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. James Sharp.

Miss Alice Morrison of Bethel spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith.

About a dozen from Mount Pleasant attended the funeral of Mr. Elgin Jackman in Stirling on Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Clarence Runnalls of Harold spent a few days last week with her daughter Mrs. Lindsay McKeown who was ill.

Miss Marion Phillips spent last week in Belleville with her sisters Mrs. Harry Brooks and Miss Winnie Phillips.

MR. C. A. CAMERON NEW COUNTY JUDGE

The appointment of Mr. Charles A. Cameron, K.C., member of the last Parliament of Canada for the riding of Hastings South, to be judge of the County Court for Hastings, in succeeding His Honor Judge G. E. Deroche who has retired after a long and honorable career on the Bench, will be popular with the people of the county and the city where Mr. Cameron has lived since he came here to practise law about twenty years ago. From all sides regardless of political leanings, messages of congratulation have been showered upon Mr. Cameron and the warmth of these greetings on his appointment is proof of the high standing he occupies in the minds and hearts of the people of the community.

The new judge enjoys the respect of the entire community as a citizen and as a member of the bar. He has had a long and successful career at law and in legal circles here and throughout the country his opinion is highly regarded. He has devoted no small share of his time and energy to enterprises and philanthropies of a community character and has been associated with the chief agencies which make for the best things in life. To these interests he has devoted himself for the sake of the community and constituency and the broader appeals of the church and associated organizations have always found in him a willing worker and supporter. He has in his public life had a grasp of Dominion problems just as he has in the community understood local problems. He is the type of man who inspires confidence in everyone with whom he has come in contact and he maintains that confidence. He possesses the quality of friendship in no small degree and the popularity and esteem of which he is the subject is something of which any man should be proud. He served his Country and the Empire for four years during the World War.

In the position of judge of the county court which he will occupy, Mr. Cameron will have opportunity for the exercising of the fine talents he possesses, the knowledge he has gained at the bar, his sense of fairmindedness and of devotion to duty, and the sterling qualities which he has always shown as a citizen and a man.

JUDGE DEROCHE'S LONG, DISTINGUISHED CAREER ON BENCH

His Honour Judge G. E. Deroche, who has retired as County Court Judge for Hastings after serving in that capacity for thirty-two years, has given devoted service on the Bench which has been marked not only by the length of time during which he has filled this office but also by the fine record he holds among the county judiciary of the Province. Painstaking to a marked degree, gifted with keeness of mind and clearness of view and strengthened by the wisdom which has been gained by a lifelong time spent at law and on the County Court Bench, Judge Deroche has made a record of which not only he himself but the Province at large and the members of the county judiciary of Ontario must be proud.

He has always been held in highest regard in his judicial capacity. Elevated to the Bench while still a young lawyer he soon proved his peculiar qualifications for the office for he possesses a sense of thoroughness, clearness of view, soundness of judgment, and a wide knowledge of law and human nature. Throughout his career on the Bench he has performed the duties of the office with the closest regard to the responsibilities of the position and he has also been called upon to perform very important special duties for which his fine record eminently fitted him.

In the retirement of His Honour Judge Deroche the county judiciary of Ontario loses an outstanding judge, the dean of judges, in the history of the county courts. He has been and will remain an example for other members of the Bench for his sound judgments. With the members of the Bar he has always been highly regarded throughout his life as barrister and later as judge.

CANADIANS SHOW CONFIDENCE WITH THEIR MONEY

More than 178,000 individual Canadian subscribers made up the first war loan of $200,000,000. With conversions of March 1st maturities of other loans the total reached $250,000,000.

In many cases where a single subscription was put in by an employer on behalf of a large number of his employees and so the total number of subscribers will ultimately be shown as considerably higher.

How this money was subscribed is interesting to note. There were 178,363 separate subscriptions with an average of $1,327 each. Of this total number of subscriptions, 172,331 or 96.6 per cent were for amounts from $50 to $5,000 with an average of $664.

Allotments of subscriptions from private individuals exclusive of corporations and dealers accounted for $157,821,950 or 63 per cent of the loan. Almost two-thirds of the $250,000,000 came from private subscribers.

There were no less than 121,407 orders for $500 and under with an average of $235 each.

Finance Minister Ralston finds the greatest satisfaction with this particular classification. The response of the small investor and the widespread distribution constitute a remarkable testimonial to the strength of Canada's economy and to the unity of the Canadian people behind the prosecution of the war, he pointed out. It is a happy augury for Canada's wartime financing and a special confirmation of the wisdom of the government's decision to make war savings certificates available in the near future for a systematic and continuing program of savings and investment by the general public.

The full strength of money which the people offered was in fact $374,576,850 and of this the $250,000,000 was allotted. The first war loan of the First Great War had only 24,862 subscribers.

SINKING OF U-BOATS GOES ON APACE

Germany in both conflicts in the past twenty-five years has shown that her greatest obstacle is the power of the nation that can keep the seas clear and close them to her. Britain, an island power, has now an empire because her people were venturesome and seafaring and energetic.

Germany in the last war had a fleet of battleships which did little except to get themselves bottled up and of submarines. In this war she is devoting attention to submarines from the start and to her pocket battleships though the latter have fallen away into a far second place. She uses the U-boat, the mine-laying plane and the magnetic mine, whose purpose is the same, destruction of Allied shipping.

Naturally German U-boats have been the aim of British attack. From the opening days of the war there have been many official reports of the sinking of Nazi submarines. Again Britain has delivered a heavy blow at the Nazis as two more of the U-boats have been reported by the Admiralty as sunk. This is the second time within the week that two German submarines have been reported destroyed.

So goes on the toll at sea. These blows must be making a big dent in the fleet of U-boats. The First Lord of the Admiralty stated on Wednesday that within a month or six weeks a very great measure of protection will be afforded to British seamen. This is believed to hint at arming of every British vessel, large or small, with anti-aircraft guns to defend them against German bombers and machine-gunners who have attacked all sorts of shipping in the North Sea.

One of the German victim submarines had sunk a British freighter, the Sultan Star, and survived its victim only half an hour.

MANY NEW THINGS UNDER THE SUN

An apparatus used hitherto only in the physics research laboratory for weighing atoms has been put to work in industry to determine whether oil is present deep in the earth. Engineers at New York this week were told details of the atom-weigher or mass-spectrograph which separates the twins of atoms in accordance with their mass, though the difference between them is of the order of billionths of billionths of a milligram. Herbert Hoover, Jr., son of the former President of the United States, has used this sensitive instrument in separating and indentifying minute amounts of gases that have seeped up to the surface over a period of hundreds of millions of years from hidden oil wells 10,000 feet below. The gas appearing in volume not more than the pinhead, serves as a code message, revealing the presence of the hidden wealth, with an accuracy better than plus or minus 5 per cent of each of the constituents.

Now this is highly technical to most people. Only a scientist knows how to invent such devices and how to use them, but the great mass of mankind is vitally interested for the oil supply revealed by such a device is of great value in the every day life of all the people. The oil and other products are great factors in modern civilization.

The same is true of all branches of research particularly in research into foods, into the causes of disease and in the search for cures. The expert is first of all needed and soon the knowledge he wrests secrets from nature which affect every individual man and woman in their health and consequently their life.

This same spirit of research by the expert affects every phase of life. It makes possible new methods of building houses, makes possible a myriad of synthetic products which the world has never known before, it affects one's pleasures as it has done in the motion pictures and in other discoveries which have been utilized for entertainment and instruction.

The whole world is indebted to those who probe deeply in the laws of nature and bring new knowledge and products into the homes of the world for mankind's use.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Germany's undersea fleet paid a terrific price for the sinking of a few merchant ships in the past few days. No less than four submarines were destroyed in six days, according to a statement from the British Admiralty.

Despite the fact that Germany entered the war with a large submarine fleet the Allies appear to have effective means of combatting the undersea ships. They have been troublesome but never the menace they proved in the First Great War.

Air bombing and mine-laying has given the defenders of the ships entering and leaving British ports more worry than submarines but all three together have so far failed to impede the transport of supplies from overseas nor the movements of troops from Canada, New Zealand and Australia.

While it is too early to assume the perils of sea-warfare have been brought under control, the regularity with which submarines are sunk when they disclose their whereabouts, the destruction of the Graf Spee and the known limitations of aircraft as an offensive weapon against ships, combine to provide reasonable assurance for the immediate future.

Losses on the scale suffered so far are unlikely to starve Britain into bargaining for peace.

Letters to the Editor

FLAG ETIQUETTE

"Editor, Ontarion Intelligencer,

"Belleville, Ontario,

"February 15th., 1940.

"Dear Sir,—

Although only an amateur yachtsman, connected with one of our Canadian Yacht Clubs, which possesses a Royal Charter, I did manage to pick up a kindergarden knowledge of flag etiquette. I am, however, not at all positive that the rules and regulations that govern the flying of flags on the water can be considered to apply ashore, although I am assured that certain basic regulations apply to both cases.

"However, in the case of the flying of the Union Jack or Ensign, it is contrary to all regulations, and considered very bad form to fly these flags, between sunset and sunrise at the mast head. So far as I can ascertain this also applies to "half-masting". Still, each morning this week, I have seen the Union Jack flying before sunrise on the local post office, the city hall, and one of the local public schools, having been flown all night. Unless I am misinformed, this is out of step with established practice and customs and, in Great Britain, would be a serious breach of etiquette, especially so in war time.

"I have not seen any of these flags actually raised, but I would like to feel that the operation is properly carried out. In setting the Union Jack at half mast, it would be sent up "flying", not furled or in stops, but flying, right to the mast head, and then lowered about one width of the flag, or a trifle more, to the proper half mast position. In lowering, the flag should just be mast headed, and then lowered. To carry out these operations in any other manner is exhibiting a lack of respect for the flag, unless of course, one is ignorant of the customs that apply to this rather important operation.

"I feel that the proper persons should be advised of these matters, in order that this city should not become the laughing stock of those people who are better informed.

"Yachtsman".

"Belleville, Feb. 14.

"Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,

"Dear Sir,—

"Please give me space in your paper for a few words concerning the troops, now in Aldershot, England. I read a few nights ago with some feeling of the loneliest soldier in Aldershot. Through that story in the paper I now read where he is about to receive many parcels and some five hundred letters. Not with any prejudice towards this boy for receiving so many letters from those who are stranger to him I write this letter for publication so that the public can see there is not only one lonely soldier at Aldershot but many as I have a son, my only child, who answered the call at the first outbreak of war and call for volunteers. He left home and loved ones a few days before Christmas with H. and P. E. Regiment from Picton to spend his first Christmas away from home. Since that time many letters have been sent him. Some while he was still in the ocean in hopes that they would be forwarded so as my son would receive them shortly after his arrival. Many more letters also papers and boxes of gifts and tobacco have been sent through the "Base Post Office at Ottawa", from the folks back home and as yet up to the time of his last letter written home, dated January 25, he has not received one letter from home. Which you must admit would bring a lonely feeling with no mail from home while other all around are receiving letters, etc. I cannot understand the delay as I receive his mail from camp. I voice the feeling of dozens of mothers and wives whose loved ones I hear are not receiving the mail from home. Such letters would be a great comfort to the boys who are doing their bit.

"I write this so the public can see there is not only one lonely soldier at Aldershot but many there not receiving their mail as letters and boxes have been sent and have had ample time to reach the boys in camp.

"Thanking you for the space in your paper, I remain,

"A 'Lonely Soldier's Mother'."

DRIVE TO REACH PROROGATION

Balked on previous occasions by the rule which prevents a private member introducing a resolution requiring the expenditure of money, Col. Hunter yesterday rose to a question of "public importance" and made his plea for help to Finland.

Time for Action

"What Canadian could ever hold up his head again if he were to allow the debauch of murder of Finland?" asked Col. Hunter. "No victory that the years will bring to us will ever resuscitate a destroyed Poland or a massacred Finland, Now is the time for action. It is your money or gallant Finland's life."

Col. Hunter said he wished no secret to be made of the fact he was aiding recruiting for Finland.

"We, who here, are helping Finland as best we may to survive, hope to have the facilities of the training and equipment of our own military and aviation forces granted to us in some manner and I may say that we are not without some measure of hope in this regard.

May Never be Another Budget Claim

"Without such semi-official assistance we will be compelled to send these splendid young Canadian aviators and other volunteers to United States or some commercial training school to complete their final training before going overseas. Every penny subscribed is of vital use.

"On two occasions I have attempted to move in this House a resolution asking this Legislature to put into effect its obvious desire for a vigorous prosecution of the war by granting immediately a generous credit to Finland. Unfortunately Rule 112 prevents a private member from introducing such motions.

"I would therefore request the government notwithstanding deficits or inability to balance budgets—and if Finland is destroyed there may never be another budget in Ontario—to show themselves and their critics that they really mean business by granting forthwith a substantial sum for the purpose of training, equipment and dispatch of aid to Finland.

"I may say as an example, that $1,000,000 will enable us with such other funds as we can obtain elsewhere to dispatch a complete division and the division is ready today to go."

Premier Follows Text

No man was being accepted for service in Finland who had not previously been refused entry into the Canadian Active Service Force, said Col. Hunter.

Col. Hunter said there was hope the facilities of the Canadian military establishment would be granted for the training of airmen for Finland.

Premier Hepburn took 75 minutes to deliver his budget address, in which an interim deficit of $4,444,929 was reported but a surplus of $356,000 for the coming year was forecast.

The Premier followed his text carefully and made but one important interpolation. He announced that motor vehicle licenses, which now expire March 31, would henceforth expire Dec. 31. Licenses purchased at the end of March, 31, would henceforth expire Dec. 31. Licenses purchased at the end of March this year, therefore, will be good for only nine months.

Estimates Show Reduction

The estimates presented along with the budget show reductions in most departments and ordinary expenditure for the fiscal year to begin April 1 were forecast at $88,694,970. Ordinary revenues were estimated at $89,051,209, the Premier budgeting for a surplus of $356,239 on the next fiscal year.

Included in the estimate reductions was a cut of one-half mill in the municipal subsidy which in 1939 was raised to a mill and a half. It now goes back to a mill. This subsidy is paid on the general rateable assessment of every municipality in Ontario. The Premier reminded the House that whereas in the last war municipalities were taxed one mill for war purposes, in the present one they were getting a subsidy of one mill to help them over their financial troubles.

Several Amendments

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, introduced several amendments to the Municipal Act, one aimed at preventing repetition of a situation which arose at Windsor recently when Mayor David Croll, at odds with a majority of the council, refused to call a special meeting when asked.

The amendment provides that the municipal clerk shall call such a meeting on the petition of a council majority and that, if the mayor or head of the council should refuse to act at such a meeting, the council may appoint a presiding officer to have all the powers ordinarily exercised by the council head.

A minor amendment would provide that a school trustee may become a candidate for a municipal council if he resigns from the school board on or before nomination day. The present statute requires resignation three days before nomination day.

May Amend Cemetery Act

Allan Lamport (Lib. Toronto-St. Davids) moved to amend the law governing cemeteries to give local councils some control, in conjunction with the Provincial Health Department, over the location and extension of cemeteries.

Compulsory pasteurization of milk in Ontario has been justified by the reduced incidence of typhoid and undulant fever and by reduced infant mortality from diarrhoea and enteritis, it was said in the 1939 report of the Ontario Health Department tabled in the Legislature.

Effective battles were being waged on tuberculosis and on social diseases, the report said. More adequate treatment was being given those suffering from the latter.

Increased care of expectant mothers was showing results. Deaths among pregnant women "were markedly lower than in any previous year."

BELL TELEPHONES REACH HIGHEST TOTAL ON RECORD

785,455 Telephones in Use in Ontario and Quebec Service of Bell Telephone Company

EARNINGS STEADY

An all-time high in the number of Bell telephones in service in Ontario and Quebec, a substantial increase in the amount paid out for wages during the past year as compared with 1938, and net earnings per share about equivalent to the previous year's figure, are shown in the 60th annual report of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada for the year ending December 31, 1939, which has just been issued.

Revenues Higher

Local and long distance revenue was higher than during the previous year, but miscellaneous income declined. Revenue from local service totalled $31,302,131 in 1939, an increase of 2.6 per cent over 1938; long distance revenue was $9,675,769, an increase of 7.7 per cent; miscellaneous revenues and other income aggregated $2,160,162, a decrease of 1.2 per cent. Gross revenue from all sources amounted to $43,138,062, an increase of $1,443,063, or 3.5 per cent.

Expenses Up

Operation and maintenance expenses were $718,981 higher, or 3.5 per cent above the 1938 figure. This increase was due mainly to the cost of maintaining the added plant and equipment required to meet additional service demands, and to higher contributions to the employees' pension fund. Taxes, including taxes on non-operating income, amounted to $3,113,000 in 1939, an increase of $89,616, and equalled $4.03 per telephone.

Earnings Steady

After allowing for depreciation, interest, income taxes, etc., net income totalled $6,509,448, equal to $8.09 per share of average outstanding capital stock, as compared with $6,449,380 or $8.10 per share, reported for 1938. After payment of dividends, 69,110 was added to earned surplus in 1939 against $78,-963 in 1938.

Telephones at New Peak

At the end of the year, there were 785,455 Bell telephones in service in Ontario and Quebec, of which 277,634 were business and 507,821 residence instruments. The year's net gain of 20,600, as compared with 18,904 in 1938, brought the total number of telephones in service to an all-time high, the previous maximum of 784,796 having been attained in December, 1930. In order to accomplish this gain, 193,983 telephones were connected and 173,383 disconnected during 1939.

Wages and Benefits

During the year, the company paid out $16,928,845 in wages to its 9,711 employees, the majority of whom (5,008) are women. An amount of $680,615 was disbursed for benefits and pensions, the total number of cases being 3,127. Wages were $132,-264 higher than in 1938, and pension and benefit payments exceeded the previous year's figure by $107,-747.

A Canadian Company

Over 93 per cent of the company's shareholders reside in Canada and they hold 68.4 per cent of the outstanding stock. In this connection the report says:

"As of December 31, 1939, there were 20,584 shareholders, a decrease of 16 during the year. Those living in Canada number 19,193 or 93.2 per cent, and hold 68.4 per cent of the outstanding stock. Over 86 per cent of all shareholders reside in Ontario and Quebec.

"The percentage of shareholders residing in the United Kingdom and other parts of the British Empire is 2.2 holding 4.0 per cent of the stock, while 4.6 per cent of shareholders live in the United States and other foreign countries and hold 27.6 per cent of stock. The latter figure includes the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's holding of 23.2 per cent."

J. R. Pickering Addresses Stirling Community Club

The regular monthly meeting of Stirling Community Welfare Club took place in the Community Service Building on Tuesday evening when the guest speaker was Mr. J. R. Pickering, School Inspector of South Hastings. The dinner prepared and served by the ladies of the Stirling Women's Institute brought forth many favorable comments from the club members, Mr. E. Sarles, President of the Club capably directed the program. Rev. W. H. V. Walker returned thanks and throughout the dinner hour the duties of sergeant-at-arms and song leader were carried out by Harold Wells and Art Duncan respectively. Mr. Fred Houchin presided at the piano.

Memorial to Lord Tweedsmuir

Directly after the toast to the King the President asked all members to rise and joined in a brief and silent tribute to the late Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir. During the business session of the meeting reports of the membership committee, the treasurer and the general secretary were given by Messrs E. G. Bailey, J. E. O'Donnell and H. E. Hulin.

Speaker is J. R. Pickering

Introduced to the club members by Mr. Lewis Bird, Mr. J. R. Pickering, Public School Inspector for South Hastings gave a very educational address on "The lives and works of Canadian Poets." As an introduction to his subject the speaker suggested that all men are not lovers of poetry but the humour of modernized verse has a lasting appeal.

Outstanding among Canadian poets of the 20th Century are such men as our own Ontario born Wilfred Campbell who after several years in the ministry of the Canadian Church of England entered the civil service at Ottawa. A student of natural beauty this writer could paint in poetic lines the visions that thrilled him. One of the finest portrayals of life in the Ottawa valley is depicted by him in his famous poem "Indian Summer."

The picturesque Ottawa Valley was also an inspiration to Duncan Campbell Scott who studied the quiet flow of the Ottawa River, heard the bells of Hull in the distance and pictured the whole scene for others when he penned the famous lines of "The end of a day". Mr. Drummond of Quebec was born in Ireland but from the land of his adoption came the inspiration for his fine works, his French Canadian dialect verses will live long. Frederick George Scott, though a born Canadian wrote very little that was distinctly Canadian. He was enthralled by the thoughts and truths of the ages and wrote with a philosophical trend. Chas. G. D. Roberts, famous poet of today, now over eighty years old spends his summers in his native New Brunswick and writes with unsurpassed skill of New Brunswick hinterland. Bliss Carmen is outstanding for his portrayal of belief in the brotherhood of all Nature. His Easter Eve will remain forever a classic.

The knowledge of Canadian writers set forth by the speaker and the manner in which he presented several fine examples of their works made his address one of the most enjoyable heard at the club. The thanks of the organization were expressed briefly by F. R. Mallory. The final musical number was given by Jack McCann playing his own accompaniment on the guitar.

DEATH ACCIDENT JURY'S VERDICT

Driver of Car, Which Struck William Turner, Frankford, Exonerated at Inquest

Accidental death was the verdict of the coroner's jury looking into the death of the late William Turner of Trenton, when the adjourned coroner's inquest convened before Dr. J. J. Robertson, at the Court House Wednesday. The late Mr. Turner died in the Belleville General Hospital on February 12th., as the result of fatal injuries sustained when struck by a motor car in the village of Frankford on February 1st., last the jury found.

Raymond Johnson, Frankford taxi driver, stated in evidence, that the deceased man was walking in the centre of the road as he approached and gave warning with his motor car horn. "Apparently Mr. Turner became confused as he stepped aside and then walked directly back into the path of my car", stated Johnson. Dr. G. H. Stobie and Dr. R. M. Anderson testified as to the cause of death, while Constable Lockwood informed the jury as to his findings at the scene of the fatality. The jury found no blame was attached Mr. Johnson, who undoubtedly tried to avoid any accident, they held.

Acting Crown Attorney Ormonde Butler conducted the jury's investigation.

The coroner's jury as impanelled by Sergeant Arthur Booth was composed of Messrs. M. Davison, foreman, A. Wilkinson, G. Blue, W. Harden and Don Cook. The adjourned inquest will be held at the Court House.

Groundwork Being Laid for Nation-Wide Drive by the Y. M. C. A. For Funds to Finance War Work

John B. Frosst, Chairman Executive and Finance Committee of "Y" War Services Addresses Gathering of Business and Professional Men at Quinte Hotel on Thursday

ALL Y.M.C.A. BUILDINGS OPEN TO TROOPS

"We who are not actually at the front prepared to make the last sacrifice if necessary, can at least give, give and still give of our time and money over here. If we don't give, then we are turning a deaf ear to very obvious necessities," John B. Frosst, chairman Executive and Finance Committee, National War Services of the Y.M.C.A., Montreal, declared here yesterday.

Speaking before a representative gathering of business, industrial, professional, ministerial, service club, and other city organization heads, in the Hotel Quinte, the speaker laid the groundwork for the forthcoming nation-wide Y.M.C.A. drive for funds to finance its work in the present war. He urged that the local Y.M.C.A. extend its activities within the large district it covers so that contact be made with outlying points of nearby branches.

Reviews Work in War

Mr. Frosst proceeded to give a review of the Y's work during the last war, with a resume of endorsations of its activities given by the late Lord Tweedsmuir, the late General Sir Arthur Currie the present Minister of National Defence, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and other prominent Canadians.

He stressed the activities of his organization at the beginning and up to the present time in this conflict. All Y.M.C.A. buildings have been thrown open to troops across Canada; Red Triangle establishments have been created in many permanent training centres where, recreation, entertainment and canteens are catering to the necessities of the troops.

He spoke of the work now being done in London and France. Secretaries, all highly-trained men, are now with the Canadian divisions in England, where they have already done a splendid work. The new "Beaver Club" in London will be manned by Canadians prominent among whom will be representatives of the Y.M.C.A. In Aldershot camp, Y secretaries have already organized athletic leagues with equipment taken over with them. Great expansion is going on in Canada, he said, stressing the point that 67 air training centres will be in operation before long.

"Four and one-half millions were subscribed to the Y war-work by Canadians during the last war, and the records were never challenged," Mr. Frosst declared. "No one has ever said that the money was used for any other purpose than for the comfort and morale of the troops".

The prices charged in the last war by the Y.M.C.A. were set by the British High Command, he said. "True, there was a profit, but this was turned in and used for further expansion of the Y work. That work became so big that it became part of the army. Men were charged for their necessities when out at rest or in camp, but never when they were coming from the trenches or wounded. A few disgruntled ones complained but that was to be expected. Millions of cigarettes and tons of tobacco besides athletic equipment and a host of other things were distributed free of charge", he said.

Pays Tribute

He paid tribute to the four great organization which are carrying on war work exclusive of the Red Cross. These are the Canadian Legion, Y.M.C.A., the Salvation Army and the Knights of Columbus. All are doing a splendid work in their own spheres, he said.

A common question which will be asked, he said, is why did these organizations not merge and establish a national war chest? Other associations had been approached to this effect, but their organization and plans for campaigns had already been laid and the merger was not deemed feasible at the time.

Mr. Frosst was introduced by Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, chairman of the local War Service Committee of the Y.M.C.A. In his remarks of appreciation, Mr. MacLaurin urged that full organization be gone into immediately. "If organization is complete then we shall have no difficulty in securing the quota alloted us", he said. "We have a job to do, and our first act is to ask people to volunteer to do their share in organization".

On the same afternoon XII D defeated XII A and B with a score of 10-7, vainly but valiantly contested by Grade XIII.

On the twelfth, Grades XI C, D, E, and F played off with XI D and XI B—emerging the victors.

SOLDIER INJURED AT ALDERSHOT

Lance Corporal R. H. Durfy on Motorcycle Patrol Has Both Legs Broken

(By Edwin Johnson)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, Feb. 16—(CP-Cable)—Fate dealt a cruel blow to Lance-Corporal Robert H. Durfy of Ottawa, who lies in Cambridge hospital here with both legs broken and suffering from other injuries as a result of an early morning accident.

Durfy, formerly with the Royal Canadian Mounted police and now with the motorcycle squad of the Provost Company attached to the First Canadian Division, was knocked down by a truck while patrolling a slippery road during the blackout.

For a week Durfy had been looking forward to this day, for he was to start a leave which would have taken him to a liner from Canada which was bringing his wife, Elizabeth, a bride of two months. They were married the day before he sailed for England with the First Canadian Contingent.

Shocked by the news, Mrs. Durfy entrained immediately on landing for Aldershot where she greeted her apologetic but smiling husband in the hospital. She is taking up residence nearby and intends to visit him daily.

Surgeon Discloses Lord Tweedsmuir Had Skull Fractured When a Child

Montreal, Feb. 16—(CP)—Lord Tweedsmuir described a fractured skull he suffered at the age of four during a visit some time ago to the Montreal Neurological Institute, Dr. Wilder Penfield, one of the surgeons attending the Governor - General during his fatal illness, disclosed Wednesday.

"He told of how he lay seven days unconscious and of the trepanation that saved his life," said Dr. Penfield, speaking at a memorial meeting of the staff of the institution where two cranial operations were performed in an effort to save the Governor-General's life.

"He lingered in the operating room and inquired how we would go about such a procedure nowadays," Dr. Penfield said. "He showed an interest in everything, but most of all seemed fascinated by the operating room and the operative photographs placed there.'

Dr. Penfield said that during the first twenty-four hours after Lord Tweedsmuir's cerebral thrombosis he regained consciousness and recognized his family and spoke to them.

"He regained use of his paralyzed arm," the doctor said. "Had it not been for the secondary development of pressure he would have been quickly restored to effective and happy life. After the third desperate operation he was again beginning to move the extremities of both sides, and we thought we saw him entering a safe harbor. Then came the embolism from an unsuspected source, and with it a sudden end to it all.

"We in the profession of medicine fight many battles, but in the end we always come to a last one which goes against us. How we all of us wish we might have won this one."

Dr. Penfield remarked that "we have had in Canada a great man as Governor-General."

"He had that spark which flared up here 'to warm the world,' and now we have lost him."

Also speaking at the memorial service were Dr. William Cone and Dr. Jonathan Meakins, two others of the five physicians who attended the Governor-General. A benediction and prayer were said by Rev. David Scott.

Canadian Legion Campaign Gets Off To Splendid Start

Five hundred dollars, or one-quarter of the $2,000 quota allotted to Belleville in the half-million dollar Canadian Legion War Auxiliaries Inc. drive for funds has already found its way into the coffers of the campaign treasurer, officials of the local campaign announced today.

Twenty-two teams under captains which inaugurated the campaign a few days ago state that the response to the appeal has been very generous thus far. "People realize the importance of the work being undertaken by the Canadian Legion," members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch, who are sponsoring the local drive, said today, "and they are giving freely."

Only a small part of the city has been canvassed thus far and present indications point to a successful campaign. "We have every reason to expect that we will go over the top," one campaign official said today, "and our faith in the people of Belleville to not only back up the boys at the front, but to assist in looking after their welfare when the war is over, will be justified."

Galaxy of Skating Stars Dance Their Way Into Hearts Of Large Audience at Arena

Quinte Skating Club Stages Winter Ice Show With Outstanding Success

DELIGHTFUL SCENES

Members of Toronto Skating Club Give Splendid Exhibition in Special Numbers

Costumed in all the splendorous elegancy of beautiful Fairylanders and waltzing in perfect time to the harmonizing strains of melodious music, a galaxy of talented skating stars danced their way right into the appreciative hearts of 1,500 persons at the Hume Arena Thursday night as the Quinte Skating Club staged their Winter Ice Show. Featuring outstanding performers from the Toronto Skating Club and augmented by a no less talented supporting cast chosen from members of the Quinte Skating Club, the patrons were treated to the ultimate in ice-pageantry as the many varied numbers were reeled off with skill and without delay.

Long orange and blue streamers hanging from the lighting fixtures cast a softening glow over the arena and the ice surface was quaintly and appropriately decorated for the occasion, being completely enclosed with a tidy rustic fence, the skaters' entrance at one end and the orchestra dais at the other. Over the skaters' entrance, which was draped with long hanging curtains, an intermittent electric sign flashed the words, "Quinte Skating Club".

After an introductory melody played by Dan Fairman and his "Top Hatters", the Carnival swung quietly into action with a graceful foursome acting as a curtain raiser and doing some really difficult school figures. From then, right through the entire performance, an enthusiastic audience were treated to number after number staged with exotic beauty and effortless grace with the pageant "Over the Rainbow" literally stealing the show as the most appreciated spectacle of the evening.

Reproduce Fairy Tale

The reproduction of the kindergarten fairy tale, "Cinderella", won the plaudits of the audience as the beautiful costuming worn by the skaters showed up to advantage in the soft-hued lights. The scene opened with the orchestra playing appropriate music and Cinderella sitting at the fireplace, wishing that she might be allowed to attend the ball, which was being staged at the other end of the ice. The Fairy Godmother eventually permits Cinderella's attendance and, quite in keeping with the story, the Mice, the Cats and the Fairies were all there. Cinderella loses her slipper, it is found by Prince Charming and she skates quickly back to her fire-place as the clock strikes twelve.

Belleville's own queen of the ice blades, Miss Judy Scott, received a welcoming ovation as she skated on the ice for her single as did Miss Barbara Leslie and Ralph Griffin as they gracefully demonstrated the difficult art of fancy doubles skating.

Miss Shirley Halstead, of the Toronto Skating Club, who with her partner, Michael Kirby, won the Junior Doubles Championship at Ottawa recently, gave a finished exhibition of spins, leaps, pirouettes and glides in an almost unbelievably graceful manner. Wearing a fancy little white costume with a flared rose-trimmed skirt, she easily won the plaudits of the audience as the feature singles skater of the night.

"Roll out the Barrel", a comedy act presented by Jack Dickens and Douglas McBride, literally brought down the house in a hilarious exhibition of fun-making antics as they proceeded to demonstrate every way but the right way in which to stand on a pair of skates.

Blaze of Color

Depicting a scene which might very well take place in any small town during Festival Time, the "Street-Scene" was a blaze of gorgeously colored costumes as small children played and danced in the street to the musical strains played by a graceful "organ grinder", while Muriel Wardner, as "Balloon Woman" peddled her wares among the children.

Dressed in neat little costumes of nifty red sweaters and black skirts, Misses Judy Scott, Barbara Leslie, Ardell Smith and Helen Pepper went through a quadrille after which the orchestra swung into a waltz time, "Bells of Avalon", with members of the skating club taking part.

After the intermission, the Toronto Skating Club staged a Club Tenstep being followed by Michael Kirby in an exhibition deluxe of leaps, spins and glides to win the audience's approval.

The Quinte Eight staged a beautifully done exhibition of harmony skating, and dressed in picturesque costumes they swept from one formation into another to present a delightful spectacle. This was followed by re-enactment of "School Days", with teacher Jack Dickens having rather a "dickens" of a time enforcing discipline among his unruly pupils. Everyone seemed intent on getting the teacher's goat and he had more than his hands full in restoring order.

Showed Perfect Harmony

Miss Shirley Halstead and Mr. Michael Kirby of the Toronto Skating Club showed perfect harmony in their doubles number, doing many difficult movements in a pleasing manner. Dressed in contrasting costumes, they presented a lovely pictures as they swooped and glided in perfect time to the music. Clare "Mike" Ridley Belleville's male acrobat of the ice blades, followed and was greeted with enthusiasm as he appeared for his number. Wearing a trim tailored black costume, this local star displayed fine skating talent.

Easily the feature spectacle of the evening, the Fantasy "Over the Rainbow" won the loudest applause. Fifteen gorgeously costumed girls representing storm clouds were chased by the sun until finally the rainbow appeared with all the exquisite coloring of the real thing. A doubles skating movement by a perfectly matched harmony team, Miss Georgia Scott and Mr. Wm. Yarrow of Belleville, was the climaxing four star feature of the program and were heartily applauded.

Mr. Archie Leslie, vice-president of the Quinte Skating Club, acted as master-of-ceremonies for the evening's entertainment, while special mention must go to B. C. Sisler, Ken Smith, Gordon Davies, Mrs. Georgia Smtih, Miss Muriel Wardner and Miss Mary Forster for their untiring efforts to make the Carnival a success.

Toronto Woman Given Six-Month Term In Reformatory

Mrs. Anita Dillabaugh, attractive young Toronto matron was sentenced to six months in the Andrew Mercer Reformatory for Women, Toronto, in police court today by Magistrate Lloyd of Northbrook, upon recommendation of Magistrate E. J. Butler, at present confined to his home through illness.

The accused, who had pleaded guilty to obtaining money and goods on false pretences through the medium of worthless cheques when she appeared before Magistrate Butler previously, and had had her case enlarged on several occasions, was given the sentence on eight separate charges, all to run concurrently. The sentence will date back from her arraignment on January 22nd, 1940.

Previous to reading Magistrate Butler's recommendation for the sentence imposed, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, read the record of the accused woman, in which it was brought out that she had appeared on similar charges in Toronto on various occasions, also in Detroit.

"Magistrates apparently think alike", commented Magistrate Lloyd, after hearing the recommendation for sentence of six months in reformatory on each charge, "for that is exactly what I had in mind."

Mrs. Dillabaugh will leave for the reformatory in charge of Plain Clothesman Fred Isard, whose work was generally responsible for the apprehension of the accused woman.

After bucking the drifts with a Ford car during the last day or so with increasing difficulty he was forced to call upon the services of Old Dobbin, but even the old reliable horse found drifts several feet deep to be more than he could negotiate with the result that for the first time during Mr. Courtney's service as mail carrier certain pieces of His Majesty's mail did not go through.

Chicago Now Only Two Points Away From Leafs, Who Are Third

GOODMAN STARS

Dave Kerr Had Shutout Over Wings Until Last Minute of Play

New York, Feb. 16—(CP)—New York Rangers regained sole possession of first place in the National Hockey League standings last night, defeating Detroit Red Wings 3 to 1 to take a two-point lead over the idle Boston Bruins, with whom they previously had been tied.

Dave Kerr, the league's leading goalie, had a shut-out until a minute and thirty-four seconds from the end, when the Ranger defense, weakened by the absence of Muzz Patrick, who had a charley horse, committed its only error. It let Cecil Dillon in to knock home a short shot from a goalmouth scramble.

Seven thousand fans watched a dull game in which the Rangers had command from the start.

For Rangers Lynn Patrick, Neil Colville and Phil Watson shot goals past Claude Bourque, rushed here from the International-American League New Haven Eagles to replace the injured Tiny Thompson, Detroit's regular goalie. Bourque, property of Montreal Canadiens, didn't have a chance on any of the close-in shots.

Thompson hurt his hip against Boston Tuesday and it swelled badly during the night. The Rangers agreed to let Bourque play because Detroit's farm team, Indianapolis Capitals, also were playing tonight.

Montreal, Feb. 16 — (CP)—Chicago Black Hawks stretched their undefeated streak to six straight N.H.L. games last night, using the superlative net work of Rookie Paul Goodman to gain a 1-to-1 overtime draw with the rejuvenated Montreal Canadiens.

The draw was beneficial to each team, the Hawks using the point to pull only two points away from the third place Toronto Maple Leafs and the Habitants hoisting themselves to the same margin from the sixth place New York Americans.

Both goals came in the first period as the Flying Frenchmen fighting to climb from the N.H.L. cellar and into the sixth and last play-off spot, went into the lead in the fifteenth minute on a goal by Armand Mondou. The Hawks got it back a little later when Bill Carse stickhandled through the Montreal defense to snap the puck by Goalie Wilfie Cude.

Canadiens did not dress the veteran George Mantha for the contest, using the newly signed Gordie Poirier in his place between Hector (Toe) Blake and Tony Demers, another rookie. Poirier, an amateur star with St. Hyacinthe Gaulois of the Provincial League, was signed to a pro contract last night.

Mondou's goal broke a stretch of more than 135 minutes of shutout hockey on Goodman's part. The 31-year-old Chicago freshman entered the game with successive shutouts over Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers to his credit.

The Hawks had an edge in the first half of the opening period but for almost all the way after that in the regulation time the Habitants held the upper hand but were unable to beat Goodman. In the last minutes of the overtime the Chicago forces sprang to life suddenly and only great work by Cude prevented scores by Georges Allen and Phil Hergesheimer.

CHARLIE SANDS

Canadiens

By Central Press Canadian

Charlie Sands

Just before the present National league season got under way a deal was made between Canadiens and Boston Bruins that saw the former send Herbie Cain to Boston in a straight exchange for Charlie Sands, a trade made in an effort to strengthen right wing, the Montrealers considering themselves fairly well fixed along the other wing. So far the deal, on a goal-scoring basis has been a win for the Bruins, but most players with a team that juggles between first and second places in the standings look better, with the various advantages that are theirs, than players with cellar occupants, as Canadiens have been most of the season. For Sands it is his third N.H.L. team, the first being Toronto Maple Leafs, with whom he signed after a successful season with Fort William Seniors during 1931-32. The next year he spent mostly at Syracuse, with a few games with the Leafs, and 1933-34 saw him established as a regular. He was not a Leaf regular long, however, as he was sold to the Bruins and served there for five years, part of the time as right wing on what was for a couple of seasons the team's No. 1 line, the Getliffe-Cowley-Sands trio. Three winters ago he scored 16 goals, his high for a season. Totals thus far in his career: 71 goals, 49 assists and only 36 minutes in penalties. Born at Fort William, he'll be 29 next month.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Feb. 16 (AP)—Scooparade: Bad news for the Jocks!.. Clay Puett, whose automatic starting barrier has the Hialeah riders living on headache drops, has just signed to install 'em at the five major New York tracks....That five-second 50-yard dash Barney Ewell of Penn State in the Penn A.C. games, will never see the record book....Starter says Barney jumped the gun and won't certify the application for a record.

Tony Galento is off today on a refereeing tour, but he's wisely dodging the territory covered on last year's jaunt....A brother of Seabiscuit and a sister of War Admiral — Naval Reserve and Admiralette—are in training for the summer's big two-year-old stakes.... Withj the movie calony dough rolling in, Armstrong and Garcia figure to do a $10,000 business next Thursday night.

The University of Chattanooga was the school that bagged a football star by guaranteeing him a Sunday pulpit....And the man was Wilson Elliott....Jack Johnson, the old heavyweight, is going to Australia for a year to give exhibitions and work as a referee....Those close to the Giant front office say the club and Mel Ott will reach a compromise any day.

BEFRIENDED BY THE "BROWN BOMBER"

He has been called the "Brown Bomber," the "Destroying Angel" and the "Tan Terror", but to these two persons at least, Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, is a combination of knight in shining armor and Santa Claus. They are Mr. and Mrs. Wig Lerich, who lived in a shanty on the Spring Hill farm owned by Lerichs grandfather 100 years ago and which is now owned by Champion Louis. The so-called "Tan Terror" moved the Lerich family out of the shanty and into the big house on the farm and promsied that "we'll fix you up with everything else you need." All this was done in secret and is an interesting sidelight on an unsuspected side of the man who is popularly believed to have none of the milk of human kindness in his heart.

On Being Well Dressed

SHOW YOUR CUFFS

Are your jacket sleeves too long, or are your shirt cuffs too short? In any event, your shirt cuffs should ALWAYS show. No shirt is intended for warmth alone, but is definitely part of the entire clothing picture. Buy your shirts to cover your wrists, and then see that at least a half inch to an inch of cuff shows below coat sleeve. Don't look shirtless! The difference in appearance repays for the care.

BETS GOING DOWN ON BIMELECH

Colonel E. R. Bradley Owns Bimelech and Has Had Four Winners in Derby

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 16—(AP)—In almost any winter bookmaker's spot in the bluegrass the bets are going down on Bimelech. Colonel E. R. Bradley, four times winner of the Kentucky Derby, has the cold months favorite to win the May 4 running of the classic.

Colonel Matt Winn, major domo of the Churchill Downs "Bowl," said Bimelech was in the list of nominees which closed last night. He added that "every leading thoroughbred in Kentucky" has been entered.

Learning this, the Kentuckians who will bet on a Bradley entry, swamped the bookmakers.

Bimelech set up an impressive record during 1939 as a two-year-old, with six firsts in six starts.

BYRON NELSON IN 3-WAY TIE

Stripped Two Strokes Off Houston Course Par and Favored to Win

Houston, Tex., Feb. 16—(AP)—His western open golf crown exposed before one of the stoutest fields in the tournament's history, Byron Nelson went forth complacently today to defend it. The Reading, Pa., professional proved yesterday that he was unruffled.

In the pro-amateur competition, he stripped two strokes from a par made doubly elusive by cold north winds. The performance secured his position as favorite in the $5,000 tourney.

Nelson's 69 left him in a three-way tie for second place individual honors in the pro-amateur. Leland Gibson, Kansas City professional, cornered the first prize of $100 with 34-32-66.

With Nelson in second place were Ray Hill, Shreveport, La., and Jimmy McHale of Saranac Inn. N.Y.

Improved Hockey Features Games In Rural League

Tweed—Increasing crowds are attending the East Hastings Rural League games at Tweed Arena and they are being treated to an improved brand of hockey by the various teams with each succeeding appearance. Plainfield continues at the top of the league with a record of 3 wins and one draw in four games played.

In the opening contest Tweed bowed to Roslin by a score of 2 to 1. The struggle was as close as the score indicates with the winners putting the game in the bag in the final period. Mattis secured the first goal for Roslin in the opening period. Sinclair scored for Tweed to knot the count at one-all. The final and winning goal came from Vance's stick in the last period. The teams were:

Tweed—McIlroy, Woods, Emerson, Thompson, Cronk, Sinclair, Hayes, C. Tufts, D. Courneyea, Doran, Sherry.

Roslin—Bailey, Slingerland, Colden, H. Hart, D. Chisholm, J. Chisholm, W. Chumbly, J. Chumbly, H. Vance, Burleigh, C. Hart, Bellis.

Plainfield had things pretty much their own way in the second half of the twin-bill. Farnsworth did not have the necessary punch to hold the southerners in check and went down to a 5 to 2 defeat. Platt, centering Plainfield front line, once again monopolized the scoring with three goals. His teammate, G. Denyes, was close behind with a brace of tallies. H. Meraw and McCaw scored for Farnsworth.

Plainfield—Pennington, Parlson, Dunning, Platt, G. Denyes, D. Denyes, Harrison, C. Carleton, W. Carleton, Grey, Wooler.

Farnsworth — D. Palmateer, Jones, Gunning, McCaw, Meraw, Bateman, R. Palmateer, Lajoie, Don Palmateer, Courneyea.

Referee—R. Sayers.

The standing to date:

	G	W	L	T	P
Plainfield	4	3	0	1	7
Tweed	4	1	1	2	4
Roslin	4	1	2	1	3
Farnsworth	4	0	2	2	2

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was thinking to herself after supper, saying to pop, Willyum do you realize it's only a very few weeks before Mrs. Thurston Willows will arrive for dinner at this house and we haven't even given a thought to the menu, or rather personly I've given it many thoughts but they haven't arrived at any conclusion.

I'd say we ought to have something different, pop said, and ma said, That's a very good general suggestion, Willyum, but after all what could be different to a woman like Mrs. Thurston Willows who's had everything? I mean there can hardly be anything new under the sun to anybody that's been brought up with a silver spoon and the world at her feet, she said.

I admit a little ingenuity is required, pop said. Naturelly we can't afford any rare and exotic layout, and besides it would smack of pretention, he said, and ma said, Exactly, that's just a way I feel, I want something within the bounds of informality and yet distinctive, she said.

There's only one logical answer, liver and onions, pop said and ma said, Now Willyum of all the incredibly silly and utterly selfish suggestions.

Why so, for Peet sake? pop said. Mrs. Thurston Willows has proberly never had liver and onions in her life, or at least not for years. I'll bet she wouldn't even know what it was, he said, and ma said. No, and after one brief sniff I'm sure she wouldn't even wait to find out. There was an article in the Home and Table magazine a few issues ago called Different Dinners for Difficult Dinners. I'm going to see if it's still around, she said.

Wich she went to do and pop got in back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

It's practically do or else for the Flyers at the Hume Arena tonight. "We had the better of the play in Peterboro and had it not been for a poor skate sharpening job, we would have taken the Petes Wednesday night," bewailed Coach Holway yesterday as he told us of having to hold up the game while the Flyers' skates were all resharpened in Peterboro. "It was while the boys could hardly stand up, that the Petes rapped home four goals in the first period. After that we looked the better club, but we sure would have liked to grab first victory, as it gives an edge," added Toots as he predicted an Air Force win for tonight. Efforts to bolster the airmen's front line were in the making today and by nightfall we may find some reinforcements in the ranks of the Flyers and we don't mean reinforcements in a military sense. The Petes will be minus Jim Ellis, who was injured, while McLeod, who sustained an injured shoulder last week, will be back to team with Lemieux. The season's largest hockey crowd will be on hand tonight.

Commenting on the first game of the series, the Peterboro scribe says: "Bun Kingdon was brilliant to figure in on five goals, and his buddies on that line, Heal and Tompkins, also gave Goalie Gibson a hop-step-and-jump evening. The rest of the gang did pretty fair, too, but those delays seemed to throw 'em off stride the last half. The R.C.A.F.-ers kept battling to gradually whittle down the local lead, but their new men (Floyd, Lightfoot and Hebert) didn't look any better than the ones they replaced — McNab, McLeod and Deryer. Jim Ellis hurt his shoulder bodychecking in the first period and had to retire. He'll be out for some time, we fear. It was thought at first his collar-bone was fractured, but later learned that 'twas torn shoulder ligaments. Too bad, as Jim has been going swell on defense."

There is some comedy connected with an outside suggestion that Peterboro and Kingston might be linked up in senior baseball loop next summer. To that picture we might say — "you lads from the larger centres, don't kid yourselves." (No charge for free advertising.)

Bill Dennis and Fred Reid were named as coaches for the Belleville juvenile team of pucksters, which is being selected over the week end to play in the O.J.H. A. playdowns commencing soon. Incidentally the city juvenile championships will get under way next week, perhaps Monday, with the league-leading Maple Leafs meeting the Americans and the second placed Black Hawks clashing with the Canadiens. The ultimate winners of the semi-final play-offs will clash in the City League finals later next week. Incidentally the City Juvenile League has provided hockey and equipment for some 76 Belleville boys, many of whom will be Belleville's future puck stars.

Some persons may be surprised that Connie Mack outbid all other club officials for the services of Benny McCoy, made a free agent from the Tigers by Commissioner Landis, but Daniel M. Daniel of the New York World - Telegram calls attention to the fact that the Athletics' head man is far from being a tightwad in bidding for talent.

"Investigation proves that Connie long has been a leader in paying out for talent," points out Daniel. "Many years ago, when a $5,000 player was a rarity, Mack astonished baseball by paying $12,000 to Baltimore for Red Russell, then a pitcher. Russell failed with the A's. Years later, Mack gave $50,000 to Salt Lake for Paul Strand, who proved as ignominious a flop as baseball yet has seen.

"However, other Mackian purchases achieved amazing successes. The most notable is Bob Grove, whom Connie took from the Orioles for $105,000. Mack paid for Lefty with ten slow notes, extending over a period of as many years. Another notable Mackian purchase was Al Simmons, for whom Connie paid $45,000 to Milwaukee. In the case of Mickey Cochrane, for whom Mack paid $50,000 to Portland, Connie more than doubled his money. Mack gave $35,000 to Baltimore for George Earnshaw. He paid lesser sums to the Orioles for Joe Boley and Max Bishop. He shipped $25,000 to Portland for Rube Walberg and only last year paid $35,000 in cash for Bill Lillard, San Francisco shortstop."

Last night's "Winter Show," as sponsored by the Quinte Skating Club, was perhaps the most colorful ice event ever held in this city. No end of credit is due the members of the Quinte Skating Club, who laboured many long hours to assure last night's showed of the success it enjoyed. Naturally the feature was the skating of the Canadian doubles champions, Miss Shirley Halsted and Michael Kirby, but Belleville's own sons and daughters were equally as well received at every turn. Skaters like Mike Ridley, Judy Scott and Ardell Smith, as soloists, skated with expert precision and grace that marked the Quinte Skating Club as a worth-while organization that provides unparalleled exercise and recreation for our young folk. However, the feature that struck us after last night's performance was Miss Halsted's attention shown to the younger members of the Quinte Skating Club. For fully 30 minutes after the show was concluded Miss Halsted remained on the ice and tutored the local skaters to the best of a Canadian champion's ability. Incidentally, that is of which champions are composed and to add more principle to the favour of Miss Halsted, she skates as a feature at Lake Placid over the week-end.
